Ask Opinions on Radar

by TOM WELLMAN
The Arlington Heights Village Board, once again wrestling with the controversial and divisive issue of weather radar, is seeking expert help from public agencies and communities which now use radar.

Village Manager L.A. Hanson yesterday sent out the first of a series of questionnaires to radio and television stations, airports, military bases, and communities which use radar.

The questionnaires, to be returned to the village, cover the maintenance, installation and operation of the equipment. Under the category of "operation" of the equipment, questions concern the length of time needed to train personnel to use it, the capability of radar to differentiate between severe weather and tornadoes, and an overall evaluation of the usefulness of the equipment.

Five television stations using radar, the Arlington Heights Nike base, the chief meteorologist at O'Hare Airport, Trans-World Airways, and the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in Chicago will receive the form, with a cover letter.

The answers will be fed back to the village administration, which will funnel them to the full Village Board, rather than the three-man public safety committee.

Monday night five members of the board (trustees Dwight Walton and Charles Bennett were absent) agreed unanimously that the full board should consider specific questions about the installation of the equipment.

The motion to transfer authority came from trustee George Burlingame, chief radar proponent and head of the public safety committee.

Prior to that decision trustees Bennett and William Griffin, the other two members of the committee, had entered statements into the record in response to statements Burlingame had made earlier about the May committee meeting on radar.

At that meeting the committee recommended, 2 to 1, not to install the equipment. The full village board then recommended that the committee should try to gain answers to specific questions about usage.

Monday night, Bennett's statement outlined his reasons for requesting storage, rather than use, of the equipment. He stressed that he had had enough doubts in his mind to force him to vote for storage.

Griffin's report was stronger. He stated that, contrary to a report by Burlingame, the safety committee "gave careful deliberation to all of the evidence presented, whether by expert or interested citizen. The committee considered all evidence and all hearsay."

In responding to Burlingame's earlier charge that testimony from WBBM-TV's weatherman, Gerry Peterson, and United Airlines Gary Fichter had been "disregarded," Griffin retorted:

"The charge that the majority did not, or would not, consider the evidence that was presented is totally without foundation, cannot be substantiated and is unbelievably gross."

At the end of his statement, Griffin urged that the board, in view of lack of evidence, lack of investigation, lack of professional support and the presence of "recognizable expert opposition," move to dispose of the equipment.

At the start of the discussion Monday, Griffin began by withdrawing his request to sell the radar, stating that the committee was still considering installation.

Burlingame, however, then read a statement in which he charged Bennett and Griffin with entering "innuendoes and hearsay into the record."

He then moved that, "due to the strong opinions by members of the safety committee," the full board should consider the specific questions. The motion passed, as did formal approval of the questionnaires.

So, later this month the board will consider the information on the returned questionnaires. Bennett, Burlingame and Griffin will be joined by Burt Thompson, Frank Palmatier, Dwight Walton, and village president John Walsh.

The radar was purchased two months ago by the village. It was formerly used as standard equipment on United Airlines Viscounts to help detect weather turmoil, including thunderstorms and tornadoes.

Board members have been unable, in the past, to determine if the equipment would be valuable as a supplement to existing weather information in detecting approaching storms or if it would be unworkable, expensive to maintain, and unreliable as a weather tool in the community.

Russ Fire on Chinese

TOKYO — Soviet troops made two amphibious landings inside Red China on a river island in Heilongjiang Province yesterday and opened fire on Chinese soldiers and civilians before being driven back, the New China News Agency (NCNA) said.

NCNA said the troops were supported by a gunboat which opened fire on the Chinese and by "six sorties" of military planes which violated Chinese airspace and circled over the island but did not open fire.

In a Moscow dispatch, the Soviet News Agency Tass accused China of committing a new "armed provocation" along the river border. "As a result of the bandit attack of the armed Chinese on unarmed Soviet rivermen who were doing their duty, one of the rivermen was killed and three wounded," a Soviet note delivered to the Chinese embassy in Moscow said.

The new Russian action was in retaliation to the alleged incident.

Delay Surcharge Vote

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leaders told the Nixon administration yesterday they would not vote on extending the income tax surcharge until considering tax reform to go with it.

Despite the administration's pleas for speed to help combat inflation, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee, insisted they would take time to prepare the tax overhaul liberals have been demanding.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen said the Democrats' plan would delay a vote on extending the tax until late September at the earliest.

More Road Revenue

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie yesterday signed into law the proposed $2 billion highway bond issue, a 1½ cent increase in the gas tax, and varied increases in car and truck license fees.

Ogilvie said he expects the beginning of repairs to 5,000 miles of roads this year and the start of 2,000 miles of new freeways next year, if the Illinois Supreme Court upholds the bond authority. A court challenge is expected over the three-man highway trust authority to be named by the governor.

Families Evacuated

EAST ST. LOUIS — Some 200 families in St. Clair County have left their homes, flooded by heavy rains and the Mississippi River which continued to rise yesterday.

Most of those evacuated live near the Cahokia Mounds State Park. An estimated 1,500 houses and trailers in the area are said to be affected by the water, but many residents have refused to leave for fear of looting.

Proposal for Jobless

WASHINGTON — President Nixon proposed yesterday to extend unemployment insurance coverage to 4.8 million new workers, raise the general level of benefits and guarantee a longer period of benefit payments in the event of a recession.

Nixon gave the states, which determine their own benefit levels, two years to meet his goal of assuring that weekly jobless benefits amount to 50 per cent of a worker's lost wages, or said they would face federal action to enforce the standard.

Dist. 25 Stresses Psychology

by JOAN KLUSMANN
All Arlington Heights children in School Dist. 25 who have had obvious difficulties in adjusting to classroom life will be interviewed by school psychologists by September.

The district has retained two psychologists during the summer to catch up on the backlog of diagnostic and consultation work caused by increased school enrollments and recent legislation providing that all children, regardless of their handicaps, have the opportunity of a good common-school education.

In September the staff will be expanded and four psychologists, all with master's degrees in their field, will serve the district's 18 schools.

Library Levy Is 12.22 Cents

Arlington Heights Memorial Library trustees last night approved an amended statement of financial requirements at $721,050, which will set the tax levy 1970-71 at 12.22 cents per $100 valuation.

While the May referendum gave the library authority to raise the maximum tax rate to 20 cents per $11 valuation, the board said prior to the referendum that the amount would be applied gradually over several years.

A bond issue also approved in May will be used for additional book purchases. The statement, revised since the referendum, includes $170,000 for personnel salaries and $14,150 for books and library materials.

Also included is a charge of $450,000 for the new book processing center at the library. This expense is offset in the income account as other libraries will pay for services done by the center. Other income sources listed are fines and fees, $28,000; rentals and receipts, $5,000; partial proceeds of old library building, $7,100; and taxes, $230,950.

Revenue Problems Might Hurt Pool

Arlington Heights Park Director Thomas Thornton told park board members last night about a possible financial problem with Olympic Park pool.

Olympic pool is presently being constructed adjacent to Arlington High School. Construction and operating expenses for the facility will be shared jointly by the park district and High School Dist. 214.

Thornton said he had received a call from the park district's auditor yesterday afternoon, telling him that Dist. 214 can not pay for any of the construction or operating costs until the county treasurer's office reviews plans for the site.

The county approval may merely be formal reviewing of the plans, Thornton said. "It's just something for you to think about," the park director told the board members.

During other discussion, board member Roy Bressler said he received three nasty phone calls on Saturday morning about the change in registration for swimming lessons. The complaining citizens had not heard about the new procedure of registering for classes during the week.

The citizens had appeared Saturday morning to sign up their children for the second session of lessons and found the classes were closed.

Thornton said park officials had tried to inform residents about the change and he felt the change benefited more people than it hurt.

Previously, residents could register for swimming classes only on the Saturday before the week the session began. Earlier in the meeting, board members discussed a new group health insurance program for park district employees. The new program would offer additional benefits at a lower cost through the Illinois Assn. of Park Districts.

Board members also decided to adjourn last night's meeting until Monday night so they can take action on some short-term investments.

Track, Blacks Make Progress

by KATHIE BARNES
Negotiations between black leaders and Arlington Park Race Track officials made "surprisingly good progress" Tuesday, according to Charles Armstrong, one of the negotiators and editor of the South Suburban News.

The meeting was scheduled as a result of black demands concerning hiring practices at the track.

The demands were presented after a demonstration two weeks ago, sparked when the contracts of four black employees were terminated.

Armstrong was arrested during the demonstration on charges of disorderly conduct.

Attending the meeting were four representatives of black organizations, representatives of all the unions representing thoroughbred and harness racing, David Pearson, executive director of the Illinois Bureau of Racing Police, and Mrs. Marje Everett, president of the Chicago Thoroughbred Enterprises.

ARMSTRONG SAID, "We have reached an agreement with unions and management that they will proceed with deliberate speed in hiring black help."

He said the group would meet again in two weeks at the State of Illinois Building in Chicago.

Armstrong also announced, "I'm happy to say 19 black mutual clerks were hired over the weekend."

Those appointed to a committee to continue studying the problem at the track are Mrs. Everett, Pearson, Armstrong, Asby Smith, director of economic development of the Urban League; Leonard Joyce of the Conference of Religion and Race; Lewis Martin of the Chicago Defender; Jesse Taylor of Jobs Now; and three union leaders to be chosen at a later date.

The unions which are involved in the controversy are locals representing waiters, waitresses, bartenders, mutual clerks, parking attendants, and the staff of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

YOUNG GOLDEN EAGLE, painted by Palatine Township artist Richard Sloan, shows the detail in feathers and appearance the artist strives for. Sloan frequently visits museums to study the birds' physical characteristics before painting them.

Pick NROTC Head

A retired Navy captain has been chosen to head the Junior Naval ROTC program at Wheeling High School next year.

He is Capt. Adrian Lorentson of Northbrook, a 21-year veteran of the Navy.

The Department of the Navy will make the actual appointment but it is their custom to honor the recommendation of the local school.

Lorentson was selected by Wheeling Principal Tom Shirley, who is himself a naval reserve commander.

Lorentson was quizzed by school board members Monday before they recommended the appointment.

"Do you think the NROTC program is likely to be phased out if money gets short?" There has been a lot of college outcry against these military programs. Personally, I deplore it — but do you think the Navy will yield to this?" Richard Bachhuber, a board member from Mount Prospect asked.

"This is an expanding program right now," Lorentson answered. "I wouldn't be interested in it if I thought it would be phased out."

Lorentson conceded that there is "some anti-military feeling throughout the country."

Asked if he thought Wheeling could sustain the 100-or-more enrollment needed for an NROTC high school unit, Lorentson said he was confident it could.

"In other schools, the administration tries to sell the program. I see nothing wrong with that," Lorentson added.

Supt. Edward H. Gilbert differed. "If you mean by selling that we will let all the students know of the program and its purposes, I would agree. If you say that we'd deliberately call them in one by one and counsel them into it, that's something we don't do," he said.

Gilbert said since Wheeling will have the only Dist. 214 NROTC unit, students from other schools who wish to enroll can do so by transferring there.

Lorentson, who has been employed by a Chicago bank since retiring from active duty two years ago, will also teach economics at Wheeling.

He taught in a college NROTC unit and served as deputy chief of staff at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station at the time when the Junior NROTC program was first launched.

1st Endorsement Tonight

by ED MURNANE

Republican candidates for the 13th Congressional District seat vacated by Donald Rumsfeld will be able to start measuring their strength tonight as the first of eight township endorsements is made.

New Trier Township, which has six of its own sons chasing after the nomination, will be the first to voice its preference.

The New Trier Township Republican Organization will meet in Winnetka at 8 p.m. to select its choice. The endorsement will be based on last week's candidates' night, at which 11 of the 12 GOP hopefuls presented their case.

The only Republican who did not speak in New Trier last week was the last candidate to announce, Lar "America First" Daly, mayor of Winnetka, and numerous other statewide offices, had not indicated he would be a candidate until Monday afternoon when he filed nominating petitions compassion is stronger than criticism, that kindness is more an attribute of man than hostility.

"What a new superintendent needs more than anything else is a Bob Lidge, or a Gene Artemenko, or a J. Ward Morrison, or a Jack Pahl — someone with a big hand and a big heart to say, 'What can I do to help?' He must also have a strong, unified board of education."

"As you continue to build and prosper, as you continue to develop educational programs for all children, may you always continue to support your schools, may you always have the courage to say, 'What can I do to help?'" Thomas said.

"AS I BEGIN my new duties in Amsterdam, New York, I shall always appreciate the excellence of Dist. 59," he said.

Thomas has accepted a position as superintendent in New York State beginning Aug. 1.

Thomas: Farewell

This area has some of the finest school districts in the nation. The teachers are among the most dedicated," Dr. Donald Thomas, former superintendent, said in his farewell letter to Dist. 59.

In the fall of 1959 when we moved to our new home in Arlington Heights our neighbor, Bob Lidge, came over and asked, 'What can I do to help?'" Thomas said.

In those ten years the words Bob spoke have continued to be the kindest words that anyone can speak. These were the same words I heard so often at Prospect High School, at Elk Grove High School, and in Dist. 59. Every time there is a need, there are people who will ask, 'What can I do to help?'" he said.

"AS DIST. 59 appoints a new superintendent, I hope that many of you will be as kind to him as you have been to me. I hope that you will always remember that

by MARTHA KOPER

Even the suburbs so close to the big city have some wide open spaces for people looking for the quiet and solitude of nature.

In Palatine Township, Richard Sloan has found a few peaceful spots, but he's keeping their locations secret. That's because he goes there to watch — to watch nature, the animals and, most importantly, to watch the birds.

He's learned to be an accurate observer of birds in order to paint them. Listed among the top wildlife artists of today, Sloan spends his days and nights learning about birds so others might see what he sees in them.

Although he knew he wanted to be an artist when he was just 15, it took a little longer to realize his latent interest in wildlife.

"GROWING UP in the sterile city of Chicago with a family who cared and knew nothing about nature, my love of the outdoors still amazes me a little," he smiled.

At 15, he was the youngest student at the American Academy of Art, where his destiny was determined. It came from a fellow art student from Michigan with a strong interest in wildlife.

"After a few trips to Michigan to hunt or just walk with him, I decided I wanted to paint wildlife all the time."

"It's kind of funny, because my friend is the director of art for General Motors now."

Sloan was hooked, though, and after graduation began looking for ways to make his dreams come true. To begin with, he had to find a market for wildlife artistry and that wasn't easy.

Unlike most creative careers, a wildlife artist dwells on accuracy. He tries to capture what is there for everyone to see.

BEFORE SLOAN picks up his paint brush, he must do a lot of watching and reading. He goes to a place where he knows he'll find a certain bird and begins sketching. Then, he reads about the bird and watches again making sure to keep notes which will help him recall color and natural surroundings. He takes a camera too.

His preliminary work usually also includes a trip to the museum for a close look at the skin and feathers of a bird he's ready to paint.

"The most important thing about my painting is accuracy," he said.

"It's also very important to me to be able to inject a breath of life into the bird. That can only be done after observing the bird for a long time."

"Then, I find myself crawling inside its head to find out how it lives and survives."

That technique and his love of nature probably account for his passion for conservation. He's worried about what man is doing to nature's habitats.

"PAINTING BIRDS makes me happy, but if at the same time, I can make people a little more aware of what we stand to lose by our carelessness, I'll be even happier," he said.

"What gives us the right to exterminate a species which was here long before us?"

In the suburbs, Sloan believes it's just a matter of time before his nature spots are gone. Within walking distance of his home at 2283 Sunset Drive, there's a quiet place with ponds and trees, but "I expect to see a steam shovel in there any day now," he said.

With an ultimate desire of living in the northwest part of the country, Sloan hopes there will be some places left for animals and birds to survive.

To his delight, the market for wildlife artistry has steadily grown since 15 years ago when he first decided to try his hand in the art.

"At the time, everyone told me I could never make a living by only painting wildlife and I had a long procession of studio jobs where I had to paint everything," he said.

NOW, IN HIS early 30s, he's booked up with commissions to paint birds until 1973. To add to his success, his paintings are becoming known all over the country. Just last week, he received word that a Sloan bluebird will hang in the permanent collection at the Smithsonian Institute.

He's about to finish a series of 10 paintings showing the life cycle of the purple martin which will go into a traveling exhibit. For the paintings, he even spent last winter in South America to see the bird in every natural habitat.

Asked to paint the purple martin by the Griggsville Wild Bird Society, Sloan has agreed to donating proceeds from the exhibit for conservation.

A lot has happened to Sloan since he was almost ready to give up wildlife painting a few years ago. Since that time, there's been one achievement after another.

Grid Fans Get 900 Seats

Arlington High School's grid fans will get some relief this fall from the standing-room-only conditions they usually must endure to cheer on the Cardinals.

Over the strong objections of board member Richard Bachhuber, the High School Dist. 214 School Board voted Monday night to add 900-plus seats to the 2,500-seat capacity of the Arlington High field.

The board's action may set a precedent for approving similar requests expected to be made by Prospect and Wheeling High Schools. The school board knocked down automatic approval of the two schools' bleacher additions at last week's budget meeting.

ARLINGTON'S SEATS were approved Monday after board Pres. Arthur Aronson called them "a long-term investment" and Mrs. Leah Cummins said this year's decision to add lights to all the other football fields was "a mandate from the people."

Bachhuber called for withholding the money as an economy measure while the board's bleacher backers said the purchase would encourage greater community use of the schools.

"It will take more than two years before we begin to get any return for our money," argued Bachhuber. "And you'd make as much money on a standing crowd."

"How can we look unfavorably on any buildup of our facilities as long as there's any return at all?" asked board member Ray Erickson, a former Arlington Teacher-Parent Council president.

BACHHUBER AND Richard Stamm voted against the 4-2 decision to spend the $11,750, up about a dollar a seat from similar bids taken last year.

Erickson, Aronson, Jack Costello and Mrs. Cummins supported the purchase.

Stamm, a persistent advocate of the private financing approach, suggested that each school's fans form a nonprofit corporation to finance the seating.

Backing up the request by Arlington High School principal Bruno Waara was William Heffernan of 66 S. Burton, president of the Arlington Boosters Club.

"We're just playing 'catch up' in getting these seats," Heffernan asserted, noting that Arlington drew standing room crowds estimated at 500 or more to home games all year.

"I wouldn't mind if we used this every week. But we'll use these seats four or five times a year and the rest of the 365 days they'll just be weathering," Bachhuber retorted. "I'm not sure this is the best thing we can do for the money."

COSTELLO, FORMER Prospect Boosters Club president, served notice in voting for the Arlington bleachers that he expects the school district to give similar consideration when Prospect seeks bleacher seats, too.

Prospect soon will make the request, athletic director George Gattas told the school board Monday.

Arlington has long played its home grid games under lights and drawn larger crowds than the other Dist. 214 schools.

Prospect and Wheeling played home games at night this year for the first time under lights financed through their Boosters Club nonprofit corporations, and experienced a similar increase in crowds.

School Psychology Expanded

improvement. After conferences with teacher and student, the staff may test for intelligence, central nervous system development and emotional or physical problems.

While the district may eliminate this fall the standard I.Q. tests now given in some grades to all children, a psychology staff member for the last four years, Jack Curtis, says they are a useful diagnostic tool for children with special problems.

Curtis stresses that children are placed in existing district programs wherever possible. These include classes for the gifted and mentally handicapped, as well as those with learning disabilities and emotional problems.

A handful of children accelerate and skip a year between kindergarten and fifth grade and about 5 per cent are kept at their present grade level for additional time. Detention is rare in junior high schools where major emphasis falls on individual instruction to the student while allowing him to remain with students his age.

"A CHILD seldom works below grade level across-the-board. He can attend the regular classes which he can keep up with," Curtis said.

Other students are referred to special tutors, the Northwest Mental Health Clinic or to Clearbrook Center for the Retarded.

The Diagnostic Learning Center, originally set up in 1966 with federal funds applied for by School Dist. 25, served over 100 area children last year. Described by its staff as "a last-ditch effort" for school districts, the center assists high school students on the brink of becoming dropouts and younger pupils not eligible for existing special education classes.

John Wightman, director of the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization, said the center will continue its diagnostic and treatment work next year and perhaps do new work in other areas of special education.

LAST WINTER THE district tested 135 students in an attempt to determine how many additional pupils would be covered under the new Illinois legislation which went into effect July 1.

Of this number, 60 were classified as having emotional problems. Thirty possessed learning disabilities and had poor visual or auditory perception, short memory, difficulty in expressing ideas or a combination of symptoms. Most of the remaining 95 did not qualify for special education services. Last year the district provided these services for 1,054 students, including children who need assistance with speech difficulties.

The district also employs a part-time psychiatrist who consults with teachers once a week. Behavior problems are discussed and potential danger signals explained.

Curtis said it is more difficult for schools to pinpoint problems early in the passive child. He may be quiet and obedient, leading teachers to believe he is adjusted. His hostile and aggressive counterpart demands and receives prompt attention.

CURTIS POINTED out that the role of the psychologist within the school system is shifting. While the bulk of the work is still with children with special problems, the psychologist also acts as a consultant to all phases of education.

Curtis has assisted in the planning of two multi-age classes planned for Olive School in September. The pilot programs for different aged children are designed to help the teacher work with each student individually and to encourage students to teach one another.

In the discussion stage is a program to determine just how the "learning to read" process takes place in children. About 20 per cent of all first graders have reading difficulties and successful research in the area could help the "average" child, as well as those with special learning problems.

Schlickman Goes To Washington

Congressional hopeful Eugene Schlickman, Arlington Heights, left for Washington, D.C. this morning and a two-day briefing on national problems ranging from the ABM controversy to the Vietnam war.

He will meet today with Senators Dirksen and Percy, being briefed on the ABM question by an Army Colonel in Percy's office.

He also will meet with officials of the Dept. of Transportation which fund transportation centers like those being sought by Palatine and Arlington Heights. He will have lunch with Thomas Houser, former Wheeling Township GOP committeeman who now is second in command in the Peace Corps.

GOP organization executives will then make a recommendation to the precinct captains and the endorsement will follow. Cowen predicted that the Wheeling endorsement would be made within two weeks of the July 24 candidates' night.

13th Endorsement Set

by ED MURNANE

Republican candidates for the 13th Congressional District seat vacated by Donald Rumsfeld will be able to start measuring their strength tonight as the first of eight township endorsements is made.

New Trier Township, which has six of its own sons chasing after the nomination, will be the first to voice its preference.

The New Trier Township Republican organization will meet in Winnetka at 8 p.m.

to select its choice. The endorsement will be based on last week's candidates' night, at which 11 of the 12 GOP hopefuls presented their case.

The only Republican who did not speak in New Trier last week was the last candidate to announce, Lar "America First" Daly. Daly, perennial candidate for President, mayor of Chicago, and numerous other statewide offices, had not indicated he would be a candidate until Monday afternoon when he filed nominating petitions shortly before the 5 p.m. deadline in the secretary of state's office.

DALY LIVES in Chicago, not in the 13th District. A congressman, however, needs only to live in the state he represents, not in the district.

Tonight's endorsement may be the first step in thinning out the long list of GOP candidates.

With only one of the six New Trier township candidates getting the endorsement, there is the possibility that some of those who do not get it will withdraw from the race. This is the last week for candidates to withdraw.

The six New Trier Township candidates are State Rep. Alan R. Johnston of Kenilworth, Brian B. Duff of Wilmette, Gerald M. Marks of Wilmette, Philip M. Crane of Winnetka, Yale Roe of Winnetka and Joseph D. Mathewson of Winnetka.

Johnston and Duff are considered the front-runners in New Trier by sources close to the organization.

The other six candidates are John J. Nimrod of Skokie (Northfield Township), State Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman of Arlington Heights (Wheeling Township), Samuel H. Young of Glenview (Northfield Township), Alban Weber of Evanston (Evanston Township), David A. Roe of Glenview (Northfield Township) and Daly.

SCHLICKMAN is the only candidate from the western four townships of the district (the Northwest suburbs). The 13th District includes New Trier, Evanston, Northfield and Niles townships on the east and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg townships on the west.

The four western townships can be expected to make their endorsements sometime around the end of this month or during the first week of August.

Candidates' nights are scheduled for Wheeling and Palatine townships later this month, and endorsements will be made on the basis of the candidates' performance. Palatine GOP Committeeman Walter A. Schaw said a candidates' night is scheduled for Thursday, July 17, for his organization's precinct captains and workers and other active party members. An endorsement meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, July 22.

In Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen said candidates will appear at a July 24 candidates' night. GOP organization executives will then make a recommendation to the precinct captains and the endorsement will follow. Cowen predicted that the Wheeling endorsement would be made within two weeks of the July 24 candidates' night.

IN SCHAUMBURG Township, GOP Committeeman Donald L. Totten said his organization is interviewing candidates on an individual basis and the final session is scheduled for July 21. Totten said the endorsement probably would be made within two weeks, around Aug. 1.

Elk Grove Republicans have not yet decided on the endorsement procedure, according to GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen. He said a meeting would be held soon to determine what policy would be followed and endorsement would be made probably sometime in August.

Endorsements by township political organizations are important to the candidates because they commit the local organization's workers to the candidate.

The 13th District primary is scheduled for Oct. 7, with the election to follow on Nov. 25.

Only one Democrat, Edward Warman of Skokie, will appear on the ballot Oct. 7.

Russ Fire on Chinese

TOKYO — Soviet troops made two amphibious landings inside Red China on a river island in Heilongjiang Province yesterday and opened fire on Chinese soldiers and civilians before being driven back, the New China News Agency (NCNA) said.

NCNA said the troops were supported by a gunboat which opened fire on the Chinese and by "six sorties" of military planes which violated Chinese airspace and circled over the island but did not open fire.

In a Moscow dispatch, the Soviet News Agency Tass accused China of committing a new "armed provocation" along the river border. "As a result of the bandit attack of the armed Chinese on unarmed Soviet rivermen who were doing their duty, one of the rivermen was killed and three wounded," a Soviet note delivered to the Chinese embassy in Moscow said.

The new Russian action was in retaliation to the alleged incident.

Delay Surcharge Vote

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leaders told the Nixon administration yesterday they would not vote on extending the income tax surcharge until considering tax reform to go with it.

Despite the administration's pleas for speed to help combat inflation, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee, insisted they would take time to prepare the tax overhaul liberals have been demanding.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen said the Democrats' plan would delay a vote on extending the tax until late September at the earliest.

More Road Revenue

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie yesterday signed into law the proposed $2 billion highway bond issue, a 1½ cent increase in the gas tax, and varied increases in car and truck license fees.

Ogilvie said he expects the beginning of repairs to 5,000 miles of roads this year and the start of 2,000 miles of new freeways next year. If the Illinois Supreme Court upholds the bond authority, a court challenge is expected over the three-man highway trust authority to be named by the governor.

Families Evacuated

EAST ST. LOUIS — Some 200 families in St. Clair County have left their homes, flooded by heavy rains and the Mississippi River which continued to rise yesterday.

Most of those evacuated live near the Cahokia Mounds State Park. An estimated 1,500 houses and trailers in the area are said to be affected by the water, but many residents have refused to leave for fear of looting.

Proposal for Jobless

WASHINGTON — President Nixon proposed yesterday to extend unemployment insurance coverage to 4.8 million new workers, raise the general level of benefits and guarantee a longer period of benefit payments in the event of a recession.

Nixon gave the states, which determine their own benefit levels, two years to meet his goal of assuring that weekly jobless benefits amount to 50 per cent of a worker's lost wages, or said they would face federal action to enforce the standard.

Youth Commission Tells Goals

Under the leadership of recently elected chairman Jack Costello, the Mount Prospect Youth Commission Monday outlined its plans for the next year.

Several new committees were formed and plans for committee chairmen to make an interim report in two weeks were announced.

Costello said he felt the need for the three standing committees now in existence had waned and suggested they be dissolved.

Members of the commission agreed and proposed a committee structure which would consist of special committees formed to perform an express function and dissolve when the project is completed.

COSTELLO SAID the areas in which he is specifically interested are drug abuse, juvenile court, interpretation of the police report, the new free school in Mount Prospect, St. Mark's youth center and a summer dance project for young people.

"We would welcome suggestions from young people and adults of the community concerning what they would like to see the Youth Commission do. There are many things we can accomplish which would be interesting and challenging," Costello added.

Several other suggestions for action in the next year were considered by the commission, including a suggestion by Ty Clements that they consider obtaining information from an Evanston group studying drug abuse.

Costello asked Clements to report to the commission on the information he obtains at these meetings.

IT WAS ALSO announced that the Cook County school superintendent's office is currently researching the possibility of formulating its own drug abuse program to be used in all areas from the elementary schools through adult education.

"Although the drug abuse problem is first on my list of areas we should study," Costello said, "I don't want to over-emphasize the problem. I would like to coordinate the effort to give the community information on the subject."

A letter was read from Mount Prospect youth counselor John Strong in appreciation of Acting Village Pres. John Zimmerman for finding him office space in which to perform his counseling work.

The counseling center will be at Village Well 5 at the corner of Emerson and Highland, near the American Legion Post.

Warns of Nixon's Safety

"President Nixon's safety will be threatened" during his upcoming trip to Rumania, the Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom warned yesterday.

Lindstrom said the source of his information "was the Rumanian underground."

He said he received information about the threats both from the American government and directly from the Rumanian underground.

Lindstrom charged that a Maoist element in Rumania is the group posing the threat. He explained it this way: "We know that one item of key importance on Nixon's itinerary (while he is in Rumania) is to have secret talks on Vietnam. There is a Maoist element in Rumania opposed to these negotiations."

LINDSTROM, WHO lives in Prospect Heights, is the national chairman of the "Remember the Pueblo Committee." He is pastor of the Church of Christian Liberty and headmaster of Christian Liberty Academy.

Lindstrom flew to Washington D. C. last night to protest Nixon's planned Rumanian trip. He plans the protest today on the steps of the U.S. Capitol.

Lindstrom said the protest was to consist of three parts: A written protest statement, the release of information pertaining to Nixon's trip, and a request for a meeting with Secretary of State William Rogers.

Lindstrom said the protest is not under the sponsorship of the Pueblo Committee. However, the three to five people who were to accompany him to Washington all are members of that committee.

A DEMONSTRATION involving several thousand people is planned in two weeks he said.

Lindstrom said he opposes Nixon's trip because "it is un-Christian to join hands with Rumania, who has joined hands with the Viet Cong." He said Rumania was the first country to officially recognize the Viet Cong regime.

Lindstrom also told the Herald yesterday that "within several days" he would be releasing further information on the concessions alleged to have been granted to Cuba by the United States in order to procure the release of the Pueblo crewmen.

Transformer Fire At Bruning Plant

An overloaded circuit caused a fire in the transformer vault room at the Bruning Co. on Central Road in Mount Prospect yesterday morning according to a spokesman for the fire department.

Bruning closed the manufacturing division and released one-third of factory employees for the day since a resulting power failure temporarily disabled the plant.

There were no injuries. Property damage has not yet been estimated.

strom charged the U.S. had made concessions to Cuba in return for the men's release. However, he would not elaborate at that time on what the concessions were.

His Brush Guided by Nature

by MARTHA KOPER

Even the suburbs so close to the big city have some wide open spaces for people looking for the quiet and solitude of nature.

In Palatine Township, Richard Sloan has found a few peaceful spots, but he's keeping their locations secret. That's because he goes there to watch — to watch nature, the animals and, most importantly, to watch the birds.

He's learned to be an accurate observer of birds in order to paint them. Listed among the top wildlife artists of today, Sloan spends his days and nights learning about birds so others might see what he sees in them.

Although he knew he wanted to be an artist when he was just 15, it took a little longer to realize his latent interest in wildlife.

"GROWING UP in the sterile city of Chicago with a family who cared and knew nothing about nature, my love of the outdoors still amazes me a little," he smiled.

At 15, he was the youngest student at the American Academy of Art, where his destiny was determined. It came from a fellow art student from Michigan with a strong interest in wildlife.

"After a few trips to Michigan to hunt or just walk with him, I decided I wanted to paint wildlife all the time.

"It's kind of funny, because my friend is the director of art for General Motors now."

Sloan was hooked, though, and after graduation began looking for ways to make his dreams come true. To begin with, he had to find a market for wildlife artistry and that wasn't easy.

Unlike most creative careers, a wildlife artist dwells on accuracy. He tries to capture what is there for everyone to see.

BEFORE SLOAN picks up his paint brush, he must do a lot of watching and reading. He goes to a place where he knows he'll find a certain bird and begins sketching. Then, he reads about the bird and watches again making sure to keep notes which will help him recall color and natural surroundings. He takes a camera too.

His preliminary work usually also includes a trip to the museum for a close look at the skin and feathers of a bird he's ready to paint.

"The most important thing about my painting is accuracy," he said.

"It's also very important to me to be able to inject a breath of life into the bird. That can only be done after observing the bird for a long time.

"Then, I find myself crawling inside its head to find out how it lives and survives."

That technique and his love of nature probably account for his passion for conservation. He's worried about what man is doing to nature's habitats.

"PAINTING BIRDS makes me happy, but if at the same time, I can make people a little more aware of what we stand to lose by our carelessness, I'll be even happier," he said.

"What gives us the right to exterminate a species which was here long before us?"

In the suburbs, Sloan believes it's just a matter of time before his nature spots are gone. Within walking distance of his home at 2283 Sunset Drive, there's a quiet place with ponds and trees, but "I expect to see a steam shovel in there any day now," he said.

With an ultimate desire of living in the northwest part of the country, Sloan hopes there will be some places left for animals and birds to survive.

To his delight, the market for wildlife artistry has steadily grown since 15 years ago when he first decided to try his hand in the art.

"At the time, everyone told me I could never make a living by only painting wildlife and I had a long procession of studio jobs where I had to paint everything," he said.

NOW, IN HIS early 30s, he's booked up with commissions to paint birds until 1973. To add to his success, his paintings are becoming known all over the country. Just last week, he received word that a Sloan bluebird will hang in the permanent collection at the Smithsonian Institute.

He's about to finish a series of 10 paintings showing the life cycle of the purple martin which will go into a traveling exhibit. For the paintings, he even spent last winter in South America to see the bird in every natural habitat.

Asked to paint the purple martin by the Griggsville Wild Bird Society, Sloan has agreed to donating proceeds from the exhibit for conservation.

A lot has happened to Sloan since he was almost ready to give up wildlife painting a few years ago. Since that time, there's been one achievement after another.

To Ask Opinions on Radar

by TOM WELLMAN

The Arlington Heights Village Board, once again wrestling with the controversial and divisive issue of weather radar, is seeking expert help from public agencies and communities which now use radar.

Village Manager L.A. Hanson yesterday sent out the first of a series of questionnaires to radio and television stations, airports, military bases, and communities which use radar.

The questionnaires, to be returned to the village, cover the maintenance, installation and operation of the equipment.

Under the category of "operation" of the equipment, questions concern the length of time needed to train personnel to use it, the capability of radar to differentiate between severe weather and tornadoes, and an overall evaluation of the usefulness of the equipment.

Five television stations using radar, the Arlington Heights Nike base, the chief meteorologist at O'Hare Airport, Trans-World Airways, and the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in Chicago will receive the form, with a cover letter.

The answers will be fed back to the village administration, which will funnel them to the full Village Board, rather than the three-man public safety committee.

Monday night five members of the board (trustees Dwight Walton and Charles Bennett were absent) agreed unanimously that the full board should consider specific questions about the installation of the equipment.

The motion to transfer authority came from trustee George Burlingame, chief radar proponent and head of the public safety committee.

Prior to that decision trustees Bennett and William Griffin, the other two members of the committee, had entered statements into the record in response to statements Burlingame had made earlier about the May committee meeting on radar.

At that meeting the committee recommended, 2 to 1, not to install the equipment. The full village board then recommended that the committee should try to gain answers to specific questions about usage.

Monday night, Bennett's statement outlined his reasons for requesting storage, rather than use, of the equipment. He stressed that he had enough doubts in his mind to force him to vote for storage.

Griffin's report was stronger. He stated that, contrary to a report by Burlingame, the safety committee "gave careful deliberation to all of the evidence presented, whether by expert or interested citizen. The committee considered all evidence and all hearsay."

In responding to Burlingame's earlier charge that testimony from WBBM-TV's weatherman, Gerry Peterson, and United Airlines Gary Fichter had been "disregarded," Griffin retorted:

"The charge that the majority did not, or would not, consider the evidence that was presented is totally without foundation, cannot be substantiated and is unbelievably gross."

At the end of his statement, Griffin urged that the board, in view of lack of evidence, lack of investigation, lack of professional support and the presence of "recognizable expert opposition," move to dispose of the equipment.

At the start of the discussion Monday, Griffin began by withdrawing his request to sell the radar, stating that the committee was still considering installation.

Burlingame, however, then read a statement in which he charged Bennett and Griffin with entering "innuendoes and hearsay into the record."

He then moved that, "due to the strong opinions by members of the safety committee," the full board should consider the specific questions. The motion passed, as did formal approval of the questionnaires.

So, later this month the board will consider the information on the returned questionnaires. Bennett, Burlingame and Griffin will be joined by Burt Thompson, Frank Palmatier, Dwight Walton, and village president John Walsh.

The radar was purchased two months ago by the village. It was formerly used as standard equipment on United Airlines Viscounts to help detect weather turmoil, including thunderstorms and tornadoes.

Board members have been unable, in the past, to determine if the equipment would be valuable as a supplement to existing weather information in detecting approaching storms or if it would be unworkable, expensive to maintain, and unreliable as a weather tool in the community.

Grid Fans Get 900 Seats

Arlington High School's grid fans will get some relief this fall from the standing-room-only conditions they usually must endure to cheer on the Cardinals.

Over the strong objections of board member Richard Bachhuber, the High School Dist. 214 School Board voted Monday night to add 900-plus seats to the 2,500-seat capacity of the Arlington High field.

The board's action may set a precedent for approving similar requests expected to be made by Prospect and Wheeling High Schools. The school board knocked down automatic approval of the two schools' bleacher additions at last week's budget meeting.

ARLINGTON'S SEATS were approved Monday after board Pres. Arthur Aronson called them "a long-term investment" and Mrs. Leah Cummins said this year's decision to add lights to all the other football fields was "a mandate from the people."

Bachhuber called for withholding the money as an economy measure while the board's bleacher backers said the purchase would encourage greater community use of the schools.

"It will take more than two years before we begin to get any return for our money," argued Bachhuber. "And you'd make us much money on a standing crowd."

"How can we look unfavorably on any buildup of our facilities as long as there's any return at all?" asked board member Ray Erickson, a former Arlington Teacher-Parent Council president.

BACHHUBER and Richard Stamm voted against the 4-2 decision to spend the $11,750, up about a dollar a seat from similar bids taken last year.

Erickson, Aronson, Jack Costello and Mrs. Cummins supported the purchase.

Stamm, a persistent advocate of the private financing approach, suggested that each school's fans form a nonprofit corporation to finance the seating.

Backing up the request by Arlington High School principal Bruno Waara was William Heffernan of 66 S. Burton, president of the Arlington Boosters Club.

"We're just playing 'catch up' in getting these seats," Heffernan asserted, noting that Arlington drew standing room crowds estimated at 500 or more to home games all year.

"I wouldn't mind if we used this every week. But we'll use these seats four or five times a year and the rest of the 365 days they'll just be weathering," Bachhuber retorted. "I'm not sure this is the best thing we can do for the money."

COSTELLO, FORMER Prospect Boosters Club president, served notice in voting for the Arlington bleachers that he expects the school district to give similar consideration when Prospect seeks bleacher seats, too.

Prospect soon will make the request, athletic director George Gattas told the school board Monday.

Arlington has long played its home grid games under lights and drawn larger crowds than the other Dist. 214 schools.

Prospect and Wheeling played home games at night this year for the first time under lights financed through their Booster Club nonprofit corporations, and experienced a similar increase in crowds.

Thomas: Farewell

This area has some of the finest school districts in the nation. The teachers are among the most dedicated," Dr. Donald Thomas, former superintendent, said in his farewell letter to Dist. 39.

In the fall of 1959 when we moved to our new home in Arlington Heights our neighbor Bob Lidge, came over and asked, 'What can I do to help?' " Thomas said.

In those ten years the words Bob spoke have continued to be the kindest words that anyone can speak. These were the same words I heard so often at Prospect High School at Elk Grove High School, and in Dist. 39. Every time there is a need, there are people who will ask, 'What can I do to help?' " he said.

"AS DIST. 39 appoints a new superintendent, I hope that many of you will be as kind to him as you have been to me. I hope that you will always remember that compassion is stronger than criticism, that kindness is more an attribute of man than hostility.

"What a new superintendent needs more than anything else is a Bob Lidge, or a Gene Artemenko, or a J. Ward Morrison, or a Jack Pahl — someone with a big hand and a big heart to say, 'What can I do to help?' He must also have a strong, unified board of education.

"As you continue to build and prosper, as you continue to develop educational programs for all children, may you always continue to support your schools, may you always have the courage to say, 'What can I do to help?' " Thomas said.

Thomas has accepted a position as superintendent in New York State beginning Aug. 1.

Progress at Track

by KATHIE BAINES

Negotiations between black leaders and Arlington Park Race Track officials made "surprisingly good progress" Tuesday, according to Charles Armstrong, one of the negotiators and editor of the South Suburban News.

The meeting was scheduled as a result of black demands concerning hiring practices at the track.

The demands were presented after a demonstration two weeks ago, sparked when the contracts of four black employees were terminated.

Armstrong was arrested during the demonstration on charges of disorderly conduct.

Attending the meeting were four representatives of black organizations, representatives of all the unions representing thoroughbred and harness racing, David Pearson, executive director of the Illinois Bureau of Racing Police, and Mrs. Marie Everett, president of the Chicago Thoroughbred Enterprises.

ARMSTRONG SAID, "We have reached an agreement with unions and management that they will proceed with deliberate speed in hiring black help."

He said the group would meet again in two weeks at the State of Illinois Building in Chicago.

Armstrong also announced, "I'm happy to say 19 black mutual clerks were hired over the weekend."

Those appointed to a committee to continue studying the problem at the track are Mrs. Everett, Pearson, Armstrong, Asby Smith, director of economic development of the Urban League; Leonard Joyce of the Conference of Religion and Race; Lewis Martin of the Chicago Defender; Jesse Taylor of Jobs Now; and three union leaders to be chosen at a later date.

The unions which are involved in the controversy are locals representing waiters, waitresses, bartenders, mutual clerks, parking attendants, and the staff of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Schlickman Goes To Washington

Congressional hopeful Eugene Schlickman, Arlington Heights, left for Washington, D.C. this morning and a two-day briefing on national problems ranging from the ABM controversy to the Vietnam war.

He will meet today with Senators Dirksen and Percy, being briefed on the ABM question by an Army Colonel in Percy's office.

He also will meet with officials of the Dept. of Transportation which fund transportation centers like those being sought by Palatine and Arlington Heights. He will have lunch with Thomas Houser, former Wheeling Township GOP committeeman who now is second in command in the Peace Corps.

He will also meet with Congressmen Thomas Rallsback, R-Moline, and John Erlenborn, R-Elmhurst, who both went to Congress after service in the Illinois House of Representatives.

Letting Tonight For School Bids

Dist. 57 will hold an adjourned meeting tonight at 8 to finalize the letting of bids on Gregory and Sunset Park schools.

Construction to complete the two schools for a total of $275,000 was approved by voters in March.

The board will also discuss progress on the plans for a $400,000 to $600,000 addition to Lincoln Junior High School to house all junior high school students in the district by 1971.

Board members will meet with their architect, S. Guy Fishman, who is undertaking his first assignment for the district in the Gregory-Sunset-Lincoln construction.

Former President Is In Hospital

Former Village Pres. C. O. Schlaver, 400 S. I-Oka, Mount Prospect, is recuperating from treatment and major surgery at Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago.

He is expected to return home this week after nearly a month in the hospital. His recovery has been reported as satisfactory, and Schlaver plans to resume regular activities shortly.

Pick NROTC Head

A retired Navy captain has been chosen to head the Junior Naval ROTC program at Wheeling High School next year.

He is Capt. Adrian Lorentson of Northbrook, a 24-year veteran of the Navy.

The Department of the Navy will make the actual appointment but it is their custom to honor the recommendation of the local school.

Lorentson was selected by Wheeling Principal Tom Shirley, who is himself a naval reserve commander.

LORENTSON was quizzed by school board members Monday before they recommended the appointment.

"Do you think the NROTC program is likely to be phased out if money gets short? There has been a lot of college outcry against these military programs. Personally, I deplore it — but do you think the Navy will yield to this?" Richard Bachhuber, a board member from Mount Prospect asked.

"This is an expanding program right now," Lorentson answered. "I wouldn't be interested in it if I thought it would be phased out."

Lorentson conceded that there is "some anti-military feeling throughout the country." Asked if he thought Wheeling could sustain the 100-or-more enrollment needed for an NROTC high school unit, Lorentson said he was confident if could.

"In other schools, the administration tries to sell the program. I see nothing wrong with that," Lorentson added.

SUPT. EDWARD H. Gilbert differed. "If you mean by selling, that we will let the students know of the program and its purposes, I would agree. If you say that we'd deliberately call them in one by one and counsel them into it, that's something we don't do," he said.

Gilbert said since Wheeling will have the only Dist. 214 NROTC unit, students from other schools who wish to enroll can do so by transferring there.

LORENTSON, who has been employed by a Chicago bank since retiring from active duty two years ago, will also teach economics at Wheeling.

He taught in a college NROTC unit and served as deputy chief of staff at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station at the time when the Junior NROTC program was first launched.

13th Endorsement Set

by ED MURNANE

Republican candidates for the 13th Congressional District seat vacated by Donald Rumsfeld will be able to start measuring their strength tonight as the first of eight

township endorsements is made

to select its choice. The endorsement will be based on last week's candidates' might, at which 11 of the 12 GOP hopefuls presented their case.

The only Republican who did not speak in New Trier last week was the last candidate to announce, Lar "America First" Daly. Daly, perennial candidate for President, mayor of Chicago, and numerous other statewide offices, had not indicated he would be a candidate until Monday afternoon when he filed nominating petitions shortly before the 5 p.m. deadline in the secretary of state's office.

DALY LIVES IN CHICAGO, not in the 13th District. A congressman, however, needs only to live in the state he represents, not in the district.

Tonight's endorsement may be the first step in thinning out the long list of GOP candidates.

With only one of the six New Trier township candidates getting the endorsement, there is the possibility that some of those who do not get it will withdraw from the race. This is the last week for candidates to withdraw.

The six New Trier Township candidates are State Rep. Alan R. Johnston of Kenilworth, Brian B. Duff of Wilmette, Gerald M. Marks of Wilmette, Philip M. Crane of Winnetka, Yale Roe of Winnetka and Joseph D. Mathewson of Winnetka.

Johnston and Duff are considered the front-runners in New Trier by sources close to the organization.

The other six candidates are John J. Nimrod of Skokie (Northfield Township), State Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman of Arlington Heights (Wheeling Township), Samuel H. Young of Glenview (Northfield Township), Alban Weber of Evanston (Evanston Township), David A. Roe of Glenview (Northfield Township) and Daly.

SCHLICKMAN IS the only candidate from the western four townships of the district (the Northwest suburbs). The 13th District includes New Trier, Evanston, Northfield and Niles townships on the east and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg townships on the west.

The four western townships can be expected to make their endorsements sometime around the end of this month or during the first week of August.

Candidates' nights are scheduled for Wheeling and Palatine townships later this month, and endorsements will be made on the basis of the candidates' performance.

Palatine GOP Committeeman Walter A. Schaw said a candidates' night is scheduled for Thursday, July 17, for his organization's precinct captains and workers and other active party members. An endorsement meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, July 22.

In Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen said candidates will appear at a July 24 candidates' night. GOP organization executives will then make a recommendation to the precinct captains and the endorsement will follow. Cowen predicted that the Wheeling endorsement would be made within two weeks of the July 24 candidates' night.

IN SCHAUMBURG Township, GOP Committeeman Donald L. Totten said his organization is interviewing candidates on an individual basis and the final session is scheduled for July 21. Totten said the endorsement probably would be made within two weeks, around Aug. 1.

Elk Grove Republicans have not yet decided on the endorsement procedure, according to GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen. He said a meeting would be held soon to determine what policy would be followed and endorsement would be made probably sometime in August.

Endorsements by township political organizations are important to the candidates because they commit the local organization's workers to the candidate.

The 13th District primary is scheduled for Oct. 7, with the election to follow on Nov. 25.

Only one Democrat, Edward Warman of Skokie, will appear on the ballot Oct. 7.

Russ Fire on Chinese

TOKYO — Soviet troops made two amphibious landings inside Red China on a river island in Heilongjiang Province yesterday and opened fire on Chinese soldiers and civilians before being driven back, the New China News Agency (NCNA) said.

NCNA said the troops were supported by a gunboat which opened fire on the Chinese and by "six sorties" of military planes which violated Chinese airspace and circled over the island but did not open fire.

In a Moscow dispatch the Soviet News Agency Tass accused China of committing a new "armed provocation" along the river border. "As a result of the bandit attack of the armed Chinese on unarmed Soviet rivermen who were doing their duty, one of the rivermen was killed and three wounded," a Soviet note delivered to the Chinese embassy in Moscow said. The new Russian action was in retaliation to the alleged incident.

Delay Surcharge Vote

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leaders told the Nixon administration yesterday they would not vote on extending the income tax surcharge until considering tax reform to go with it.

Despite the administration's pleas for speed to help combat inflation, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee, insisted they would take time to prepare the tax overhaul. Liberals have been demanding.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen said the Democrats plan would delay a vote on extending the tax until late September at the earliest.

More Road Revenue

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie yesterday signed into law the proposed $2 billion highway bond issue a 1½ cent increase in the gas tax, and varied increases in car and truck license fees.

Ogilvie said he expects the beginning of repairs to 5,000 miles of roads this year and the start of 2,000 miles of new freeways next year, if the Illinois Supreme Court upholds the bond authority. A court challenge is expected over the three-man highway trust authority to be named by the governor.

Families Evacuated

EAST ST. LOUIS — Some 200 families in St. Clair County have left their homes, flooded by heavy rains and the Mississippi River which continued to rise yesterday.

Most of those evacuated live near the Cahokia Mounds State Park. An estimated 1,500 houses and trailers in the area are said to be affected by the water, but many residents have refused to leave for fear of looting.

Proposal for Jobless

WASHINGTON — President Nixon proposed yesterday to extend unemployment insurance coverage to 48 million new workers raise the general level of benefits and guarantee a longer period of benefit payments in the event of a recession.

Nixon gave the states, which determine their own benefit levels, two years to meet his goal of assuring that weekly jobless benefits amount to 50 per cent of a worker's lost wages, or said they would face federal action to enforce the standard.

Youth Commission Tells Goals

Under the leadership of recently elected chairman Jack Costello, the Mount Prospect Youth Commission Monday outlined its plans for the next year.

Several new committees were formed and plans for committee chairmen to make an interim report in two weeks were announced.

Costello said he felt the need for the three standing committees now in existence had waned and suggested they be dissolved.

Members of the commission agreed and proposed a committee structure which would consist of special committees formed to perform an express function and dissolve when the project is completed.

COSTELLO SAID the areas in which he is specifically interested are drug abuse, juvenile court, interpretation of the police report, the new free school in Mount Prospect, St. Mark's youth center and a summer dance project for young people.

"We would welcome suggestions from young people and adults of the community concerning what they would like to see the Youth Commission do. There are many things we can accomplish which would be interesting and challenging," Costello added.

Several other suggestions for action in the next year were considered by the commission, including a suggestion by Ty Clements that they consider obtaining information from an Evanston group studying drug abuse.

Costello asked Clements to report to the commission on the information he obtains at these meetings.

IT WAS ALSO announced that the Cook County school superintendent's office is currently researching the possibility of formulating its own drug abuse program to be used in all areas from the elementary schools through adult education.

"Although the drug abuse problem is first on my list of areas we should study," Costello said, "I don't want to over-emphasize the problem. I would like to coordinate the effort to give the community information on the subject."

A letter was read from Mount Prospect youth counselor John Strong in appreciation of Acting Village Pres. John Zimmerman for finding him office space in which to perform his counseling work.

The counseling center will be at Village Well 5 at the corner of Emerson and Highland, near the American Legion Post.

Warns of Nixon's Safety

"President Nixon's safety will be threatened" during his upcoming trip to Rumania, the Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom warned yesterday.

Lindstrom said the source of his information "was the Rumanian underground." He said he received information about the threats both from the American government and directly from the Rumanian underground.

Lindstrom charged that a Maoist element in Rumania is the group posing the threat. He explained it this way: "We know that one item of key importance on Nixon's itinerary (while he is in Rumania) is to have secret talks on Vietnam. There is a Maoist element in Rumania opposed to these negotiations."

LINDSTROM, WHO lives in Prospect Heights, is the national chairman of the "Remember the Pueblo Committee." He is pastor of the Church of Christian Liberty and headmaster of Christian Liberty Academy.

Lindstrom flew to Washington D. C. last night to protest Nixon's Rumanian trip. He plans the protest today on the steps of the U.S. Capitol.

Lindstrom said the protest was to consist of three parts: A written protest statement, the release of information pertaining to Nixon's trip, and a request for a meeting with Secretary of State William Rogers.

Lindstrom said the protest is not under the sponsorship of the Pueblo Committee. However, the three to five people who were to accompany him to Washington all are members of that committee.

A DEMONSTRATION involving several thousand people is planned in two weeks he said.

Lindstrom said he opposes Nixon's trip because "it is un-Christian to join hands with Rumania, who has joined hands with the Viet Cong." He said Rumania was the first country to officially recognize the Viet Cong regime.

Lindstrom also told the Herald yesterday that "within several days" he would be releasing further information on the concessions alleged to have been granted to Cuba by the United States in order to procure the release of the Pueblo crewmen.

Transformer Fire At Bruning Plant

An overloaded circuit caused a fire in the transformer vault room at the Bruning Co. on Central Road in Mount Prospect yesterday morning according to a spokesman for the fire department.

Bruning closed the manufacturing division and released one-third of factory employees for the day since a resulting power failure temporarily disabled the plant.

Russ Fire on Chinese

TOKYO — Soviet troops made two amphibious landings inside Red China on a river island in Heilongjiang Province yesterday and opened fire on Chinese soldiers and civilians before being driven back, the New China News Agency (NCNA) said.

NCNA said the troops were supported by a gunboat which opened fire on the Chinese and by "six sorties" of military planes which violated Chinese airspace and circled over the island but did not open fire.

In a Moscow dispatch, the Soviet News Agency Tass accused China of committing a new "armed provocation" along the river border. "As a result of the bandit attack of the armed Chinese on unarmed Soviet rivermen who were doing their duty, one of the rivermen was killed and three wounded," a Soviet note delivered to the Chinese embassy in Moscow said.

The new Russian action was in retaliation to the alleged incident.

Delay Surcharge Vote

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leaders told the Nixon administration yesterday they would not vote on extending the income tax surcharge until considering tax reform to go with it.

Despite the administration's pleas for speed to help combat inflation, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee, insisted they would take time to prepare the tax overhaul liberals have been demanding.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen said the Democrats' plan would delay a vote on extending the tax until late September at the earliest.

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie yesterday signed into law the proposed $2 billion highway bond issue, a 1 1/2 cent increase in the gas tax, and varied increases in car and truck license fees.

Ogilvie said he expects the beginning of repairs to 3,000 miles of roads this year and the start of 2,000 miles of new freeways next year, if the Illinois Supreme Court upholds the bond authority. A court challenge is expected over the three-man highway trust authority to be named by the governor.

13th Endorsement Set

by ED MURNANE

Republican candidates for the 13th Congressional District seat vacated by Donald Rumsfeld will be able to start measuring their strength tonight as the first of eight township endorsements is made.

New Trier Township, which has six of its own sons chasing after the nomination, will be the first to voice its preference.

The New Trier Township Republican Organization will meet in Winnetka at 8 p.m. to select its choice. The endorsement will be based on last week's candidates' night, at which 11 of the 12 GOP hopefuls presented their case.

The only Republican who did not speak in New Trier last week was the last candidate to announce, Lar "America First" Daly. Daly, perennial candidate for President, mayor of Chicago, and numerous other statewide offices, had not indicated he would be a candidate until Monday afternoon when he filed nominating petitions shortly before the 5 p.m. deadline in the secretary of state's office.

DALY LIVES IN Chicago, not in the 13th District. A congressman, however, needs only to live in the state he represents, not in the district.

Tonight's endorsement may be the first step in thinning out the long list of GOP candidates.

With only one of the six New Trier township candidates getting the endorsement, there is the possibility that some of those who do not get it will withdraw from the race. This is the last week for candidates to withdraw.

Track Makes 'Progress'

by KATHIE BARNES

Negotiations between black leaders and Arlington Park Race Track officials made "surprisingly good progress" Tuesday, according to Charles Armstrong, one of the negotiators and editor of the South Suburban News.

The meeting was scheduled as a result of black demands concerning hiring practices at the track.

The demands were presented after a demonstration two weeks ago, sparked when the contracts of four black employees were terminated.

Armstrong was arrested during the demonstration on charges of disorderly conduct.

Attending the meeting were four representatives of black organizations, representatives of all the unions representing thoroughbred and harness racing, David Pearson, executive director of the Illinois Bureau of Racing Police, and Mrs. Marje Everett, president of the Chicago Thoroughbred Enterprises.

ARMSTRONG SAID, "We have reached an agreement with unions and management that they will proceed with deliberate speed in hiring black help."

He said the group would meet again in two weeks at the State of Illinois Building in Chicago.

Armstrong also announced, "I'm happy to say 19 black mutual clerks were hired over the weekend."

Those appointed to a committee to continue studying the problem at the track are Mrs. Everett, Pearson, Armstrong, Asby Smith, director of economic development of the Urban League; Leonard Joyce of the Conference of Religion and Race; Lewis Martin of the Chicago Defender; Jesse Taylor of Jobs Now; and three union leaders to be chosen at a later date.

The unions which are involved in the controversy are locals representing waiters, waitresses, bartenders, mutual clerks, parking attendants, and the staff of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

He Paints Nature

by MARTHA KOPER

Even the suburbs so close to the big city have some wide open spaces for people looking for the quiet and solitude of nature.

In Palatine Township, Richard Sloan has found a few peaceful spots, but he's keeping their locations secret. That's because he goes there to watch — to watch nature, the animals and, most importantly, to watch the birds.

He's learned to be an accurate observer of birds in order to paint them. Listed among the top wildlife artists of today, Sloan spends his days and nights learning about birds so others might see what he sees in them.

Although he knew he wanted to be an artist when he was just 15, it took a little longer to realize his latent interest in wildlife.

"GROWING UP in the sterile city of Chicago with a family who cared and knew nothing about nature, my love of the outdoors still amazes me a little," he smiled.

At 15, he was the youngest student at the American Academy of Art, where his destiny was determined. It came from a fellow art student from Michigan with a strong interest in wildlife.

"It's kind of funny, because my friend is the director of art for General Motors now."

Sloan was hooked, though, and after graduation began looking for ways to make his dreams come true. To begin with, he had to find a market for wildlife artistry and that wasn't easy.

Unlike most creative careers, a wildlife artist dwells on accuracy. He tries to capture what is there for everyone to see.

BEFORE SLOAN picks up his paint brush, he must do a lot of watching and reading. He goes to a place where he knows he'll find a certain bird and begins sketching. Then, he reads about the bird and watches again making sure to keep notes which will help him recall color and natural surroundings. He takes a camera too.

His preliminary work usually also includes a trip to the museum for a close look at the skin and feathers of a bird he's ready to paint.

"The most important thing about my painting is accuracy," he said.

"It's also very important to me to be able to inject a breath of life into the bird. That can only be done after observing the bird for a long time."

"Then, I find myself crawling inside its head to find out how it lives and survives."

That technique and his love of nature probably account for his passion for conservation. He's worried about what man is doing to nature's habitats.

"PAINTING BIRDS makes me happy, but if at the same time, I can make people a little more aware of what we stand to lose by our carelessness, I'll be even happier," he said.

"What gives us the right to exterminate a species which was here long before us?"

In the suburbs, Sloan believes it's just a matter of time before his nature spots are gone. Within walking distance of his home at 2283 Sunset Drive, there's a quiet place with ponds and trees, but "I expect to see a steam shovel in there any day now," he said.

Small Elected CC President

The Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce elected a new president and vice president Tuesday.

One of the organizers and first president of the chamber, Ted W. Small, was elected president. Jack Brannock, who has been a member of the board for two years, was elected vice president.

Small succeeds Elvin Byrom, who resigned from the board when he was transferred by Western Electric to another office.

Vice President Blanche Ninnemann resigned at the meeting, and Brannock was elected to succeed her.

DIRECTOR OF advertising at Paddock Publications, Small is a member of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Association and has been active in the International Council of Shopping Centers, Inc.

Brannock is store manager of Jewel Tea Co. and is also a member of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Association. A resident of Arlington Heights, he is the manager of a Little League baseball team.

At the Chamber of Commerce, he is now serving on the library committee and the welcome wagon committee and will organize this year's installation dinner-dance. He also served on last year's Fourth of July committee.

Last year, Small founded the "Get Involved" program and served as chairman. The program seeks to broaden citizen participation in government and community affairs by encouraging them to recognize and accept their civic responsibilities.

FIRST IMPLEMENTED with the Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce, Small created interest in "Get Involved" in Philadelphia, St. Louis, Tucson, Oklahoma City, Escondido, Calif., Belleville, Ill., and the Northwest suburbs.

Affiliated with the Elk Grove Chamber of Commerce, he headed the steering committee and was parade chairman for the Arlington Heights 125th anniversary celebration.

A 14-year resident of Mount Prospect, he has served as a director of the Mount Prospect Rotary Club, a member of board of governors for Village Green Golf Club and a member of the Park District Advisory Board.

Doors Swing Open Again

Armanetti Liquors in Rolling Meadows opened its doors to the public Monday.

The store suffered extensive damage in a fire March 15 and had been closed for repairs.

Manager Mike Sica said customer reaction to the opening "was excellent."

The refurbished store includes a new wine bottling section, a greater variety of table and dessert wines, a finer selection of liqueur and cordials, spacious aisles, and 1,200 cases of beer on ice at all times.

SICA, MANAGER for the last 11 years, said the store also has a large selection of whiskey.

BIRDMAN OF PALATINE, Richard Sloan, is intent as he adds a few strokes to his latest drawing. Sloan is an expert on birds and one of his drawings soon will be hung in the Smithsonian Institute.

Village Approves Water Extensions

Bringing a 110-acre development and the Countryside YMCA a step closer into Palatine, the village board Monday night agreed to extend water and sewer lines to the property.

The cost will be born by Lou Draper, a local developer proposing the project, said Berton Braun, village manager.

A pre-annexation agreement lasts for five years, and the Draper development is expected to annex to Palatine when the boundary lines are contiguous, Braun said.

It was agreed at the meeting that the village would not be obligated to provide services if any of the present plans are changed. Village Pres. John Moodie said the village would have to have control of any extensions to the water system.

THE DEVELOPMENT will pay at a higher rate for the services than residents of the village.

In the proposed development are included 1,000 apartments and a shopping center. Plans already reviewed by the plan commission include construction of several apartment buildings.

The buildings would be no higher than three stories and would be built at a rate of 12 units per acre.

Included in the development are 10 acres which the Countryside YMCA holds options to buy. The facility would be built near the Baldwin-Northwest Highway intersections.

Spanning an area 8½ acres north to Dundee Road, the majority of apartment buildings would contain one-bedroom units.

RENTS WOULD range between $170 and $250 with some of the two-bedroom units designed as luxury apartments. A shopping center is planned for 13 acres, with a dinner playhouse comparable to Chicago's Ivanhoe Theatre.

A large recreation area with tennis courts and an indoor-outdoor swimming pool is also planned.

Draper, who has built other apartment projects in Palatine, believes the proposed project is a new idea in the area and encompasses a total environment concept.

Estimated to cost between $15 and $18 million, the project could be completed within four years, according to Draper.

Before the land can be annexed to Palatine, it must be contiguous to the village boundary, which presently is about a mile east at the Smith-Baldwin intersection. Draper has agreed to annexation of the property as soon as the village boundary line extends to the land.

IN ORDER TO start building, he has agreed to bring village water and sewer lines to the property at his own expense.

Draper estimated the 110-acre tract would become contiguous to Palatine within the next 18 months.

13th Endorsement Set

northwest part of the country. Sloan hopes there will be some places left for animals and birds to survive.

To his delight, the market for wildlife artistry has steadily grown since 15 years ago when he first decided to try his hand in the art.

"At the time everyone told me I could never make a living by only painting wildlife and I had a long procession of studio jobs where I had to paint everything," he said.

NOW, IN HIS early 30s, he's booked up with commissions to paint birds until 1973. To add to his success, his paintings are becoming known all over the country. Just last week he received word that a Sloan bluebird will hang in the permanent collection at the Smithsonian Institute.

He's about to finish a series of 10 paintings showing the life cycle of the purple martin which will go into a traveling exhibit. For the paintings, he even spent last winter in South America to see the bird in every natural habitat.

Asked to paint the purple martin by the Griggsville Wild Bird Society, Sloan has agreed to donating proceeds from the exhibit for conservation.

A lot has happened to Sloan since he was almost ready to give up wildlife painting a few years ago. Since that time,

Warns of Nixon's Safety

President Nixon's safety will be threatened during his upcoming trip to Rumania, the Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom warned yesterday.

Lindstrom said the source of his information was the Rumanian underground.

He said he received information about the threats both from the American government and directly from the Rumanian underground.

Lindstrom charged that a Maoist element in Rumania is the group posing the threat. He explained it this way: "We know that one item of key importance on Nixon's itinerary while he is in Rumania is to have secret talks on Vietnam. There is a Maoist element in Rumania opposed to these negotiations."

LINDSTROM WHO lives in Prospect Heights, is the national chairman of the Remember the Pueblo Committee. He is pastor of the Church of Christian Liberty and headmaster of Christian Liberty Academy.

Lindstrom flew to Washington D. C. last night to protest Nixon's planned Rumanian trip. He plans the protest today on the steps of the U.S. Capitol.

Lindstrom said the protest was to consist of three parts. A written protest statement, the release of information pertaining to Nixon's trip, and a request for a meeting with Secretary of State William Rogers.

Lindstrom said the protest is not under the sponsorship of the Pueblo Committee. However, the three to five people who were to accompany him to Washington all are members of that committee.

A DEMONSTRATION involving several thousand people is planned in two weeks he said.

Attendance Is Good in Parks

The weather continues to be wet and rainy, but attendance at the Palatine Park District programs has not been adversely affected.

According to Tom Webb, recreation director, poor weather has only affected activity at the pool and the golf course. "Attendance is down in those two areas," he said. "But in every other area of activity attendance is surprisingly up."

Alternative programs have been one of the main reasons why those who come to the park are not disappointed, he said.

FOUR-SQUARE, basketball, dodge ball, and arts and crafts are a few of the indoor activities youngsters can participate in when the weather becomes inclement, Webb continued.

The park district prepared and distributed a handbook for its recreation personnel outlining programs that should be employed when the weather is not cooperative.

Receives Degree

Lawrence Cahill, of Palatine, was among approximately 1,800 students awarded degrees at the University of Rochester's 119th Commencement exercises recently.

Cahill, of 155 E. Kimberly Lane, earned a B.A. degree from the University's College of Arts and Sciences in Rochester, N.Y.

Edward H. Levi, president of the University of Chicago, delivered the commencement address, and Maj. Gen. Ernest Pinson, an alumnus of the University and commandant of the Air Force Institute of Technology, spoke at commissioning ceremonies for graduating seniors in the Navy and Air Force Reserve Officer's Training Corps program.

Witte Awarded Degree

A Palatine man was among 183 graduates awarded associate degrees in commencement ceremonies held June 10 at Danville Junior College.

William F. Witte, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest F. Witte, 251 N. Schiller, received his associate of applied science degree. He majored in ornamental horticulture.

AB Degree Awarded

Richard C. Mosher of 2409 Maple Lane, Rolling Meadows, received a bachelor of arts degree from Augustana College, Rock Island at the 100th commencement exercises May 25.

He is the son of Mrs. Marian I. Mosher.

Miss Alcott Promoted

Miss Elizabeth A. Alcott, 325 Schubert St., Palatine, has been promoted to associate professor of English at the Wright Campus of Chicago City College.

Miss Alcott joined the faculty at Chicago City College in 1960 and has served at both the Crane and Wright campuses.

Lindstrom said he opposes Nixon's trip because "it is un-Christian to join hands with Rumania, who has joined hands with the Viet Cong." He said Rumania was the first country to officially recognize the Viet Cong regime.

Lindstrom also told the Herald yesterday that "within several days" he would be releasing further information on the concessions alleged to have been granted to Cuba by the United States in order to procure the release of the Pueblo crewmen.

At a press conference June 20, Lindstrom charged the U.S. had made concessions to Cuba in return for the men's release. However, he would not elaborate at that time on what the concessions were.

Air Race Winner?

Inverness housewife Mrs. George Jayne, who competed in the 23rd Powder Puff Derby this past weekend, may have won it.

First reports were that Mrs. Jayne placed second, but officials of the San Diego-to-Washington D.C. women's air race said it appeared 34 of the 92 planes did not make it to Dulles Airport in time to qualify.

Briefing of the pilots to compute flying time was postponed until today, at which time an announcement of the winner is expected. The champion is chosen on the basis of total elapsed air time measured against the rated cruising speed of the airplane.

Bad weather in the Midwest and over the Appalachian Mountains was responsible for the delays which prevented nearly a third of the planes from making it before the sundown Monday deadline.

Mrs. Jayne will join other Powder Puff competitors at a luncheon given by Mrs. Pat Nixon in the White House today.

The pert blonde, who took up flying as a hobby at first, recently finished second in the four-day Angel Derby race from New Orleans to New Caragua. She was 14 seconds behind the winner.

A veteran of the Powder Puff Derby, Mrs. Jayne placed 18th out of 77 in it last year.

Complex Gains Approval

A proposed planned development that would include three apartment buildings with 26 units, at Stephen Dr. and Colfax St. was approved by the Palatine Trustees Monday night. The development is proposed by Ralph Marotte.

One six unit building is scheduled to be completed June 1, 1970. The other two 10 unit buildings are scheduled to be opened Nov. 1, 1970. The development will have a total of 26 apartments.

The buildings will be no more than two stories high and 1.75 off-street parking spaces must be provided per apartment.

Engineering plans for removal of sanitary and storm water is to be approved by village engineers. All engineering plans must be approved by Palatine engineers and the development must follow the specifications as outlined by the village board.

The Marotte planned development ordinance annexes the area, binding it to the specifications and zoning laws governing the development.

A pre-annexation zoning hearing was held earlier with the plan commission and the commission approved the general con-are State Rep. Alan R. Johnston of Kenilworth, Brian B. Duff of Wilmette, Gerald M. Marks of Wilmette, Philip M. Crane of Winnetka, Yale Roe of Winnetka and Joseph D. Mathewson of Winnetka.

Johnston and Duff are considered the front-runners in New Trier by sources close to the organization.

The other six candidates are John J. Nimrod of Skokie (Northfield Township), State Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman of Arlington Heights (Wheeling Township), Samuel H. Young of Glenview (Northfield Township), Alban Weber of Evanston (Evanston Township), David A. Roe of Glenview (Northfield Township) and Daly.

SCHLICKMAN is the only candidate from the western four townships of the district (the Northwest suburbs). The 13th District includes New Trier, Evanston, Northfield and Niles townships on the east and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg townships on the west.

The four western townships can be expected to make their endorsements sometime around the end of this month or during the first week of August.

Candidates' nights are scheduled for Wheeling and Palatine townships later this month, and endorsements will be made on the basis of the candidates' performance.

Palatine GOP Committeeman Walter A. Schaw said a candidates' night is scheduled for Thursday, July 17, for his organization's precinct captains and workers and other active party members. An endorsement meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, July 22.

In Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen said candidates will appear at a July 24 candidates' night. GOP organization executives will then make a recommendation to the precinct captains and the endorsement will follow. Cowen predicted that the Wheeling endorsement would be made within two weeks of the July 24 candidates' night.

Elk Grove Republicans have not yet decided on the endorsement procedure, according to GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen. He said a meeting would be held soon to determine what policy would be followed and endorsement would be made probably sometime in August.

Endorsements by township political organizations are important to the candidates because they commit the local organization's workers to the candidate.

The 13th District primary is scheduled for Oct. 7, with the election to follow on Nov. 25.

Only one Democrat, Edward Warman of Skokie, will appear on the ballot Oct. 7.

A 4th for Effort

by BOB ZANIC

The old adage, "you get out of life what you put into it" had real meaning as far as the Fourth of July celebration in Rolling Meadows was concerned.

From information available, the only event that proved successful was the evening fireworks display. It was successful only because several individuals in the community, in combination with the fire department, showed concern.

However, not much in the way of celebration occurred in Rolling Meadows during the morning or afternoon of the Fourth of July.

AND THE REASON why very little happened was because no one really cared enough to make it happen.

The Herald, attempting to give the Rolling Meadows Fourth of July some publicity, had a difficult time finding out what was planned. Perhaps the people this paper contacted did not themselves know what was being planned or nothing had been planned in the first place.

The citizens of Rolling Meadows deserve better treatment.

There is no reason why the morning and afternoon of the Fourth of July should not have been as successful as the evening.

MAYBE WHAT THE community needs in regard to events of this nature is better organization and planning and an involvement of service groups like the Jaycees, American Legion or Lions Club.

In any case, the old adage certainly proved true; the results of the Fourth of July in Rolling Meadows only reflected the amount of effort that went into it.

Tries To Steal Hippo

Elk Grove police charged a 42-year-old man with public intoxication yesterday after the man allegedly tried to steal a hippopotamus from its cage at the Carson and Barnes Circus lot in Elk Grove.

Chester A. Maxwell was apprehended at Wellington and Biesterfeld roads by three officers, according to police. Maxwell is to appear in court Aug. 28.

The circus performed in Elk Grove last night, hippo and all.

Dist. 15 Signs Up

Parents of students new to elementary School Dist. 15 who will be attending either Lake Louise or Hunting Ridge School may enroll their children at the Administration Center, 505 S. Quentin Road in Palatine, from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday until Aug. 1.

Lake Louise School will include children living in an area bounded by Salt Creek from Palatine Road to Williams Road on the west, Lake Cook Road on the north, Palatine Road on the south, and Wilke Road on the east.

In addition, children from Pinehurst Manor, Capri Village, and the areas immediately surrounding Rand and Dundee roads east of Hicks Road will attend Lake Louise School. Except for the areas mentioned, no children west of Route 53 will attend this school.

THE HUNTING RIDGE school district boundaries include the areas east and north of Freeman and Central Roads, west of Quentin Road below Illinois Avenue, west of Elm Street between Illinois and Hellen roads, south of Hellen from Elm to Quentin and west of Quentin from Helen to Palatine Road. On the north, children south of Palatine Road from Quentin to Roselle Road, and east of Roselle Road and south of Freeman Road where it turns south will also attend Hunting Ridge. All road boundaries are split down the middle of the street, except Quentin Road, which is totally included in Hunting Ridge.

Subdivisions which are included in Hunting Ridge School, whether or not they are within the school boundaries, are Hunting Ridge, Pepper Tree Farms, Reseda West, Cambridge, Cannogate, Winston Knolls, and Georgetown of Willow Bend.

When registering a child, parents must present a legal birth certificate and a transfer record from the school the child last attended. If he is beginning school, only the birth certificate is required.

Book rental fees will be collected at the time of enrollment and an insurance plan is offered. Fees for children in kindergarten through sixth grades are $10, seventh and eighth $11. Insurance rates are $2 for school time only, $10 for 24-hour full-year coverage.

Budget Battle Rages

by ALAN AKERSON

The tempers grew short and the exchange grew hot. But after 15 minutes of arguing about Buffalo Grove not yet having a budget, the trustees remained undecided about their next step.

The exchange occurred at Monday's village board meeting. Trustee Ed Fabish opened the way for it by asking Trustee Robert Gleeson, head of the finance committee when budget hearings were to begin.

Gleeson termed the budget hearings a "farce." Instead, he answered by saying an appropriation ordinance would be ready for consideration by the board at next week's meeting. The ordinance is required by state law and must be filed by July 30.

THE VILLAGE is prohibited from spending more money than is shown in its appropriation ordinance. For this reason, such ordinances show expenditures much higher than the village actually expects them to be.

Gleeson said there was no reason to have a budget because there was no way to monitor how closely village departments are following their budgets.

Gleeson maintains the board's indecision as to which computer monitoring system it wants is holding up the budget. Until the system is chosen and installed, he sees no need for a budget, because he will be getting no reports on how the departments are following their budgets.

Gleeson pointed out that the village had long been considering the use of a computer for such monitoring.

THE VILLAGE had planned to use an on-line system which would mean the installation of a computer at the village hall. Cost of this for the first year would be $18,000. This includes installation as well as use charges. Thereafter, the yearly cost would be about $10,000.

However, the newly elected trustees wanted to investigate the use of an off-line system. The main difference between the two is that an on-line system could supply information days faster than the off-line system.

Mrs. Warner contends that because the village board meets only once a week, it doesn't need the faster system.

If the off-line system were considerably cheaper she would prefer it, she says.

"The budget is meaningless," said Gleeson.

Armstrong answered by saying, "Okay, we want some document, whatever you call it, that shows our income and expenditures."

"Like a budget," Fabish added quickly.

GLEESON THEN mentioned budget hearings, the subject of Fabish's original question: "Do you want the farce of budget hearings? The departments never look at their budgets again," he said.

Armstrong then said "I'm concerned that we continue to approve money 'in the dark'."

"So am I," Gleeson said curtly.

Village Pres. Donald Thompson ended the argument by saying the previous village board had planned to sign a contract for the on-line system. The new board members however, wanted to investigate the off-line system before signing a contract.

Thompson then tried to direct Richard Raysa, village attorney, to draw a contract for computer use. Raysa said, however, "I want the computer people to give me the contract. I have no information on the thing."

YESTERDAY Mrs. Warner said, "It scares us to death, spending money without knowing what our budget is."

"I don't know where we'll go from here," she admitted.

Next week Gleeson will present the appropriation ordinance to the board. Probably the budget issue will come up again.

In the meantime, one fact remains: Buffalo Grove continues to operate without a budget.

Russ Fire on Chinese

TOKYO — Soviet troops made two amphibious landings inside Red China on a river island in Heilongjiang Province yesterday and opened fire on Chinese soldiers and civilians before being driven back, the New China News Agency (NCNA) said.

NCNA said the troops were supported by a gunboat which opened fire on the Chinese and by "six sorties" of military planes which violated Chinese airspace and circled over the island but did not open fire.

Delay Surcharge Vote

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leaders told the Nixon administration yesterday they would not vote on extending the income tax surcharge until considering tax reform to go with it.

Despite the administration's pleas for speed to help combat inflation, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee, insisted they would take time to prepare the tax overhaul liberals have been demanding.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen said the Democrats' plan would delay a vote on extending the tax until late September at the earliest.

More Road Revenue

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie yesterday signed into law the proposed $2 billion highway bond issue, a 1½ cent increase in the gas tax, and varied increases in car and truck license fees.

Ogilvie said he expects the beginning of repairs to 5,000 miles of roads this year and the start of 2,000 miles of new freeways next year, if the Illinois Supreme Court upholds the bond authority. A court challenge is expected over the three-man highway trust authority to be named by the governor.

Families Evacuated

EAST ST. LOUIS — Some 200 families in St. Clair County have left their homes, flooded by heavy rains and the Mississippi River which continued to rise yesterday.

Most of those evacuated live near the Cahokia Mounds State Park. An estimated 1,500 houses and trailers in the area are said to be affected by the water, but many residents have refused to leave for fear of looting.

Proposal for Jobless

WASHINGTON — President Nixon proposed yesterday to extend unemployment insurance coverage to 4.8 million new workers, raise the general level of benefits and guarantee a longer period of benefit payments in the event of a recession.

Nixon gave the states, which determine their own benefit levels, two years to meet his goal of assuring that weekly jobless benefits amount to 50 per cent of a worker's lost wages, or said they would face federal action to enforce the standard.

Stennis Urges ABM

WASHINGTON — Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., yesterday urged Senate approval of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system (ABM) and proposed renegotiation of the nation's vast defense treaty commitments overseas with an eye toward eventual reduction of the armed forces.

He told newsmen before debate on the ABM began that any compromise on the ABM would compromise President Nixon's negotiating position at arms control talks with the Russians as much as if it were defeated outright.

Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom

Warns of Nixon's Safety

"President Nixon's safety will be threatened" during his upcoming trip to Rumania, the Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom warned yesterday.

Lindstrom said the source of his information "was the Rumanian underground." He said he received information about the threats both from the American government and directly from the Rumanian underground.

Lindstrom charged that a Maoist element in Rumania is the group posing the threat. He explained it this way: "We know that one item of key importance on Nixon's itinerary (while he is in Rumania) is to have secret talks on Vietnam. There is a Maoist element in Rumania opposed to these negotiations."

LINDSTROM, who lives in Prospect Heights, is the national chairman of the "Remember the Pueblo Committee." He is pastor of the Church of Christian Liberty and headmaster of Christian Liberty Academy.

Lindstrom flew to Washington D. C. last night to protest Nixon's planned Rumanian trip. He plans the protest today on the steps of the U.S. Capitol.

Lindstrom said the protest was to consist of three parts: A written protest statement, the release of information pertaining to Nixon's trip, and a request for a meeting with Secretary of State William Rogers.

Lindstrom said the protest is not under the sponsorship of the Pueblo Committee. However, the three to five people who were to accompany him to Washington all are members of that committee.

A DEMONSTRATION involving several thousand people is planned in two weeks he said.

Lindstrom said he opposes Nixon's trip because "it is un-Christian to join hands with Rumania, who has joined hands with the Viet Cong." He said Rumania was the first country to officially recognize the Viet Cong regime.

Lindstrom also told the Herald yesterday that "within several days" he would be releasing further information on the concessions alleged to have been granted to Cuba by the United States in order to procure the release of the Pueblo crewmen.

At a press conference June 20, Lindstrom charged the U.S. had made concessions to Cuba in return for the men's release. However, he would not elaborate at that time on what the concessions were.

Continue Suit

by BARBARA O'REILLEY

Legal maneuvers surrounding the 7-month-old suit between the Village of Wheeling and the Rock Road Construction Co. are becoming a bit contradictory.

The suit concerns the noise level produced by the company, an asphalt plant on Wheeling Road. Residents of Dunhurst Subdivision have complained about the noise since the company opened last summer.

Wheeling Village Atty. Paul Hamer disclosed at Monday night's village board meeting that the asphalt plant is currently operating without a business license.

This fact doesn't seem to be slowing down the asphalt business, however.

THE COMPANY was granted another continuance at a hearing Tuesday morning in Arlington Heights Court, allowing it an additional six weeks to obtain the machine parts necessary to reduce the noise.

Although the company applied for a business license, it could not be granted because the former Wheeling Village Mgr. C. E. Olsen, left orders not to issue it, Hamer said.

Olsen's order still stands, according to Hamer, until it is countermanded by the village board.

"I had hoped that the board would take action on it Monday night, but they had many other reports to go through," Hamer said. "The board may take action at a later date."

HAMER POINTED out that the company had been granted a building permit and an occupancy permit.

While operating without a license, therefore the company is studying the noise problem and trying to cut it down enough to conform to the village ordinance.

Although there has been "substantial reduction" in the noise levels, the level still exceeds the maximum permitted by the village code, according to a report submitted to the village board Monday by a firm hired to study the problem.

The report, made by Milton A. Sobie, of Wiss, Janney, Elstner & Associates, showed the result of a test made June 30 on the east property line of the Edward L. Klocke residence, 245 E. Wayne Place.

THE ASPHALT company produces noise that exceeds the village code in four of the eight octave bands tested. Originally it exceeded it in five of the eight bands. Sobie said that after the plant had been operating about half an hour, the noise was cut considerably, but that some of the decibels still exceeded those allowed. He said he did not know why the noise suddenly decreased.

A look at the figures shows that the noise only slightly exceeds or is slightly under the allowed level, depending on the decibel reading.

MRS. ALBERTA Klocke, a Dunhurst resident who has become active in the case, appeared Tuesday at the hearing.

"That company is practically in my back yard," Mrs. Klocke said, after the case had been continued. "This morning the noise was so loud that the walls of my house shook."

Dist. 23 Shaves Budget

The Dist. 23 School Board Monday night passed a motion to cut $36,500 from the 1969-70 educational fund and reduce the amount of tax anticipation warrants (TAWs) to be issued by $56,500.

Cu from the educational fund budget were the fine and practical arts program, for a saving of $3,000; the intramural program, a $2,500 saving; the Spanish program at MacArthur Junior High School, $7,000; the assistant principal at MacArthur Junior High, $500; part-time kindergarten teacher at Betsy Ross School, $3,500, and a special reading teacher at the junior high school, $7,000.

Additional savings will be made by not hiring a music and an art teacher for the junior high school. That program had also been on the superintendent's list of possible cuts. The board voted to retain the culturally deprived program.

With the $20,000 in additional state aid the district will receive starting July 1, the total expenditures in the educational fund budget will amount to $1,526,920, instead of $1,563,420.

THE PROPOSED budget had allowed for the issuance of $290,000 in TAWs, about 66 per cent of the total amount the district can borrow against its anticipated tax revenues. The $36,500 cut and $20,000 additional in state aid will reduce the TAW load "about 10 or 12 per cent," Supt. Edward Grodsky said.

The decision to make the budget cuts in the 1969-70 fiscal year was taken reluctantly by the school board.

"I hate to see these cuts made," commented board member Melvin Lacey.

Bruce Wallace and Robert LeForge, other board members, expressed opinions similar to Lacey's.

"I don't like to see this done. After all, I have children in this district," said LeForge. "However, we are only doing what we believe the people want us to do."

Grodsky told board members he was not in favor of cutting the budget by $36,500.

BIRDMAN OF PALATINE, Richard Sloan, is intent as he adds a few strokes to his latest drawing. Sloan is an expert on birds and one of his drawings soon will be hung in the Smithsonian Institute.

Drainage Funding Approved

Donald Thompson, Buffalo Grove's village president, Monday night: condemned Lawrence J. Carrozza, Wheeling Township Highway commission, for his refusal to donate any funds toward the Cambridge drainage solution.

Buffalo Grove's village board voted Monday night to donate $4,925 as the village's share of the costs.

Thompson said "Carrozza was seen participating in the dam building (on William Frazier's property). We have witnesses." Frazier's dam stopped Cambridge drainage water from flowing across his land. Cambridge is a part of Buffalo Grove.

THOMPSON SAID: "Jackson Drive (which lies in Wheeling Township) has always flooded. Another six months and Jackson Drive would have floated down into Arlington Heights."

Richard Raysa, Buffalo Grove village attorney, said Carrozza argued that the Jackson Drive flooding was Richard Brown's fault. Brown is the builder of Cambridge subdivision.

Raysa said "The developers will come up with the money until we can pay it." He said that in response to a question as to whether Buffalo Grove would have to pay the amount immediately.

THE TRUSTEES had expected to donate only $4,000 toward construction needed to stop the flooding. Thompson charged, "That amount went up because Carrozza refused to cooperate."

Thompson ended his remark by saying that donating the funds would be the quickest way to relieve the flooding situation.

Raysa said the total cost of the construction and land needed is about $75,000.

Lindstrom charged that a Maoist element in Rumania is the group posing the threat. He explained it this way: "We know that one item of key importance on Nixon's itinerary (while he is in Rumania) is to have secret talks on Vietnam. There is a Maoist element in Rumania opposed to these negotiations."

LINDSTROM, who lives in Prospect Heights, is the national chairman of the "Remember the Pueblo Committee." He is pastor of the Church of Christian Liberty and headmaster of Christian Liberty Academy.

Continue Suit

by BARBARA O'REILLEY

Legal maneuvers surrounding the 7-month-old suit between the Village of Wheeling and the Rock Road Construction Co. are becoming a bit contradictory.

The suit concerns the noise level produced by the company, an asphalt plant on Wheeling Road. Residents of Dunhurst Subdivision have complained about the noise since the company opened last summer.

Wheeling Village Atty. Paul Hamer disclosed at Monday night's village board meeting that the asphalt plant is currently operating without a business license.

This fact doesn't seem to be slowing down the asphalt business, however.

THE COMPANY was granted another continuance at a hearing Tuesday morning in Arlington Heights Court, allowing it an additional six weeks to obtain the machine parts necessary to reduce the noise.

Although the company applied for a business license, it could not be granted because the former Wheeling Village Mgr. C. E. Olsen, left orders not to issue it, Hamer said.

Olsen's order still stands, according to Hamer, until it is countermanded by the village board.

"I had hoped that the board would take action on it Monday night, but they had many other reports to go through," Hamer said. "The board may take action at a later date."

HAMER POINTED out that the company had been granted a building permit and an occupancy permit.

While operating without a license, therefore the company is studying the noise problem and trying to cut it down enough to conform to the village ordinance.

Although there has been "substantial reduction" in the noise levels, the level still exceeds the maximum permitted by the village code, according to a report submitted to the village board Monday by a firm hired to study the problem.

The report, made by Milton A. Sobie, of Wiss, Janney, Elstner & Associates, showed the result of a test made June 30 on the east property line of the Edward L. Klocke residence, 245 E. Wayne Place.

THE ASPHALT company produces noise that exceeds the village code in four of the eight octave bands tested. Originally it exceeded it in five of the eight bands.

Sobie said that after the plant had been operating about half an hour, the noise was cut considerably, but that some of the decibels still exceeded those allowed. He said he did not know why the noise suddenly decreased.

A look at the figures shows that the noise only slightly exceeds or is slightly under the allowed level, depending on the decibel reading.

MRS. ALBERTA Klocke, a Dunhurst resident who has become active in the case, appeared Tuesday at the hearing.

"That company is practically in my back yard," Mrs. Klocke said, after the case had been continued. "This morning the noise was so loud that the walls of my house shook."

Dist. 23 Shaves Budget

The Dist. 23 School Board Monday night passed a motion to cut $36,500 from the 1969-70 educational fund and reduce the amount of tax anticipation warrants (TAWs) to be issued by $56,500.

Cu. from the educational fund budget were the fine and practical arts program, for a saving of $3,000; the intramural program, a $2,500 saving; the Spanish program at MacArthur Junior High School, $7,000; the assistant principal at MacArthur Junior High, $500; part-time kindergarten teacher at Betsy Ross School, $3,500, and a special reading teacher at the junior high school, $7,000.

Additional savings will be made by not hiring a music and an art teacher for the junior high school. That program had also been on the superintendent's list of possible cuts. The board voted to retain the culturally deprived program.

With the $20,000 in additional state aid the district will receive starting July 1, the total expenditures in the educational fund budget will amount to $1,526,920, instead of $1,563,420.

THE PROPOSED budget had allowed for the issuance of $290,000 in TAWs, about 66 per cent of the total amount the district can borrow against its anticipated tax revenues. The $36,500 cut and $20,000 additional in state aid will reduce the TAW load "about 10 or 12 per cent," Supt. Edward Grodsky said.

The decision to make the budget cuts in the 1969-70 fiscal year was taken reluctantly by the school board.

"I hate to see these cuts made," commented board member Melvin Lacey.

Bruce Wallace and Robert LeForge, other board members, expressed opinions similar to Lacey's.

"I don't like to see this done. After all, I have children in this district," said LeForge. "However, we are only doing what we believe the people want us to do."

Grodsky told board members he was not in favor of cutting the budget by $36,500.

BIRDMAN OF PALATINE, Richard Sloan, is intent as he adds a few strokes to his latest drawing. Sloan is an expert on birds and one of his drawings soon will be hung in the Smithsonian Institute.

Budget Battle Rages

by ALAN AKERSON

The tempers grew short and the exchange grew hot. But after 15 minutes of arguing about Buffalo Grove not yet having a budget, the trustees remained undecided about their next step.

The exchange occurred at Monday's village board meeting. Trustee Ed Fabish opened the way for it by asking Trustee Robert Gleeson, head of the finance committee when budget hearings were to begin.

Gleeson termed the budget hearings a "farce." Instead, he answered by saying an appropriation ordinance would be ready for consideration by the board at next week's meeting. The ordinance is required by state law and must be filed by July 30.

THE VILLAGE is prohibited from spending more money than is shown in its appropriation ordinance. For this reason, such ordinances show expenditures much higher than the village actually expects them to be.

Gleeson said there was no reason to have a budget because there was no way to monitor how closely village departments are following their budgets.

Gleeson maintains the board's indecision as to which computer monitoring system it wants is holding up the budget. Until the system is chosen and installed, he sees no need for a budget, because he will be getting no reports on how the departments are following their budgets.

Gleeson pointed out that the village had long been considering the use of a computer for such monitoring.

THE VILLAGE had planned to use an on-line system which would mean the installation of a computer at the village hall. Cost of this for the first year would be $18,000. This includes installation as well as use charges. Thereafter, the yearly cost would be about $10,000.

However, the newly elected trustees wanted to investigate the use of an off-line system. The main difference between the two is that an on-line system could supply information days faster than the off-line system.

Mrs. Warner contends that because the village board meets only once a week, it doesn't need the faster system.

If the off-line system were considerably cheaper she would prefer it, she says.

"The budget is meaningless," said Gleeson.

Armstrong answered by saying, "Okay, we want some document, whatever you call it, that shows our income and expenditures."

"Like a budget," Fabish added quickly.

GLEESON THEN mentioned budget hearings, the subject of Fabish's original question: "Do you want the farce of budget hearings? The departments never look at their budgets again," he said.

Armstrong then said "I'm concerned that we continue to approve money 'in the dark.'"

"So am I," Gleeson said curtly.

Village Pres. Donald Thompson ended the argument by saying the previous village board had planned to sign a contract for the on-line system. The new board members however, wanted to investigate the off-line system before signing a contract.

Thompson then tried to direct Richard Raysa, village attorney, to draw a contract for computer use. Raysa said, however, "I want the computer people to give me the contract. I have no information on the thing."

"I don't know where we'll go from here," she admitted.

Next week Gleeson will present the appropriation ordinance to the board. Probably the budget issue will come up again.

In the meantime, one fact remains: Buffalo Grove continues to operate without a budget.

Drainage Funding Approved

Donald Thompson, Buffalo Grove's village president, Monday night condemned Lawrence J. Carrozza, Wheeling Township Highway Commissioner, for his refusal to donate any funds toward the Cambridge drainage solution.

Buffalo Grove's village board voted Monday night to donate $4,925 as the village's share of the costs.

Thompson said "Carrozza was seen participating in the dam building (on William Frazier's property). We have witnesses."

Frazier's dam stopped Cambridge drainage water from flowing across his land. Cambridge is a part of Buffalo Grove.

THOMPSON SAID, "Jackson Drive (which lies in Wheeling Township) has always flooded. Another six months and Jackson Drive would have floated down into Arlington Heights."

Richard Raysa, Buffalo Grove village attorney, said Carrozza argued that the Jackson Drive flooding was Richard Brown's fault. Brown is the builder of Cambridge subdivision.

Raysa said "The developers will come up with the money until we can pay it." He said that in response to a question as to whether Buffalo Grove would have to pay the amount immediately.

THE TRUSTEES had expected to donate only $4,000 toward construction needed to stop the flooding. Thompson charged, "That amount went up because Carrozza refused to cooperate."

Thompson ended his remark by saying that donating the funds would be the quickest way to relieve the flooding situation.

Raysa said the total cost of the construction and land needed is about $76,000.

Warns of Nixon's Safety

"President Nixon's safety will be threatened" during his upcoming trip to Rumania, the Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom warned yesterday.

Lindstrom said the source of his information "was the Rumanian underground." He said he received information about the threats both from the American government and directly from the Rumanian underground.

Lindstrom charged that a Maoist element in Rumania is the group posing the threat. He explained it this way: "We know that one item of key importance on Nixon's itinerary (while he is in Rumania) is to have secret talks on Vietnam. There is a Maoist element in Rumania opposed to these negotiations."

LINDSTROM, WHO lives in Prospect Heights, is the national chairman of the "Remember the Pueblo Committee." He is pastor of the Church of Christian Liberty and headmaster of Christian Liberty Academy.

Lindstrom flew to Washington D. C. last night to protest Nixon's planned Rumanian trip. He plans the protest today on the steps of the U.S. Capitol.

Lindstrom said the protest was to consist of three parts: A written protest statement, the release of information pertaining to Nixon's trip, and a request for a meeting with Secretary of State William Rogers.

Lindstrom said the protest is not under the sponsorship of the Pueblo Committee. However, the three to five people who were to accompany him to Washington all are members of that committee.

A DEMONSTRATION involving several thousand people is planned in two weeks he said.

Lindstrom said he opposes Nixon's trip because "it is un-Christian to join hands with Rumania, who has joined hands with the Viet Cong." He said Rumania was the first country to officially recognize the Viet Cong regime.

Lindstrom also told the Herald yesterday that "within several days" he would be releasing further information on the concessions alleged to have been granted to Cuba by the United States in order to procure the release of the Pueblo crewmen.

At a press conference June 20, Lindstrom charged the U.S. had made concessions to Cuba in return for the men's release. However, he would not elaborate at that time on what the concessions were.

His Brush Guided by Nature

by MARTHA KOPER

Even the suburbs so close to the big city have some wide open spaces for people looking for the quiet and solitude of nature.

In Palatine Township, Richard Sloan has found a few peaceful spots, but he's keeping their locations secret. That's because he goes there to watch — to watch nature, the animals and, most importantly, to watch the birds.

He's learned to be an accurate observer of birds in order to paint them. Listed among the top wildlife artists of today, Sloan spends his days and nights learning about birds so others might see what he sees in them.

Although he knew he wanted to be an artist when he was just 15, it took a little longer to realize his latent interest in wildlife.

"GROWING UP in the sterile city of Chicago with a family who cared and knew nothing about nature, my love of the outdoors still amazes me a little," he snickered.

At 15, he was the youngest student at the American Academy of Art, where his destiny was determined. It came from a fellow art student from Michigan with a strong interest in wildlife.

"It's kind of funny, because my friend is the director of art for General Motors now."

Sloan was hooked, though, and after graduation began looking for ways to make his dreams come true. To begin with, he had to find a market for wildlife artistry and that wasn't easy.

Unlike most creative careers, a wildlife artist dwells on accuracy. He tries to capture what is there for everyone to see.

BEFORE SLOAN picks up his paint brush, he must do a lot of watching and reading. He goes to a place where he knows he'll find a certain bird and begins sketching. Then, he reads about the bird and watches again making sure to keep notes which will help him recall color and natural surroundings. He takes a camera too.

His preliminary work usually also includes a trip to the museum for a close look at the skin and feathers of a bird he's ready to paint.

"The most important thing about my painting is accuracy," he said.

"It's also very important to me to be able to inject a breath of life into the bird. That can only be done after observing the bird for a long time."

"Then, I find myself crawling inside its head to find out how it lives and survives."

That technique and his love of nature probably account for his passion for conservation. He's worried about what man is doing to nature's habitats.

"PAINTING BIRDS makes me happy, but if at the same time, I can make people a little more aware of what we stand to lose by our carelessness, I'll be even happier," he said.

"What gives us the right to exterminate a species which was here long before us?"

In the suburbs, Sloan believes it's just a matter of time before his nature spots are gone. Within walking distance of his home at 2263 Sunset Drive, there's a quiet place with ponds and trees, but "I expect to see a steam shovel in there any day now," he said.

With an ultimate desire of living in the northwest part of the country, Sloan hopes there will be some places left for animals and birds to survive.

To his delight, the market for wildlife artistry has steadily grown since 15 years ago when he first decided to try his hand in the art.

"At the time, everyone told me I could never make a living by only painting wildlife and I had a long procession of studio jobs where I had to paint everything," he said.

NOW, IN HIS early 30s, he's booked up with commissions to paint birds until 1973. To add to his success, his paintings are becoming known all over the country. Just last week, he received word that a Sloan bluebird will hang in the permanent collection at the Smithsonian Institute.

He's about to finish a series of 10 paintings showing the life cycle of the purple martin which will go into a traveling exhibit. For the paintings, he even spent last winter in South America to see the bird in every natural habitat.

Asked to paint the purple martin by the Griggsville Wild Bird Society, Sloan has agreed to donating proceeds from the exhibit for conservation.

A lot has happened to Sloan since he was almost ready to give up wildlife painting a few years ago. Since that time, there's been one achievement after another.

frequently visits museums to study the birds' physical characteristics before painting them.

Grid Fans Get 900 Seats

Arlington High School's grid fans will get some relief this fall from the standing-room-only conditions they usually must endure to cheer on the Cardinals.

Over the strong objections of board member Richard Bachhuber, the High School Dist. 214 School Board voted Monday night to add 900-plus seats to the 2,300-seat capacity of the Arlington High field.

The board's action may set a precedent for approving similar requests expected to be made by Prospect and Wheeling High Schools. The school board knocked down automatic approval of the two schools' bleacher additions at last week's budget meeting.

ARLINGTON'S SEATS were approved Monday after board Pres. Arthur Aronson called them "a long-term investment" and

Mrs. Leah Cummins said this year's decision to add lights to all the other football fields was "a mandate from the people."

Bachhuber called for withholding the money as an economy measure while the board's bleacher backers said the purchase would encourage greater community use of the schools.

"It will take more than two years before we begin to get any return for our money," argued Bachhuber. "And you'd make as much money on a standing crowd."

"How can we look unfavorably on any buildup of our facilities as long as there's any return at all?" asked board member Ray Erickson, a former Arlington Teacher-Parent Council president.

BACHHUBER AND Richard Stamm voted against the 4-2 decision to spend the $11,750, up about a dollar a seat from similar bids taken last year.

Erickson, Aronson, Jack Costello and Mrs. Cummins supported the purchase.

Stamm, a persistent advocate of the private financing approach, suggested that each school's fans form a nonprofit corporation to finance the seating.

Backing up the request by Arlington High School principal Bruno Waara was William Heffernan of 66 S. Burton, president of the Arlington Boosters Club.

"We're just playing 'catch up' in getting these seats," Heffernan asserted, noting that Arlington drew standing room crowds estimated at 500 or more to home games all year.

"I wouldn't mind if we used this every week. But we'll use these seats four or five times a year and the rest of the 365 days they'll just be weathering," Bachhuber retorted. "I'm not sure this is the best thing we can do for the money."

COSTELLO, FORMER Prospect Boosters Club president, served notice in voting for the Arlington bleachers that he expects the school district to give similar consideration when Prospect seeks bleacher seats, too.

Prospect soon will make the request, athletic director George Gattas told the school board Monday.

Arlington has long played its home grid games under lights and drawn larger crowds than the other Dist. 214 schools.

Prospect and Wheeling played home games at night this year for the first time under lights financed through their Booster Club nonprofit corporations, and experienced a similar increase in crowds.

Moore's Will Fill Vacancy

Henry Moore, 8 Essex Lane, Lincolnshire, has been named to fill a one year vacancy on the Adlai E. Stevenson High School Board of Education. He replaces Mrs. Kay Longfellow who resigned on June 1.

Moore is an advertising representative for Fortune Magazine and has been a resident of the area for more than four years.

IN OTHER ACTION at the adjourned Monday night meeting, the board approved four master teachers on the recommendation of Supt. Harold Baner. They include Miss Harriet Jacquot, biology department chairman; Robert Beede, science department chairman; David Hanson, business education chairman; and Tom Baumann, social studies instructor and head football coach.

Master teachers are named for three years and receive additional pay. Initially they are selected from the staff by a teacher's screening committee and must have six years' experience in the district and a master's degree to apply for master teacher status.

The board continued its discussions of the 1969-70 budget and adopted a tentative budget subject to further revisions. Board members had pared down the education fund to about $800,000 by Monday night and hope to reduce it still further by the time of the annual budget meeting on August 18.

1st Endorsement Tonight

by ED MURNANE

Republican candidates for the 13th Congressional District seat vacated by Donald Rumsfeld will be able to start measuring their strength tonight as the first of eight township endorsements is made.

New Trier Township, which has six of its own sons chasing after the nomination, will be the first to voice its preference.

The New Trier Township Republican Organization will meet in Winnetka at 8 p.m. to select its choice. The endorsement will be based on last week's candidates' night, at which 11 of the 12 GOP hopefuls presented their case.

The only Republican who did not speak in New Trier last week was the last candidate to announce, Lar "America First" Daly. Daly, perennial candidate for President, mayor of Chicago, and numerous other statewide offices, had not indicated he would be a candidate until Monday afternoon when he filed nominating petitions shortly before the 5 p.m. deadline in the secretary of state's office.

DALY LIVES in Chicago, not in the 13th District. A congressman, however, needs only to live in the state he represents, not in the district.

Tonight's endorsement may be the first step in thinning out the long list of GOP candidates.

With only one of the six New Trier township candidates getting the endorsement, there is the possibility that some of those who do not get it will withdraw from the race. This is the last week for candidates to withdraw.

The six New Trier Township candidates are State Rep. Alan R. Johnston of Kenilworth, Brian B. Duff of Wilmette, Gerald M. Marks of Wilmette, Philip M. Crane of Winnetka, Yale Roe of Winnetka and Joseph D. Mathewson of Winnetka.

Johnston and Duff are considered the front-runners in New Trier by sources close to the organization.

The other six candidates are John J. Nimrod of Skokie (Northfield Township), State Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman of Arlington Heights (Wheeling Township), Samuel H. Young of Glenview (Northfield Township), Alban Weber of Evanston (Evanston Township), David A. Roe of Glenview (Northfield Township) and Daly.

SCHLICKMAN is the only candidate from the western four townships of the district (the Northwest suburbs). The 13th District includes New Trier, Evanston, Northfield and Niles townships on the east and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg townships on the west.

The four western townships can be expected to make their endorsements sometime around the end of this month or during the first week of August.

Candidates' nights are scheduled for Wheeling and Palatine townships later this month, and endorsements will be made on the basis of the candidates' performance.

Palatine GOP Committeeman Walter A. Schaw said a candidates' night is scheduled for Thursday, July 17, for his organization's precinct captains and workers and other active party members. An endorsement meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, July 22.

In Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen said candidates will appear at a July 24 candidates' night. GOP organization executives will then make a recommendation to the precinct captains and the endorsement will follow. Cowen predicted that the Wheeling endorsement would be made within two weeks of the July 24 candidates' night.

Deadline Near

The Ladies of the Lions Thrift Shop has announced July 12 as the deadline for ordering women's and children's gowns for the Wheeling Diamond Jubilee Celebration, Aug. 15-24.

The gowns, in styles ranging from pioneer days to the flapper era, are on display at the Thrift Shop, 124 S. Milwaukee Ave., and at the Jubilee Headquarters, 315 E. Dundee.

Men's ties and hats, and ladies' garters, bonnets and other accessories will continue to be available at the Thrift Shop, Jubilee Headquarters, and at J. Edwards Men's Shop, 275 E. Dundee.

Wheeling Budget Nears Completion

Wheeling's trustees canceled the remainder of this week's budget hearings until next Monday night when the village board will meet in special session as a committee-of-the-whole.

Portions of the budget remaining for study include the law department, engineering and planning, the board of trustees, the treasurer, the village manager, the municipal building and the industrial commission.

The special meeting will begin the review of the proposed budget at 7:30 p.m. and will recess at 8:30 p.m. for the regular board meeting. The board agenda will include only roll call and the opening and awarding of miscellaneous bids for the new municipal building.

The trustees will then adjourn the board meeting and continue with their study of the budget as a committee of the whole.

Twelve budget hearings on various other village departments were held last week, chaired by Trustee Michael Valenza of the board's finance committee.

Track, Blacks Make Progress

by KATHIE BARNES

Negotiations between black leaders and Arlington Park Race Track officials made "surprisingly good progress" Tuesday, according to Charles Armstrong, one of the negotiators and editor of the South Suburban News.

The meeting was scheduled as a result of black demands concerning hiring practices at the track.

The demands were presented after a demonstration two weeks ago, sparked when the contracts of four black employees were terminated.

Armstrong was arrested during the demonstration on charges of disorderly conduct.

Attending the meeting were four representatives of black organizations, representatives of all the unions representing thoroughbred and harness racing, David Pearson, executive director of the Illinois Bureau of Racing Police, and Mrs. Marie Everett, president of the Chicago Thoroughbred Enterprises.

ARMSTRONG SAID, "We have reached an agreement with unions and management that they will proceed with deliberate speed in hiring black help."

He said the group would meet again in two weeks at the State of Illinois Building in Chicago.

Armstrong also announced, "I'm happy to say 19 black mutual clerks were hired over the weekend."

Those appointed to a committee to continue studying the problem at the track are Mrs. Everett, Pearson, Armstrong, Asby Smith, director of economic development of the Urban League; Leonard Joyce of the Conference of Religion and Race; Lewis Martin of the Chicago Defender; Jesse Taylor of Jobs Now; and three union leaders to be chosen at a later date.

The unions which are involved in the controversy are locals representing waiters, waitresses, bartenders, mutual clerks, parking attendants, and the staff of the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Home is Damaged By Morning Fire

A fire Saturday morning caused extensive damage to a Rolling Meadows home after the occupants of the house left for the day.

According to Rolling Meadows police, the fire, at the home of David Swift, 3701 Bobwhite Street, was apparently started when charcoal was emptied into a garbage bag.

Three fire trucks and about 20 to 25 men responded to a neighbor's call that smoke and flames were shooting from the building.

Police said extensive fire damage was done to the kitchen while smoke and water damaged most of the house.

The Red Cross has found lodging for the Swift family in a motel until the house is repaired.

Board Approves Business Zoning

Wheeling's village board Monday approved an ordinance which increases the kinds of businesses allowed in a B-4 Service Business District.

On the recommendation of the zoning board of appeals the board approved new uses in a B-4 district including drycleaners, laundries and coin-operated laundries, retail stores and services, department furniture and home appliance stores, indoor theaters, professional or service offices, and car washes with holding areas.

Most of the areas currently zoned B-4 in the village are located along Milwaukee Avenue and in scattered spots on Dundee Road.

Deny Tap-On to Sewer

"JUST BAIT AND SEE," this female fisherman is telling her companion, who is apparently skeptical about the possibility of catching any fish in Highland Lake. The young fisherman were recently photographed as they tried their luck on a warm summer day. Fishing has been described as "jerks at one end of a line waiting for jerks at the other end."

The Hoffman Estates Village Board denied a request Monday night of Bernard Karey, owner of property on the north side of Golf Road, east of Higgins on which he plans to build a Midas Muffler shop, to tap on to water and sewer lines when the building is complete.

Karey's property is in the village of Schaumburg, but Schaumburg water and sewer lines will not be completed to the area until the beginning of next year.

The village has allowed similar privileges to other businesses on Golf Road in the past, but the current board apparently wants to establish a new policy.

Karey made a formal presentation to the board stressing the attractiveness of the planned building, the negligible amount of noise, the minimal amount of traffic involved and the convenience of the service offered by his business to Hoffman Estates residents.

THE BOARD was not impressed however. "All we're getting is a little revenue from the water and sewer service and a little business for our people. Schaumburg gets the building permit fees and about $150 per year in sales taxes, and in 18 months all of Higgins Road will be torn up while everyone switches over to the Schaumburg lines," Village Trustee Virginia Hayter said.

Mrs. Hayter said that only Hoffman Estates residents in the Highlands subdivision will be affected by the "undesirable business" in the Higgins and Golf roads area. There are no residential areas in Schaumburg near the area.

"The only control we have over these businesses is our water and sewer services," she said. "We have to have something."

KAREY SAID he did not know what his next step would be if he was not allowed use of the Hoffman Estates facilities, but would be reluctant to sell his property.

"I am an individual who got caught in a dispute between two villages and I have no control over it. Essentially you (the village trustees) are denying me a livelihood," he said.

Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher said yesterday that Hoffman Estates actually is doing Schaumburg a favor by not allowing property owners to contract for water and sewer services in areas where Schaumburg's lines are not completed.

"If these people are refused, they will participate in efforts to bring our lines down faster. As long as they can hook on to Hoffman Estates, they won't be concerned," he said.

THREE LARGE developments which are waiting for water and sewer services before building are willing to participate in providing funds for the line, Atcher said. If businesses in the Higgins Road area also are willing to help, the job will go that much quicker, he said.

Schaumburg's proposed sewer and water lines will run from Plum Grove Road to a half-mile west of Roselle Road and then drop south to run parallel with Golf Road. The cost of the project is estimated at $1,200,000.

Salary Disputed

Hoffman Estates village trustees and the Fraternal Order of Police have not reached agreement on salary negotiations, it was disclosed at Monday night's village board meeting.

Action on the village budget was deferred until next week, allowing time for the dispute to be settled.

Police had requested a $217,000 salaries budget including a 7 per cent across-the-board increase in salaries, retroactive to June 1, an increase in paid holidays from six to seven per year, payment for days spent in court that do not involve regular work days, paid insurance for the policemen's wives and children and two additional patrolmen to be added the 1st of November.

AT A JUNE 24 meeting of the Finance Committee, Police Chief John O'Connell presented the department's requests.

Trustees brought the $217,000 request down to $185,000, allowing for the 7 per cent salary increase, pay for days in court and two additional patrolmen to be added the middle of November and the first of December.

Trustees and a representative of the police met in an executive session Wednesday night to discuss the budget as worked out by the trustees.

Evidently, police refused the village offer and met again to revise their request. Another executive session is scheduled for tonight.

VILLAGE PRESIDENT Frederick Downey said Monday night that the negotiation involved two disputed areas, but neither village officials nor police would reveal the current status of the salaries budget or areas still being negotiated.

Both village officials and police felt confident that the disagreement will be settled without problems tonight.

Plan to Announce Chairman of Fund

The general campaign chairman for this year's Schaumburg Township-Hanover Park United Fund campaign will be named in the near future, according to Thomas Stocco, president of the Schaumburg-Hanover United Fund.

Kickoff date for this year's campaign is Oct. 2, Stocco said. There will be no meeting of the board of directors of the local fund in July.

A budget request for the Schaumburg-Hanover Park United Fund during the coming year has been submitted to the Suburban Community Chest Council. There are presently 12 participating agencies in the local United Fund.

Russ Fire on Chinese

TOKYO — Soviet troops made two amphibious landings inside Red China on a river island in Heilongjiang Province yesterday and opened fire on Chinese soldiers and civilians before being driven back, the New China News Agency (NCNA) said.

NCNA said the troops were supported by a gunboat which opened fire on the Chinese and by "six sorties" of military planes which violated Chinese airspace and circled over the island but did not open fire.

Delay Surcharge Vote

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leaders told the Nixon administration yesterday they would not vote on extending the income tax surcharge until considering tax reform to go with it.

Despite the administration's pleas for speed to help combat inflation, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee, insisted they would take time to prepare the tax overhaul liberals have been demanding.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen said the Democrats' plan would delay a vote on extending the tax until late September at the earliest.

More Road Revenue

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie yesterday signed into law the proposed $2 billion highway bond issue, a 1½ cent increase in the gas tax, and varied increases in car and truck license fees.

Ogilvie said he expects the beginning of repairs to 5,000 miles of roads this year and the start of 2,000 miles of new freeways next year. If the Illinois Supreme Court upholds the bond authority, a court challenge is expected over the three-man highway trust authority to be named by the governor.

Families Evacuated

EAST ST. LOUIS — Some 200 families in St. Clair County have left their homes, flooded by heavy rains and the Mississippi River which continued to rise yesterday.

Most of those evacuated live near the Cahokia Mounds State Park. An estimated 1,500 houses and trailers in the area are said to be affected by the water, but many residents have refused to leave for fear of looting.

Proposal for Jobless

WASHINGTON — President Nixon proposed yesterday to extend unemployment insurance coverage to 4.8 million new workers, raise the general level of benefits and guarantee a longer period of benefit payments in the event of a recession.

Nixon gave the states, which determine their own benefit levels, two years to meet his goal of assuring that weekly jobless benefits amount to 50 per cent of a worker's lost wages, or said they would face federal action to enforce the standard.

Stennis Urges ABM

WASHINGTON — Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., yesterday urged Senate approval of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system (ABM) and proposed renegotiation of the nation's vast defense treaty commitments overseas with an eye toward eventual reduction of the armed forces.

He told newsmen before debate on the ABM began that any compromise on the ABM would compromise President Nixon's negotiating position at arms control talks with the Russians as much as if it were defeated outright.

Area Queen Competes

"I've really started to get excited about it," said Barbara Jean Knight, Miss Hoffman Estates of 1969.

The 18-year-old college coed was speaking about the Miss Illinois Pageant in Aurora, July 20 through 28. As winner of last year's Miss Hoffman Estates Pageant, she will be representing Hoffman Estates in the state contest this year. Her travel expenses are paid for by the Hoffman Estates Jaycees, sponsor of the local pageant.

The week of July 20 will be a hectic one for the pageant contestant. She will register Sunday afternoon at 4 p.m. along with other entrants, and will be in a parade through downtown Aurora on Monday. The state pageant is being held at Aurora West High School.

"MISS KNIGHT'S schedule of comhas practiced her gymnastic routine two hours daily while attending Stephens College in Columbia, Mo., and Northern Illinois University. She will be a sophomore at NIU this fall.

THE AMBITION of the Hoffman Estates beauty contestant is to be a fashion coordinator. She is planning to combine a major in textiles with a business minor. A 1968 graduate of Conant High School, Miss Knight was on the national council of Seventeen magazine while in high school. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Knight, 121 N. Woodlawn.

Describing how it feels to be Miss Hoffman Estates, Miss Knight said that "It teaches you responsibility, and it also makes you feel important."

"I would encourage every girl to participate in the Miss Hoffman Estates pageant," she continued. "It's worthwhile to be in the pageant even if you don't win first place."

MISS KNIGHT'S successor as Miss Hoffman Estates will be selected at the Miss Hoffman Estates pageant Aug. 23 at Conant High School. Entries are now being accepted for the pageant.

Information about the pageant is available from any Jaycee in Hoffman Estates or pageant director Ed Schwellenbach, at 894-1943.

1st Endorsement Tonight

by ED MURNANE
Republican candidates for the 13th Congressional District seat vacated by Donald Rumsfeld will be able to start measuring their strength tonight as the first of eight township endorsements is made.

New Trier Township, which has six of its own sons chasing after the nomination, will be the first to voice its preference.

The New Trier Township Republican Organization will meet in Winnetka at 8 p.m. to select its choice. The endorsement will be based on last week's candidates' night, at which 11 of the 12 GOP hopefuls presented their case.

The only Republican who did not speak in New Trier last week was the last candidate to announce, Lar "America First" Daly. Daly, perennial candidate for President, mayor of Chicago, and numerous other statewide offices, had not indicated he would be a candidate until Monday afternoon when he filed nominating petitions shortly before the 5 p.m. deadline in the secretary of state's office.

DALY LIVES IN Chicago, not in the 13th District. A congressman, however, needs only to live in the state he represents, not in the district.

Tonight's endorsement may be the first step in thinning out the long list of GOP candidates.

With only one of the six New Trier township candidates getting the endorsement, there is the possibility that some of those who do not get it will withdraw from the race. This is the last week for candidates to withdraw.

The six New Trier township candidates are State Rep. Alan R. Johnston of Kenilworth, Brian B. Duff of Wilmette, Gerald M. Marks of Wilmette, Philip M. Crane of Winnetka, Yale Roe of Winnetka and Joseph D. Mathewson of Winnetka.

Johnston and Duff are considered the front-runners in New Trier by sources close to the organization.

Glenview (Northfield Township) and Daly.

SCHLICKMAN IS the only candidate from the western four townships of the district (the Northwest suburbs). The 13th District includes New Trier, Evanston, Northfield and Niles townships on the east and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg townships on the west.

The four western townships can be expected to make their endorsements sometime around the end of this month or during the first week of August.

Candidates' nights are scheduled for Wheeling and Palatine townships later this month, and endorsements will be made on the basis of the candidates' performance.

Palatine GOP Committeeman Walter A. Schaw said a candidates' night is scheduled for Thursday, July 17, for his organization's precinct captains and workers and other active party members. An endorsement meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, July 22.

In Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen said candidates will appear at a July 24 candidates' night. GOP organization executives will then make a recommendation to the precinct captains and the endorsement will follow. Cowen predicted that the Wheeling endorsement would be made within two weeks of the July 24 candidates' night.

IN SCHAUMBURG Township, GOP Committeeman Donald L. Totten said his organization is interviewing candidates on an individual basis and the final session is scheduled for July 21. Totten said the endorsement probably would be made within two weeks, around Aug. 1.

Elk Grove Republicans have not yet decided on the endorsement procedure, according to GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen. He said a meeting would be held soon to determine what policy would be followed and endorsement would be made probably sometime in August.

Endorsements by township political organizations are important to the candidates because they commit the local organization's workers to the candidate.

Only one Democrat, Edward Warman of Skokie, will appear on the ballot Oct. 7.

Golf, Floods Irk Owners

About 20 residents of Hoffman Estates were present at the village board meeting Monday night to complain about everything from golf balls landing in their yards to storm sewers flooding their houses.

The first complaint came from Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Runyon, 166 Bradley Lane, who said that golf balls from the Golden Acres Golf Course in Schaumburg were causing problems.

They cited several incidents of broken windows and a broken windshield and expressed the fear that someone in their yard or home could be seriously injured if hit.

"The golfers are very difficult to trace," Runyon said. "They won't come after their ball if they've broken a window."

VILLAGE ATTY. Edward Hofert explained that the golf course is not responsible and cannot be forced to alleviate the situation.

He also emphasized that the problem is a private one between the Runyons and the golfers and not under the jurisdiction of the village board. "The court would say that when you purchase land near a golf course, you assume the risks involved."

Village Pres. Frederick Downey said that he would write to Schaumburg Pres. Robert Atcher and suggest that Schaumburg consider an ordinance requiring fences around golf courses near single-family homes.

A faulty storm sewer on Woodlawn Street brought Mr. and Mrs. Donald Totten, 193 Woodlawn, and several other residents of the street complaining of about several inches of "black muck" in their basements following heavy storms.

Five tri-levels on the street are involved, Mrs. Totten said.

PUBLIC WORKS Director Wally Bolm said that a sewer manhole was raised to the proper height following storms two weeks ago and that the change should eliminate chances of the flooding recurring.

Village trustees requested that village Engineer George Holt submit a written report on circumstances in the area so they could decide if further action needs to be taken.

The board also rescinded the approval of 250 apartment building permits to be located above the flooding area until the report was made. The apartments approved June 23 might aggravate conditions, trustees said. Vavrus is the builder.

MRS. ALBERT L. JESSEN, 110 Arcadia Court, presented three petitions to the board calling for various action on problems in her neighborhood.

Mrs. Jessen said that malls on Arbor, Audubon Street, Audubon Place and Arcadia Court needed landscaping work and sidewalk repair.

Trees and shrubs are diseased or dead and sidewalks in front of all the residences are caved in, she said.

About 10 residents of the area were present to echo her complaints.

ANOTHER PETITION requested that no parking areas be put in on the east side of Audubon Place near the Tropicana Swim Club. Cars parked there caused a hazard, Mrs. Jessen said.

The board said an ordinance to this effect would be in order.

Excessive noise at night adult and teen parties at the Tropicana pool was the topic of the third petition. Village Attorney Edward Hofert said that the residents would have to be willing to file a disturbance of the peace complaint on specific people causing disturbances and testify in court against them.

POLICE WOULD issue summons if informed that residents wished to file a complaint, Hofert said. Otherwise, police can only request that people at pool parties keep quiet.

Andrew McPherson, 276 Lafayette, told the board he had "almost lost his life" because of a large hole on the side of Higgins Road in front of the Dale House Restaurant.

The hole is on state right-of-way and Hofert suggested the village take a picture of the hole and send it to George March at the District 10 Highway Department office. The village is unable to do anything without state approval, Hofert said.

Urging Support Of Township Bill

Schaumburg Township officials urge township residents to write their Congressmen and express support of a bill now in Congress, H.R. 10483.

The bill, introduced on behalf of the National Association of Town and Township officers, would enable township governments to have two representatives on the advisory commission on intergovernmental relations. This commission advises Congress on what laws should be passed concerning local government.

A similar bill has been introduced in the Senate, Senate Bill 2042.

United Church Offers School for Children

The Pilgrim United Church of Christ, 521 Parkside Circle, Streamwood, invites all children aged 4 through fourth grade to attend Vacation Church School, July 28 to Aug. 8, 9 to 11:15 a.m. daily.

Registration will be at the church Sunday, July 20, at 10 a.m. and Tuesday, July 22, 9 a.m. to noon.

The theme for this year is "The Church in Today's World." Recreation, field trips and refreshments will be included in the daily program. The fee is $1.50 per child, not to exceed $4.50 per family.

5 Involved In Rt. 53 Collision

Dean R. Wooden, 29, 1403 Weathersfield, Schaumburg, his wife, Mary, 28, and their son, Eric, age 1, escaped serious injury Sunday when their car collided with another at Rt. 53 and Lake Street, south of Itasca.

Mrs. Wooden suffered cuts and bruises while young Eric suffered bruises. Wooden was unhurt, according to DuPage County police reports.

The driver of the other car was John R. Carveh, 69, of Chicago. His wife, Margie, 62, suffered facial cuts. She was a front seat passenger.

NO CHARGES were made after police learned Carveh turned left in front of Wooden who was eastbound on Lake Street. Carveh told police he didn't see Wooden's car as he turned as the light was turning red.

In a separate incident, Stephan Stompanato, 32, 22W291 Irving Park Road, Medinah, held his own double header Friday, according to DuPage County police.

He was headed west on Grand Avenue near Church Road, south of Bensenville, when he was reportedly cut off by an unknown vehicle. His car ran over the curb, hit a telephone pole head-on, bounced and hit a nearby tree and came to rest.

No charges were made by police. Stompanato was unhurt, police said.

9 Vie for Shindig Title

Nine Schaumburg girls are vying for the title of Miss Shindig, to be decided by penny votes collected in donations for new fire department equipment.

Ballot boxes have been placed in stores throughout the Weathersfield Commons shopping center. Each penny counts as one vote.

The queen and four attendants will be crowned at a dance in her honor at 7:30 p.m. July 19 in the Schaumburg Great Hall. A $1 donation is requested at the door and will go toward queen candidate votes.

The queen will be crowned at 10 p.m.

THE NINE GIRLS are Terri Lyn Brandenburg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brandenburg, 1736 Weathersfield Way; Dee Donaldson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Donaldson, 1204 W. Sharon Lane; Lynn Lyons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lyons, 104 S. Waban Court; Sherree Mielke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Mielke, 1504 Arlington Lane; Annette Fajol, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fajol, 1023 Duxbury Lane; Gayle Ritchie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Ritchie, 121 S. Webster Lane; Kathleen P. Rabe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rabe, 1107 Lowell Lane; Debbie Schueler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Schueler, 1019 Duxbury Lane; and Roxann Wawrzyniak, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Chupka, 237 Harper Lane, Hoffman Estates.

The queen and her attendants will ride in the Firemen's Parade July 26 and participate in Schaumburg Shindig activities that night.

by MARTHA KOPER

Even the suburbs so close to the big city have some wide open spaces for people looking for the quiet and solitude of nature.

In Palatine Township, Richard Sloan has found a few peaceful spots, but he's keeping their locations secret. That's because he goes there to watch—to watch nature, the animals and, most importantly, to watch the birds.

He's learned to be an accurate observer of birds in order to paint them. Listed among the top wildlife artists of today, Sloan spends his days and nights learning about birds so others might see what he sees in them.

Although he knew he wanted to be an artist when he was just 15, it took a little longer to realize his latent interest in wildlife.

"GROWING UP in the storied city of Chicago with a family who cared and knew nothing about nature, my love of the outdoors still amazes me a little," he smiled.

At 15, he was the youngest student at the American Academy of Art, where his destiny was determined. It came from a fellow art student from Michigan with a strong interest in wildlife.

"After a few trips to Michigan to hunt or just walk with him, I decided I wanted to paint wildlife all the time."

"It's kind of funny, because my friend is the director of art for General Motors now."

Sloan was hooked, though, and after graduation began looking for ways to make his dreams come true. To begin with, he had to find a market for wildlife artistry and that wasn't easy.

Unlike most creative careers, a wildlife artist dwells on accuracy. He tries to capture what is there for everyone to see.

BEFORE SLOAN picks up his paint brush, he must do a lot of watching and reading. He goes to a place where he knows he'll find a certain bird and begins sketching. Then, he reads about the bird and watches again making sure to keep notes which will help him recall color and natural surroundings. He takes a camera too.

His preliminary work usually also includes a trip to the museum for a close look at the skin and feathers of a bird he's ready to paint.

"The most important thing about my painting is accuracy," he said.

"It's also very important to me to be able to inject a breath of life into the bird. That can only be done after observing the bird for a long time."

"Then, I find myself crawling inside its head to find out how it lives and survives."

That technique and his love of nature probably account for his passion for conservation. He's worried about what man is doing to nature's habitats.

"PAINTING BIRDS makes me happy, but if at the same time, I can make people a little more aware of what we stand to lose by our carelessness, I'll be even happier," he said.

"What gives us the right to exterminate a species which was here long before us?" In the suburbs, Sloan believes it's just a matter of time before his nature spots are gone. Within walking distance of his home at 2283 Sunset Drive, there's a quiet place with ponds and trees, but "I expect to see a steam shovel in there any day now," he said.

With an ultimate desire of living in the northwest part of the country, Sloan hopes there will be some places left for animals and birds to survive.

To his delight, the market for wildlife artistry has steadily grown since 15 years ago when he first decided to try his hand in the art.

"At the time, everyone told me I could never make a living by only painting wildlife and I had a long procession of studio jobs where I had to paint everything," he said.

NOW, IN HIS early 30s, he's booked up with commissions to paint birds until 1973. To add to his success, his paintings are becoming known all over the country. Just last week, he received word that a Sloan bluebird will hang in the permanent collection at the Smithsonian Institute.

He's about to finish a series of 10 paintings showing the life cycle of the purple martin which will go into a traveling exhibit. For the paintings, he even spent last winter in South America to see the bird in every natural habitat.

Asked to paint the purple martin by the Griggsville Wild Bird Society, Sloan has agreed to donating proceeds from the exhibit for conservation.

A lot has happened to Sloan since he was almost ready to give up wildlife painting a few years ago. Since that time, there's been one achievement after another.

"But I probably got the biggest kick out of being listed among artists I got my inspiration from when I was a struggling student."

by ED MURNANE

Republican candidates for the 13th Congressional District seat vacated by Donald Rumsfeld will be able to start measuring their strength tonight as the first of eight township endorsements is made.

New Trier Township, which has six of its own sons chasing after the nomination, will be the first to voice its preference.

The New Trier Township Republican Organization will meet in Winnetka at 8 p.m. to select its choice. The endorsement will be based on last week's candidates' night, at which 11 of the 12 GOP hopefuls presented their case.

The only Republican who did not speak in New Trier last week was the last candidate to announce, Lar "America First" Daly. Daly, perennial candidate for President, mayor of Chicago, and numerous other statewide offices, had not indicated he would be a candidate until Monday afternoon when he filed nominating petitions shortly before the 5 p.m. deadline in the secretary of state's office.

DALY LIVES IN Chicago, not in the 13th District. A congressman, however, needs only to live in the state he represents, not in the district.

Tonight's endorsement may be the first step in thinning out the long list of GOP candidates.

With only one of the six New Trier township candidates getting the endorsement, there is the possibility that some of those who do not get it will withdraw from the race. This is the last week for candidates to withdraw.

The six New Trier Township candidates are State Rep. Alan R. Johnston of Kenilworth, Brian B. Duff of Wilmette, Gerald M. Marks of Wilmette, Philip M. Crane of Winnetka, Yale Roe of Winnetka and Joseph D. Mathewson of Winnetka.

Johnston and Duff are considered the front-runners in New Trier by sources close to the organization.

The other six candidates are John J. Nimrod of Skokie (Northfield Township), State Rep. Eugene F. Schluckman of Arlington Heights (Wheeling Township), Samuel H. Young of Glenview (Northfield Township), Alban Weber of Evanston (Evanston Township), David A. Roe of Glenview (Northfield Township) and Daly.

SCHLUCKMAN IS the only candidate from the western four townships of the district (the Northwest suburbs). The 13th District includes New Trier, Evanston, Northfield and Niles townships on the east and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg townships on the west.

The four western townships can be expected to make their endorsements sometime around the end of this month or during the first week of August.

Candidates' nights are scheduled for Wheeling and Palatine townships later this month, and endorsements will be made on the basis of the candidates' performance.

Palatine GOP Committeeman Walter A. Schaw said a candidates' night is scheduled for Thursday, July 17, for his organization's precinct captains and workers and other active party members. An endorsement meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, July 22.

In Wheeling Township Committeeman Richard Cowen said candidates will appear at a July 24 candidates' night. GOP organization executives will then make a recommendation to the precinct captains and the endorsement will follow. Cowen predicted that the Wheeling endorsement would be made within two weeks of the July 24 candidates' night.

IN SCHAUMBURG Township, GOP Committeeman Donald L. Totten said his organization is interviewing candidates on an individual basis and the final session is scheduled for July 21. Totten said the endorsement probably would be made within two weeks, around Aug. 1.

Elk Grove Republicans have not yet decided on the endorsement procedure, according to GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen. He said a meeting would be held soon to determine what policy would be followed and endorsement would be made probably sometime in August.

Endorsements by township political organizations are important to the candidates because they commit the local organization's workers to the candidate.

Only one Democrat, Edward Warman of Skokie, will appear on the ballot Oct. 7.

Thomas: Farewell

"This area has some of the finest school districts in the nation. The teachers are among the most dedicated," Dr. Donald Thomas, former superintendent, said in his farewell letter to Dist. 59.

"In the fall of 1969 when we moved to our new home in Arlington Heights our neighbor, Bob Lidge, came over and asked, 'What can I do to help?'" Thomas said.

"In those ten years the words Bob spoke have continued to be the kindest words that anyone can speak. These were the same words I heard so often at Prospect High School, at Elk Grove High School, and in Dist. 59. Every time there is a need, there are people who will ask, 'What can I do to help?'" he said.

"AS DIST. 59 appoints a new superintendent, I hope that many of you will be as kind to him as you have been to me. I hope that you will always remember that compassion is stronger than criticism, that kindness is more an attribute of man than hostility.

"What a new superintendent needs more than anything else is a Bob Lidge, or a Gene Armentano, or a J. Ward Morrison, or a Jack Pahl — someone with a big hand and a big heart to say, 'What can I do to help?' He must also have a strong, unified board of education.

"As you continue to build and prosper, as you continue to develop educational programs for all children, may you always continue to support your schools, may you always have the courage to say, 'What can I do to help?'" Thomas said.

Thomas has accepted a position as superintendent in New York State beginning Aug. 1.

Russ Fire on Chinese

TOKYO — Soviet troops made two amphibious landings inside Red China on a river island in Heilongjiang Province yesterday and opened fire on Chinese soldiers and civilians before being driven back, the New China News Agency (NCNA) said.

NCNA said the troops were supported by a gunboat which opened fire on the Chinese and by "six sorties" of military planes which violated Chinese airspace and circled over the island but did not open fire.

Delay Surcharge Vote

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leaders told the Nixon administration yesterday they would not vote on extending the income tax surcharge until considering tax reform to go with it.

Despite the administration's pleas for speed to help combat inflation, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the finance committee, insisted they would take time to prepare the tax overhaul liberals have been demanding.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen said the Democrats' plan would delay a vote on extending the tax until late September at the earliest.

More Road Revenue

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Richard Ogilvie yesterday signed into law the proposed $2 billion highway bond issue, a 1½ cent increase in the gas tax, and varied increases in car and truck license fees.

Ogilvie said he expects the beginning of repairs to 5,000 miles of roads this year and the start of 2,000 miles of new freeways next year, if the Illinois Supreme Court upholds the bond authority. A court challenge is expected over the three-man highway trust authority to be named by the governor.

Families Evacuated

EAST ST. LOUIS — Some 200 families in St. Clair County have left their homes, flooded by heavy rains and the Mississippi River which continued to rise yesterday.

Most of those evacuated live near the Cahokia Mounds State Park. An estimated 1,500 houses and trailers in the area are said to be affected by the water, but many residents have refused to leave for fear of looting.

Proposal for Jobless

WASHINGTON — President Nixon proposed yesterday to extend unemployment insurance coverage to 48 million new workers, raise the general level of benefits and guarantee a longer period of benefit payments in the event of a recession.

Nixon gave the states, which determine their own benefit levels, two years to meet his goal of assuring that weekly jobless benefits amount to 50 per cent of a worker's lost wages, or said they would face federal action to enforce the standard.

Stennis Urges ABM

WASHINGTON — Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., yesterday urged Senate approval of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system (ABM) and proposed renegotiation of the nation's vast defense treaty commitments overseas with an eye toward eventual reduction of the armed forces.

He told newsmen before debate on the ABM began that any compromise on the ABM would compromise President Nixon's negotiating position at arms control talks with the Russians as much as if it were defeated outright.

SCOTT WOLFARD, of 228 Banbury, Elk Grove Village, offers some hay to the elephants that visited the village as part of the Carson & Barnes five-ring circus Tuesday. Two circus performances, one delayed by rain, were scheduled. Elk Grove Village Kiwanis Club sponsored the affair.

Big Top Comes to Town

by JUDY COVELLI

Thundershowers, mud and an hour and a half wait couldn't squelch the delight of thousands of youngsters as they rushed into the big top for the afternoon performance yesterday of the Carson and Barnes Circus in Elk Grove Village.

The Kiwanis club sponsored the five-ring circus which gave two performances near the Grove Shopping Center.

For 12 frantic minutes Sparky the champion peanut clown encouraged everyone to buy a bag of peanuts as he passed out Snoopy dog dolls, clown and elephant dolls and gifts from a treasure chest as prizes.

THE NINE-MEMBER Logan family stood out among the circus people as a symbol of all that the circus world stands for.

The famous Capt. Fred C. Logan, one of America's two foremost wild animal trainers, led off the circus performance with his trained, but untamed fighting African lions.

To the awe of all the youngsters he rode one for a few seconds in the arena. In the other steel arena Capt. Don De Carr tangled with more jungle beasts.

The Logan Sisters and Brothers with father Pietro performed the Rolly Boly act including acrobatic feats on the trapeze.

Ora and Fred Logan with Don and Karen Carr and others paraded elephants in all five rings, riding on their heads, and being lifted in their trunks. They herded the elephants around, calling them by name, Susan, Mable, Barbara, like they were giving instructions to their children.

OTHER LOGAN members appeared in the ring later with the Canestrelli Whiz Kids and The Antonios. They twined, bounced and balanced in acrobatic and cycling sensations.

Peerless Polo on the tightwire kept the crowd enthralled as he bounced around and did an imitation of a Mexican in his sombrero, holding a bottle of whiskey, all the time maintaining his balance as he swayed.

The Valenciano's Dalmatians, Wright, Woodcock and Connors' dogs were ham actors themselves as they performed their antics. What has to be the smallest dog actor in the world added to the amusement.

Other dogs balanced on jump ropes and jumped double dutch better than many youngsters can.

SKY KING, the famous Kirby Grant from CBS-TV, put in a short appearance during the show, to return at the end to sing "I Love A Circus" for the grand finale with the entire cast. Sky has been traveling with the circus while his serial from years ago is being filmed in color.

Clowns, clowns and more clowns filled the arena between performances and later came to do their own act in the "Wash Woman Blues."

Housing, Money Top Dist. 59 Plans

Housing needs, a financial program, and reading and educational experiences programs headed the list of objectives to improve the school programs next year, it was announced at the Dist. 59 board meeting Monday.

The objectives have been incorporated into the policy manual of the district, according to Al Waltman, newly appointed acting superintendent of schools.

The passing of the bond referendum for housing needs of the district was the first objective.

The establishment of a financial program leading to a reduction in the use of tax anticipation warrants was also discussed.

DONALD THOMAS, former superintendent, said an increase in the financial resources of the district is imperative.

"Without adequate financial support, the educational program of the district will suffer greatly. This objective is one of the most important. It must be dealt with honestly and quickly," Thomas said.

Other objectives included the development of a reading program for retarded children and the development of continuing educational experiences program for board members, administrators and teachers.

According to Bob Brower, board member, the in-service educational needs of the schools will be met with enthusiasm this year. Pre-school workshops and grade-level meetings across the district are being planned, Brower said.

Development of a comprehensive communication system with staff members and citizens and cooperative educational programs with the business and industrial community were also objectives.

The expansion of community education services and the establishment of a pilot program at Mark Hopkins School were among the other objectives discussed. In relation to these a summary report on community educational programs will be given at the Aug. 4 meeting of the board by Leah Cummins, community education coordinator.

In other action, the board passed a resolution providing for a ten per cent levy to cover costs and losses in collection of taxes.

negotiations between black leaders and Arlington Park Race Track officials made "surprisingly good progress" Tuesday, according to Charles Armstrong, one of the negotiators and editor of the South Suburban News.

The meeting was scheduled as a result of black demands concerning hiring practices at the track.

The demands were presented after a demonstration two weeks ago, sparked when the contracts of four black employees were terminated.

Armstrong was arrested during the demonstration on charges of disorderly conduct.

Attending the meeting were four representatives of black organizations, representatives of all the unions representing thoroughbred and harness racing, David Pearson, executive director of the Illinois Bureau of Racing Police, and Mrs. Marje Everett, president of the Chicago Thoroughbred Enterprises.

ARMSTRONG SAID, "We have reached an agreement with unions and management that they will proceed with deliberate speed in hiring black help."

He said the group would meet again in two weeks at the State of Illinois Building in Chicago.

Armstrong also announced, "I'm happy to say 19 black mutual clerks were hired over the weekend."

Those appointed to a committee to continue studying the problem at the track are Mrs. Everett, Pearson, Armstrong, Asby Smith, director of economic development of the Urban League; Leonard Joyce of the Conference of Religion and Race; Lewis Martin of the Chicago Defender; Jesse Taylor of Jobs Now; and three union leaders to be chosen at a later date.

The resolution came as a result of a 11.8 per cent shortage between the amount of revenue the district should have received and the amount actually collected.

According to Frank Hines, Dist. 59 Attorney, ten per cent is the maximum the county clerk's office will levy in addition to the bond levy to make up the difference between the assessed tax rate and the actual amount paid by residents of the district.

BIRDMAN OF PALATINE. Richard Sloan is intent as he adds a few strokes to his latest drawing. Sloan is an expert on birds and one of his drawings soon will be hung in the Smithsonian Institute.

His Brush Guided by Nature

by MARTHA KOPER

Even the suburbs so close to the big city have some wide open spaces for people looking for the quiet and solitude of nature.

In Palatine Township, Richard Sloan has found a few peaceful spots, but he's keeping their locations secret. That's because he goes there to watch — to watch nature, the animals and, most importantly, to watch the birds.

He's learned to be an accurate observer of birds in order to paint them. Listed among the top wildlife artists of today, Sloan spends his days and nights learning about birds so others might see what he sees in them.

Although he knew he wanted to be an artist when he was just 15, it took a little longer to realize his latent interest in wildlife.

"GROWING UP in the sterile city of Chicago with a family who cared and knew nothing about nature, my love of the outdoors still amazes me a little," he smiled.

At 15, he was the youngest student at the American Academy of Art, where his destiny was determined. It came from a fellow art student from Michigan with a strong interest in wildlife.

"After a few trips to Michigan to hunt or just walk with him, I decided I wanted to paint wildlife all the time.

"It's kind of funny, because my friend is the director of art for General Motors now."

Sloan was hooked, though, and after graduation began looking for ways to make his dreams come true. To begin with, he had to find a market for wildlife artistry and that wasn't easy.

Unlike most creative careers, a wildlife artist dwells on accuracy. He tries to capture what is there for everyone to see.

BEFORE SLOAN picks up his paint brush, he must do a lot of watching and reading. He goes to a place where he knows he'll find a certain bird and begins sketching. Then, he reads about the bird and watches again making sure to keep notes which will help him recall color and natural surroundings. He takes a camera too.

His preliminary work usually also includes a trip to the museum for a close look at the skin and feathers of a bird he's ready to paint.

"The most important thing about my painting is accuracy," he said.

"It's also very important to me to be able to inject a breath of life into the bird. That can only be done after observing the bird for a long time.

"Then, I find myself crawling inside its head to find out how it lives and survives."

That technique and his love of nature probably account for his passion for conservation. He's worried about what man is doing to nature's habitants.

"PAINTING BIRDS makes me happy, but if at the same time, I can make people a little more aware of what we stand to lose by our carelessness, I'll be even happier," he said.

"What gives us the right to exterminate a species which was here long before us?"

In the suburbs, Sloan believes it's just a matter of time before his nature spots are gone. Within walking distance of his home at 2283 Sunset Drive, there's a quiet place with ponds and trees, but "I expect to see a steam shovel in there any day now," he said.

With an ultimate desire of living in the northwest part of the country, Sloan hopes there will be some places left for animals and birds to survive.

To his delight, the market for wildlife artistry has steadily grown since 15 years ago when he first decided to try his hand in the art.

"At the time, everyone told me I could never make a living by only painting wildlife and I had a long procession of studio jobs where I had to paint everything," he said.

NOW, IN HIS early 30s, he's booked up with commissions to paint birds until 1973. To add to his success, his paintings are becoming known all over the country. Just last week, he received word that a Sloan bluebird will hang in the permanent collection at the Smithsonian Institute.

He's about to finish a series of 10 paintings showing the life cycle of the purple martin which will go into a traveling exhibit. For the paintings, he even spent last winter in South America to see the bird in every natural habitat.

Asked to paint the purple martin by the Griggsville Wild Bird Society, Sloan has agreed to donating proceeds from the exhibit for conservation.

A lot has happened to Sloan since he was almost ready to give up wildlife painting a few years ago. Since that time, there's been one achievement after another.

Warns of Nixon's Safety

"President Nixon's safety will be threatened" during his upcoming trip to Rumania, the Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom warned yesterday.

Lindstrom said the source of his information "was the Rumanian underground."

He said he received information about the threats both from the American government and directly from the Rumanian underground.

Lindstrom charged that a Maoist element in Rumania is the group posing the threat. He explained it this way: "We know that one item of key importance on Nixon's itinerary (while he is in Rumania) is to have secret talks on Vietnam. There is a Maoist element in Rumania opposed to these negotiations."

LINDSTROM, WHO lives in Prospect Heights, is the national chairman of the "Remember the Pueblo Committee." He is pastor of the Church of Christian Liberty and headmaster of Christian Liberty Academy.

Lindstrom flew to Washington D. C. last night to protest Nixon's planned Rumanian trip. He plans the protest today on the steps of the U.S. Capitol.

Lindstrom said the protest was to consist of three parts: A written protest statement, the release of information pertaining to Nixon's trip, and a request for a meeting with Secretary of State William Rogers.

Lindstrom said the protest is not under the sponsorship of the Pueblo Committee. However, the three to five people who were to accompany him to Washington all are members of that committee.

A DEMONSTRATION involving several thousand people is planned in two weeks he said.

Lindstrom said he opposes Nixon's trip because "it is un-Christian to join hands with Rumania, who has joined hands with the Viet Cong." He said Rumania was the first country to officially recognize the Viet Cong regime.

Lindstrom also told the Herald yesterday that "within several days" he would be releasing further information on the concessions alleged to have been granted to Cuba by the United States in order to procure the release of the Pueblo crewmen.

At a press conference June 20, Lindstrom charged the U.S. had made concessions to Cuba in return for the men's release. However, he would not elaborate at that time on what the concessions were.

Man Held on Robbery Charges

A former employee of the White Pines Country Club in Bensenville is being held by Bensenville police on charges of robbery.

Terry Voyer, also known as Lloyd Anderson Rand, was found by police early Tuesday when a club employee reported a broken window.

Voyer, who said he was seeking reemployment at White Pines, told police he broke the window to get in out of the rain and fell asleep on the bed. Voyer said later he was a friend of the occupant of the room, Sam Booth, another employee of the club, who was out of town for the weekend.

Police took Voyer to the station for questioning. Later that morning, Booth reported he was missing $35 and a pair of shoes. He said he remembered Voyer and had not given him permission to enter the room.

Police are holding the suspect while checking into his background.

Park Maintenance Department Moved

Effective last week, Hoffman Estates Park District maintenance department is based at Ida Voegel Park, Mrs. Anne Schuerings, park office manager has announced.

According to Mrs. Schuerings, all park equipment has been moved from other storage areas and will be housed in a large barn on the Voegel property.

For almost a year, the park district has been negotiating the purchase of the 10 acre site at Higgins and Jones Roads and plan to develop it into a major recreational site.

They are presently planning to sell approximately $230,000 in bonds to finance the purchase and cover necessary renovation on the site.

Job Training OKd

Elk Grove Township School Dist. 57 will get $5,000 for a vocational training program, Elk Grove Township officials decided Monday.

The members of the township board voted to approve $5,000 in financing for the Dist. 57 program.

The school district first requested the funds several months ago as a continuation of a program for "under achievers" in the district.

Elk Grove Township funded such a program last year but some doubt arose over the continuation of the funding for the September session.

Michael Taylor, Elk Grove Township

youth commissioner, told board members that questions about the number of children benefited by the township money have been answered and recommended the funding.

MEMBERS OF TOWNSHIP government made it clear that the funding for Dist. 57 would be considered a pilot program which must be made self sufficient by the schools. The $5,000 allotment is for a one-year period.

Taylor reported to the board that the school district was already committed to the vocational project based on educators' opinions that the program is a success.

The $5,000 from the township is considered a way of helping the district "upgrade and expand" last year's program.

The initial year of the project brought students from Central and Lincoln junior highs to Forest View High School for shop courses. September's sessions are expected to take place at Lincoln.

In passing on the $5,000 allotment, Taylor and Elk Grove Township Auditor Richard Hall complained about newspaper stories which detailed a delay in the program's funding.

Taylor said the articles were a form of pressure on the township and Hall said, "I hope they don't think that's going to get them any money in the future."

Air Force Band Gives Park Concert Tonight

The Chanute 506th Air Force Band will perform at 7 p.m. today at Grant Wood School in Elk Grove Village.

The band is the second in a series of weekly concerts this summer sponsored by the Elk Grove Park District.

The series will continue until Aug. 27, every Wednesday night in the asphalt area adjoining Grant Wood School.

The concerts, open to the public, will move indoors in the event of rain.

Con-Con Hopefuls Hit Political Coup

An 18-hour vigil in a crowded Springfield office ended when Wilfred Robbins of Mount Prospect was placed seventh on a slate of 12 candidates for the Constitutional Convention.

Despite an all-night wait in the office of the Secretary of State, Robbins and about 40 other Con-Con aspirants from all over the state were edged out at the last minute by an apparent political coup.

Competition for the number one spot on the ballot for the Con-Con election was so high in Springfield and elsewhere, according to Robbins, that when the 40 individuals who waited all night found out that their wait would be fruitless, a shoving match ensued.

ANGERED BY what appeared to be political gerrymandering for the choice number one spot on the ballot, the local candidates got so heated up that members of the Capital police, the State Highway Patrol and the Secretary of State's police unit had to be called.

"It was really an experience," Robbins said later. "We had waited all night to file first and then at the last minute they started rolling in these petitions ahead of us."

Robbins said those who found themselves in poor positions on the ballot because of an apparent political arrangement then got together in a loose agreement to protest what they termed a "fiasco."

During the long night's wait, a certain camaraderie developed among the candidates, Robbins reported. "People from all over the state came and sat together and exchanged views. By the time the office finally opened we had all had quite a time together."

ONE WOMAN candidate was handing out crackers and spread, someone did a jig and everyone was talking about the need to revise the state constitution.

Much of that spirit turned into anger, however, when the candidates saw absentee candidates put ahead of them on the ballot.

There was some talk, Robbins said, of demanding an explanation through the courts from Secretary of State Paul Powell. This notion, Robbins reported, is not one the group of dissident candidates expect to pursue.

"I think the thing for all of us to do now is go to the people," Robbins said. "The number one place on the ballot won't mean that much if the voters understand what went down in Springfield that day."

Guth To Perform At Country Club

Folk singer-guitarist John Guth will give a performance at the Mount Prospect Country Club park July 26, according to Bruce Rose, promoter of the event.

Guth, who has played his guitar at various clubs in Chicago and the suburbs, will perform in the Chestnut Room of the park building beginning at 8 p.m.

The performance will be given with the cooperation of the Mount Prospect Park District. Admission is $1.

Request Rezoning

A recommendation to rezone a 70-foot strip of land at Elmhurst Avenue and Central Road as part of a four-acre parcel of land for a new post office will be made to the Mount Prospect Village Board by the plan commission.

The property is owned by Mount Prospect Fire Chief Edwin Haberkamp, who is seeking a commercial rezoning classification. The federal government has an option on the site, once the rezoning petition is approved by the village board.

The motion to approve the request was made by Comr. Harold Ross at last week's meeting. The motion carried with seven votes approving the petition and two votes abstaining.

THE REZONING on Haberkamp's property is contingent upon the sale of land to the post office. If the site should be rejected by the government, the rezoning classification will be cancelled.

"Once a real estate officer recommends a site for a new post office, we rarely take exception to his recommendation. We very seldom reject our agent's suggestion on new locations, unless something is drastically wrong," E. P. Gailward, director of engineering facilities for the post office, said.

"Once the land is rezoned by the trustees, we'll review the real estate report, engineering feasibility studies, and property value. If the site meets our final approval, we'll open the competitive bidding on the purchase of the lot and the construction of the building. The site will then be leased to the post office on a long-term arrangement," Gailward said.

Although no official plans have been drawn for the new post office, it is expected that the new building will have twice as much space as the present post office on Maple and Evergreen streets. Pending approval by the village board and post office officials, construction is expected to begin within the next year.

FLYING BLUE ANGELS will perform their close-order drills this weekend at the annual air show held at the DuPage County Airport, on Route 64 near West Chicago. Parachuting acts, antique planes and other displays will also be presented.

RipCORDS Ready

Parachuting, while it never loses its fundamental drama, is more than jumping from an airplane, pulling a ripcord and hoping for the best.

From its uncertain beginnings, when it was reserved for stunt men, rugged paratroopers and desperate pilots, parachuting has developed into both an exciting sport and an exacting science.

Among the finest parachutists in the world, with an average of 850 jumps per man, are the Golden Knights of the U. S. Army Parachute Team, who will perform during the summer's annual Air Show, co-sponsored by WIND Radio and the Greater Chicago and Antique Airplane Association, Saturday and Sunday at DuPage County Airport. This event also will include the Navy's Blue Angels, the nation's first official jet flight demonstration team.

WIND Radio will have a booth at the airport and personalities Chuck Benson and Kurt Russell, Lee Rodgers, Roy West, Dale Ulmer, Bill Berg, Jack Altman and Ted Anthony will be on hand throughout the two days to emcee the events.

THE 10 MAIN attractions both days will include a hot air balloon ascension; four of the world's oldest flying airplanes — a 1912 Curtiss Pusher, a replica of a 1908 French Demoiselle, a 1929 Antique Traveler D-4-D and a 1940 P-64, and a precision flight demonstration in a P-51 by Bob Hoover, president of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots.

There also will be a public display of antique, home-built and experimental aircraft, including an MS-1 Stinson, which was pulled out of an ice cap in Greenland recently after being there 40 years. The plane made an emergency landing in 1928 on a flight from Rockford to Stockholm.

The Golden Knights are formidable competitors who hold 87 out of 128 men's world parachuting accuracy records and have produced two world and five national parachuting champions. They are also called on frequently to help develop new parachuting equipment and techniques for the nation's airborne forces, space program and other government agencies.

Each member of the Golden Knights, established in 1959, is an expert who can link up with other jumpers in the air, glide for miles across the sky while in free fall, fly in formation with other jumpers and perform other aerial maneuvers.

JUMP ALTITUDES are up to 8,800 feet in competition and twice that high in demonstrations. At two and a half miles above the ground, demonstration jumpers must wear smoke grenades attached to their boots so their paths will be marked for the spectators below.

Aim for September

Construction on the recent expansions of the Mount Prospect Public Library should be completed by early September, according to library director Mrs. Mary Jo Hutchings.

"We're hoping we can stay open during the process," says the librarian, who maintains that "it's business as usual at the library," despite spasmodic shut-offs of the air-conditioning ducts are being ung and air-conditioning ducts are being uninstalled on the second floor and the Emerson Street entrance is closed because of work on the stairway.

Calling the building program "the most economical way that we could expand in the present structure," Mrs. Hutchings points out that the remodeled building will be more efficient.

One thousand square feet of space are being added to the second floor to provide a new children's room and a workroom and office for the children's librarian.

"THERE WILL BE new restroom facilities for children on the upper level, which are not now available," says the library director. "And hopefully there will be a very pleasant space for us to continue our story hour."

Old magazines, which are housed on the second floor, will become part of a research center at the west end of the building, where the current magazines are now on display. Included in this part of the library will be the reference section and the adult non-fiction.

Fiction, records and current records will be moved to the present children's room. Mrs. Hutchings hopes that the adult section will soon include a listening center.

The book processing center from upstairs will come down "where it logically belongs" to join the expanded facilities of the workroom. The present librarian's office and the staff room will be relocated on the first floor, with the staff room being equipped with lockers for the first time.

THESE CHANGES were needed, according to Mrs. Hutchings, "because we are constantly growing, and we now have reached the point of departmentalization." In the past five years, the library has added nearly 20,000 volumes to its collection.

"We realize that this is a very temporary expansion," the librarian says. "We'll have to be thinking in terms of a major expansion program in the next three to four years."

Thieves Hit Three Cars in One Night

Three cars parked at the rear of an apartment building on Judith Ann Drive in Mount Prospect were burglarized early Sunday morning.

Frank Pagura told police that someone pried open the vent window on his utility truck and took several tools valued at $600. An electric rotary hammer, angle grinder, tool chest and briefcase were reported missing from the truck.

THERESA SHIREMAN reported that the convertible top on her 1968 MG had been slit and the boot cover was missing. It appeared that an unsuccessful attempt was made to steal the auto, according to Mount Prospect police.

Another apartment resident, Mary Beth Cook, reported that several stereo tapes, a Hurst T-handle shift knob and a tachometer were stolen from her 1969 Oldsmobile Cutlass the same night the other thefts occurred.

Tarragon Club To Sponsor Dance

The Tarragon Club of Mount Prospect will sponsor a dance July 13 at Nielson's Restaurant, 6475 N. Mannheim Road in Des Plaines at 8 p.m.

All young adults age 21 and older are invited to attend. Music will be provided by the Peter Kaye Quartet.

For further information contact Shirley Keenan, publicity chairman, at 4502 N. Whipple in Chicago.

A 7-year-old boy was taken to Northwest Community Hospital after he got his hand stuck in an automatic ball return at the Striking Bowling Lanes in Mount Prospect last Saturday.

Stephen Brinkman of Arlington Heights suffered minor cuts and bruises.

View Harper Budget Levy

Trustees on Harper Junior College's budget committee will review the proposed 1969-70 budget levy at an 8 p.m. meeting today.

The budget — expected to be "in the red" despite the junior college district levying at its 11-cent maximum per $100 assessed valuation — must go on public display by next Monday.

State law requires local governmental budgets be open for public inspection for 30 days before the annual budget hearing, already set by the Harper board for Aug. 14.

HEAVY INCREASE in the college's operating expenses stems largely from higher salaries for its faculty, increased expenditures needed this year as the school moves into its new campus at Roselle and Algonquin roads, Palatine, and an expected doubling in student enrollment.

William Mann, vice president for business colleges, is expected to recommend that the college cover its expected operating deficit by issuing tax anticipation warrants, borrowing against 1969 property taxes to be collected in 1970.

Candelaria Heads Teacher Search

By MARY SCHLOTT
O A Candelaria of Arlington Heights has taken a leave of absence from his position as superintendent of Maple School District 30 Northbrook to head up a county project aimed at recruiting mature women for careers as teachers.

Cook County School Supt. Robert P. Hinchman has been given a $230,000 federal grant for the training project.

Candelaria this week began looking for the 60 prospective teachers and lining up the school districts where they will work part time.

Northwest suburban school systems like

Schaumburg Dist. 54 and Wheeling Dist. 21 will probably get priority when the teacher trainees are being placed, since both must cope with a fast-growing student population despite financial problems and a high teacher turnover rate. Candelaria says the project will place its trainees with those factors in mind.

CANDELARIA'S project will provide a combination of college coursework and a year of practical classroom experience for 60 trainees with college degrees. Most will qualify for Illinois teachers' certificates by the time the project ends.

Though the project will not exclude men,

Candelaria thinks that most of the persons who apply will be women college graduates whose children are now in school.

"We're looking for the gal who got a bachelor's degree in biology 15 years ago and has found she likes kids," Candelaria said.

Chief goal of the project, Candelaria said, is to try to draw on an age group that might lend a degree of stability to the teaching profession. "We have a 30 to 33 per cent teacher turnover in kindergarten through fourth grade throughout the U.S. This is abysmal!"

AN INVETERATE critic of stodginess in the educational "establishment," Candelaria added that he hopes to show the benefits of exposing trainees to experiences outside the standard teachers college route to certification.

During the first semester the teacher trainees will be paid $75 a week to attend college classes in the morning and teach in the afternoon — at no cost to the school district.

During the second semester they will teach full time, drawing salaries negotiated with the individual district, and attend college classes in the late afternoon or at night.

"We're going to take the college to the suburbs," Candelaria explained, "offering the classes at two centers, one in the southern suburbs and the other west or northwest Cook County."

A CONSORTIUM of six metropolitan area colleges — Concordia Teachers College, River Forest, Loyola, DePaul and Roosevelt Universities, Northeastern Illinois State College and Chicago State College — will jointly staff the two centers.

A community college, Prairie State in Chicago Heights, will train another 30 women as teachers' aides but these trainees will probably be drawn from the south suburban area.

Candelaria told the Herald interested women may either apply directly to local school superintendents or through the county office. Persons wanting more information should call him at 321-7610 or talk to Asst. County Supt. Wade Arends, 321-7633.

He said the local school superintendents will have the final word on which trainees will work in their schools.

Funds for the project will come from the federal Education Professions Development Act.

Pilot Course in Plastic Set

The Plastics Education Foundation Inc., a national organization dedicated to quality educational resources in plastics, has selected Elgin Community College for inauguration of a curriculum in plastics technology.

The two-year program, which will be offered this September, leads to an Associate of Applied Science degree. Graduates will be prepared to assume first-line supervision positions such as foreman and quality control supervisor. Industrial representatives say graduates could look toward the position of plant manager as a long-range goal.

According to Robert Sherman, regional manager for the Society of the Plastics Industry Inc., Elgin Community College was selected for the junior college pilot program because of its advanced thinking in vocational-technical education. The college currently offers 14 occupational programs in addition to career-related education in other areas.

IT IS HOPED that the curriculum being developed here will eventually be put into effect throughout the country, Sherman said.

An advisory committee composed of representatives from six area plastics firms has been formed to work with college administration. Donald Baxter, president of Suburban Plastics Company, is its chairman. Members include Gordon P. Dillon, technical service manager, Conolite Division of Woodall Industries; Henry Tschappet, vice-president and general manager, Elgin Molded Plastics Company; Robert Hoffer, president, Hoffer Plastics; Charles Davis, plant manager, Phillips Products Co.; and Emil Borch, plant manager, Union Carbide Plastics Co.

Although the current course outline beyond the first semester is still tentative, the plastics technology program will include three semesters of in-plant training. The six participating plastics companies have agreed to turn their plant into part-time laboratories.

STUDENTS WILL be compensated at the rate of $2.40 per hour for the time spent on the job as well as receive college credit for their work. Only students with declared majors in plastics technology will be eligible for the in-plant section of the curriculum.

The first semester will include, in addition to basic college courses in mathematics, physics and economics, an introductory class titled "Plastics Materials in Application."

John Sapiente, sales manager for Suburban Plastics and the instructor, said terminology of the plastics industry will be covered in this initial class.

"We will study the types of plastics, their uses and the reasons for their uses as well as methods of plastics fabrication," he said. According to Sapiente, lecturers from the plastics industry are planned for each of the 16 weeks.

ALSO INCLUDED in the two-year program are classes in hydraulic mechanisms, electronic circuits, quality control and plastics tooling.

The Society of the Plastics Industry, Inc. and the Society of Plastics Engineers, Inc., have jointly formed the foundation to provide the industry with qualified talent at all levels of capability needed for maintaining its growth.

Students interested in entering the plastics technology program should contact Elgin Community College, 373 E. Chicago St., Elgin for information regarding admission.

Traffic Incident Is Settled With Fists

Four area youths settled a traffic incident with fists, a club, and a can of dog repellent last Friday morning at 3:30 a.m. in a parking lot on Rand Road according to Mount Prospect police.

William Painter, 19, of Algonquin and Thomas Murphy, 19, of Wauconda were each driving separate cars and had stopped at a traffic light on Rand Road. Painter said that a car pulled along side them at the light and two youths shouted dirty names at the drivers.

THE BOYS THEN PULLED off the road to settle the insult. Richard Walden, 19, of Rolling Meadows sprayed Murphy with dog repellent, while Painter reportedly beat James Powers, 19, of Palatine with a club.

A witness to the fight phoned the Mount Prospect police department to report the incident. Powers was taken to Northwest Community Hospital with minor cuts and bruises. No charges were filed.

Neighbor 'Dog Fight' Remains To Be Seen

Mrs. Jane Krampett, 23 S. George St. and Mount Prospect police that her neighbor threatened to kill her dogs if they continued to use his yard as a dumping ground.

Michael Lewicki, 850 E. Lincoln, told police that Mrs. Krampett walks her dogs to a field south of his property but sometimes he dogs do not reach the field in time.

Police advised Mrs. Krampett to keep her dogs in her own yard and told Lewicki to call the police rather than kill the dogs if he had a further complaint.

Youthful Beer Thief Spotted, Flees Woman

A Mount Prospect woman investigating a noise in her garage found a young man taking cans of beer from the garage refrigerator and putting them into a paper bag.

Mrs. Doris Bryant, 610 S. Main St., told police that the youth fled through a window when she entered the garage. He was described as about 17 years old with a medium build and light brown hair. He was seen running toward Wille Street.

Smith Named College Services Director

John L. Smith of Joliet has been named director of institutional services for Elgin Community College according to G. Renner, president.

Smith, who previously held the position of assistant business manager for Dist. 96 in Lockport, replaces Richard Schummel. He has been appointed director of planning and research.

Smith received his B.S. in business management from Northern Illinois University in 1961. He is currently working on a master's degree in school business management at the same institution.

He is a member of both the Illinois and National Association of School Business Officials.

His experience also includes a period in sales for 3M Co. and work in industrial engineering for the E. J. & E. Railway in Joliet.

Church Plans To Add 300-Seat Auditorium

An auditorium with a 300-seat capacity will be added to First Baptist Church of Hoffman Estates, 700 Illinois Blvd.

The $100,000 two-story structure will also house elementary Sunday school classrooms, the church office, the kitchen and the Day Nursery School.

THE AUDITORIUM will have laminated beams and will be carpeted throughout the building. The builder is Associated Church Builders Inc. of Palatine.

Members of the church building committee are Art Knop, chairman; Les Arnold, Ken Whiting; Mrs. Nancy Trenary and Marvin Yager; Rev. W. D. Millican is pastor.

Arson Hinted In Home Blaze

Arson is suspected by Hoffman Estates police after a fire Friday night caused an estimated $10,000 damage to the home of a vacationing couple.

A spokesman for the Hoffman Estates Fire Department said most of the damage to the home owned by Joe Nikrant, 394 Mayfield, who is in Florida, was caused by internal burning and smoke.

He said the roof of the house was ventilated to allow firemen to fight the blaze and clear the smoke. Approximately 30 to 35 men responded to the fire.

Hoffman Estates police are investigating the incident.

Man Leads Police On Foot Chase

A Chicago man fled Hoffman Estates police on a foot chase Thursday as they attempted to arrest him for allegedly operating a motorcycle without protective glasses.

Police charged Michael Ross with improper passing, disobeying a stop sign, evading and fleeing a police officer, driving without his operators license and disorderly conduct.

Police said Ross ditched his vehicle at Route 72 and 58 in Hoffman Estates and ran about 200 yards near the Heritage Trace apartments where he was apprehended.

Ross was released on $500 bond.

Cheerleading Course Registration Open

Elgin girls interested in learning the fundamentals of cheerleading can sign up for the four-week course offered by the Elgin YWCA beginning July 15.

Sessions will be held each Tuesday and Thursday and girls can register for the 10 to 11:30 a.m. or noon to 1:30 p.m. classes.

On the last week of the course Elgin Community College cheerleaders will judge the girls and rate them individually. Registrations are now being accepted at the Elgin YWCA.

CHUCK WILLOUR

IT STARTED to rain in mid-April, 1969, and it never stopped.

By the end of July, baseball leagues all over the state of Illinois found themselves faced with a seemingly insoluble dilemma: with less than half a season remaining, virtually every ballclub — from semi-pro right on down to Little League — had at least two-thirds of its schedule left to play.

No action was taken at that time since the opinion of an overwhelming majority was that "this blasted stuff just can't keep coming and coming. It has to stop some time!"

By mid-August of that year, the overwhelming majority was proved wrong. The rain could indeed keep coming and coming; it did not have to stop sometime.

And so it was that the First Baseball Emergency Committee was formed, to study this problem. Appropriately enough, since all baseball men like to think of themselves as guardians of all that is good and clean in America, the committee's first action was to assign an investigating team headed by a group of John Birchers to find out if the rain was a Communist-inspired plot.

Failing to find any proof that this was so, the investigating committee next looked into the possibility that the United States Supreme Court had made any recent rulings making it a legal necessity for rain to fall unendingly on Illinois. This, too, proved to be fruitless investigation, and the investigating committee was disbanded.

The next order of business was for the First Baseball Emergency Committee to amend baseball rules to force baseball games to be played regardless of the weather and condition of the field.

This worked out well enough for the first few days, but soon the committee received a telephone call from an irate Mrs. I. M. Tidy, who said that she now had half of a baseball diamond in her basement. At first Mrs. Tidy's complaint was ignored, but soon the committee was forced to recognize an irrefutable fact of nature: namely, that water mixed with dirt makes mud, mud sticks to such things as cleats on baseball shoes; and when those shoes go home, the mud dries out and crumbles off.

A special team of baseball men was sent to Mrs. Tidy's home to ascertain the truth of her complaint, and sure enough there it was — half of Sidney Park's infield right in her basement, a huge mound on top of which sat her son's baseball shoes.

It was at the same time that a near disaster struck which also forced baseball men to revise their policy of playing games regardless of weather. Young Tommy Jones, playing for the Euclid Cubs Little League team, smashed a home run on a bunt when the ball hit the puddle in front of home plate and neither the catcher nor the pitcher of the opposing squad could find it. To make matters worse, young Tommy, age nine, almost drowned when he tried to slide into home plate and ended up in the same bottomless puddle his bunt had splashed into. Tommy, fortunately, was dragged from the puddle after going down for the third time by his alert manager, who wisely deposited the youngster on home plate for the winning run before offering mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Faced by these and other problems, the First Baseball Emergency Committee decided that some positive action had to be taken against the never-ending rain.

Accordingly, they sent a special envoy out West to procure the services of Chief Aqua Pura, the country's most famous rainmaker and curer of gout. The chief wasn't sure if he was up to the job since making, not stopping, rain was his business, but gave it a try anyway.

And he was successful too — to an extent. Performing his now famous Dry Dance, Aqua Pura got the rain to stop falling for a record five minutes at Patriots Field in La Grange. But the game had to be cancelled anyway when one youngster, not having seen a blue sky in over five months, raced hysterically through the crowd screaming "The sky is falling! The sky is falling!" Within seconds, the crowd, also frightened by blue sky, had taken their sons home to the safety of their storm cellars.

Desperate now for a solution, the committee decided that if you can't beat 'em, join 'em. And so, rules were changed to make baseball a sport that should only be played on a wet and sometimes submerged field. Certain rules of water polo were incorporated into the new game, and were incorporated into the new game, and to make sure that the public was aware of this change in emphasis, all ball parks were renamed: Wrigley Field was retitled Sludge Park, Sox Park was thereafter called Soggy Park, and even Recreation Park in Arlington Heights received a new name, Puddle Park.

Of course there were repercussions. The White Sox, who had just spent thousands of dollars installing a Grastex infield now found no use for it, but the team swiftly shot to the top of the standings when other ballclubs came into Soggy Park to play on the American League's only underwater field. The Cubs, on the other hand, found it difficult to make their usual fantastic catches and impossible to hit their daily quota of home runs in 13 feet of water, and subsequently sank to the bottom of the National League.

Again, though, unsurmountable problems developed. As the water level of Lake Michigan rose, fans in Sludge Park (formerly Wrigley Field) were swept away into the lake. And because there were only enough fans to fill the park in the first place, attendance dropped severely. Of course, the Coast Guard complained to the Cubs that all its time was spent trying to round up the hundreds of drifting fans, and it particularly objected to the language of those who wore caps and buttons and T-shirts saying that they were Bleacher Bums.

About the least offensive remark that the Coast Guard could release to the general press was, "Hey, Hey Heeyyyyy!"

Forced by Presidential decree to desist from playing baseball in Sludge Park, the First Baseball Emergency Committee decided that if it was unsafe to play at Sludge Park, it was unsafe to play anywhere else in the state. So baseball was officially banned in Illinois.

Many cheered the decision, but most were heartbroken.

And it was one of those who was most heartbroken, Miss Sadie Glutz of the north side of Chicago — an 87-year-old spinster who at the age of 19 decided that if she could not marry John Honus Wagner, then by gosh, she wasn't going to get married ever — who came up with a solution.

Taking the First Baseball Emergency Committee outside in the incessant downpour, Miss Glutz had the committee recite after her: "Rain, rain, go away, come again some other day..." And the rain stopped.

Heights Shakes Skid, Shows Life in League

A week ago today Lloyd Meyer, coach of the Arlington Heights entry in the Ninth District American Legion baseball league, wouldn't have given his squad much of a chance to rank as a title contender.

But that was a week ago. And in the ensuing seven days three things have happened to change his mind: first, a rugged practice Thursday night in which every member of the team worked on his particular problems; second, twin victories over the weekend, a 3-1 edging of then-league leading Park Ridge Red and a 9-0 rout of River Grove; and third, the realization that the double victory had boosted Heights from the middle of the league standings with a 3-2 record right into a tie for second place with a 5-2 mark.

THE INDEPENDENCE Day victory over Park Ridge Red was probably the biggest boost to Heights' chances in the league. Red came into the fray with a perfect 5-0 mark in Ninth District play, but after leaving Recreation Park Friday night that perfect mark was no longer.

Big Jim Bokelmann handcuffed the Reds, scattering seven hits through seven innings so that the most Park Ridge could come up with was a single run in the fourth off three singles and a steal home.

And Heights, meanwhile, was responding with a four hit attack that had every hit but one count for a run.

IN THE FIRST, Heights scored a single tally when first baseman Dave Armstrong reached on an error with one out and went to second on a passed ball. After Jack Bastable grounded out for the second out, Dave Lundstedt chased Armstrong home with a shot to right.

Heights didn't score again until the sixth and in the meantime Park Ridge had managed to knot things up in the fourth.

But in the sixth, Meyer's diamond men struck for two more runs when Armstrong singled and then waltzed home on Bastable's towering four bag blast to center field.

THE MOUND VICTORY went to Bokelmann, who chucked all seven innings, fanned seven and walked two.

Saturday's contest featured Gary Anderson, a lanky right-handed fireballer, on the mound against River Grove. And Anderson was more than up to the task of hurling against Post 335, allowing only three hits and one walk while striking out five to post the mound win.

And his teammates, meanwhile, were doing their part, banging out 14 hits to give Anderson a nine run margin.

Heights again struck for a run in the first inning — on a walk, an error and a single by third sacker Bruce Frase — and added another single tally in the second on a double by Lundstedt and a single by Anderson.

RIVER GROVE tightened up in the third and allowed no runs, but in the fourth Arlington pushed home three more runs when Dow Woodward singled, Mike Wulbecker doubled, Anderson tripled to clear the bases, and — after two outs — Bastable smacked a double to bring him home.

The fifth was again fruitless for Arlington, but the sixth and seventh meant four more runs for Heights when a pair of singles and an infield ground-out brought Wulbecker home in the sixth, and a triple off the bat of Frase and singles by Armstrong, Woodward and Wulbecker brought home three more.

Arlington is now tied with Park Ridge for second in the Ninth District with a 5-2 mark; Palatine leads the league with a 5-1 record.

Bruns Hurls Win

Tommy Bruns fired a seven-inning two-hit shutout as Fremd defeated Barrington 2-0 in a Northwest Division high school baseball game last week.

Bruns, the ace of the Fremd staff during the regular high school season, fanned five batters and was in complete control most of the way.

The Vikings scored the only run needed in the first inning when Mike Kolze reached first on an error, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a wild pick-off throw.

Kolze scored again in the sixth inning as he doubled, went on to third on Dave Wickersham's sacrifice and scored on a fielder's choice.

The win boosted Fremd's record to 5-1 in the Northwest Division.

White Pines G.C.

(Editor's note: This is one in a series of articles which will introduce the pro or manager, his course and what the golfer has available to Paddock area golfers.)

by PAUL LOGAN
"The Chick Evans Golf Club."
The name has a nice ring to it and, should White Pines Golf Club ever decide to change its name, it would be a fitting one for the Bensenville 36-hole layout.

For 13 out of the last 14 years the Chick Evans Amateur Tournament has been staged at the Bensenville park district owned and Branigan Organization managed club. The reason for holding this fine tournament at White Pines can probably be traced to its fine attributes of ideal location and top quality.

Jim Rodio, head club professional, explains the geographical standpoint:
"This course is so darn popular because it's so near to the city. Golfers don't want to drive as far as Addison from the city and the course is good playing and holds up well."

The course boasts two fine 18-hole tests—the North Course, a 6,252-yarder, and the South Course, a 6,340-yarder. The only problem facing the average golfer is which course to play.

A golfer posed this question while paying his green fees and Rodio remarked, "Which is easier all depends on how you are hitting the ball at the time." Or, in other words, both are challenging.

Rodio rated the final three holes on the North side as being the most difficult on the entire 18.

"The 16th is a straightaway hole but it's a long par 4," explained the pro of the 402-yarder. "On the right-hand side of the fairway about 250 yards out is a bunker and there are also traps on either side of the green."

"The 17th is the same thing (a 420 yard par 4) being straightaway and having similar traps."

"The 18th is just a long ball buster. Nobody has ever seen anybody get on in two not even when it's as hard as Irving Park Road!"

These three finishing holes proved their toughness in a recent Chick Evans Amateur tournament, according to Rodio. The first three days the contestants played the South layout but on the final round the North's last three holes were used for the finish. The scores ballooned because of it.

The course record is held on the South side by Wayne Elbertson of St. Charles. He scored the course with an eight-under-par 62 during an Evans tourney and eventually won.

Rodio's best score also came on the South Course—a par 70 round—but it came three years before when he had no idea of running the course.

"I never dreamed of becoming a pro," the Chicago native admitted.

The White Pines head man attended Wells High School and, after graduating, he worked in the metal plating field. He followed this up with 27 years in a foundry and then a few years as a salesman for a sand company before taking a job as the assistant pro at the Naperville Country Club in 1968.

Jim Rodio

Last fall he took over the head duties at Indian Lakes Golf Club and in October he changed places with Tom Speck, who had been the head man at White Pines.

One has to like this personable new pro who sells himself and his over 40 year old course without any trouble. And a top salesman as well as public relations man is needed for a course that does such a tremendous business.

On a normal weekday he'll see from 300 to 350 customers and a typical weekend day will draw between 500 and 600 duffers.

Another challenging aspect about White Pines is its large number of league linkers. Approximately 1,400 players march around three out of the four nines. However, Rodio points out that the South's back nine is always available to the non-leaguer.

During the school year, Rodio estimated that about 20 high school and college teams hold matches at White Pines. Among the more notable ones are Foxton High School, Roosevelt University, Chicago Circle Campus and Wright Junior College.

All these student-golfers, league members and daily fee players can enjoy the fine lockerroom facilities as well as the remodeled pro shop and grill.

For golfing events and non-golfing events the large dining room, located on the upper level, is available. It holds about 400 and is also just newly remodeled.

All in all the course is ideal for the daily fee golfer because of its nearness to the suburbs as well as the city. For those in the suburbs the quickest way to get there is to take Route 83 to Irving Park Road, turn right on Church St. and you can't miss it.

White Pines rates are as follows: Week-days—Before 3 p.m., $4.75, after 3 p.m., $2.75; and Saturdays, Sundays and Holidays—Before 1 p.m., $6; after 1 p.m., $5; and after 3 p.m., $3.

(Next week: Glendale Country Club.)

The Racing Scene

by JOHN F. KLUSMANN

THE STRETCH-RUNNERS captured all the gold and glory in the holiday turf fea- tures at Arlington Park last weekend.

Hawaii, the fast-closing South African- bred, charged through along the rail to win the July 4 Stars and Stripes Handicap by three-quarters of a length. Then on Sat- urday his stablemate, Larceny Kid, was a driving winner of the Round Table Handi- cap as he came from behind to defeat heavily favored North Flight by 1 1/2 lengths.

Hawaii and Larceny Kid were impres- sive grass runners as they gave Cragwood Stables a sweep of both $50,000 stakes. The manner in which Hawaii won the Stars and Stripes indicates he will give Czar Al- exander and Fort Marcy a determined battle for Grass Horse of the Year honors.

Hawaii, expertly guided by Manuel Yezas, was in very tight quarters coming into the stretch. He swung over on the rail when finally clear and responded with a brilliant burst of speed to wear down Great Cobes nearing the wire. It takes a horse of superior quality to overcome ad- versity and still have that much speed left nearing the end of 1-1/8 miles.

North Flight, winner of three stakes in a row, led a fine field of three-year-olds to the sixteenth pole in the Round Table Handicap. There he was challenged by Larceny Kid who was under a powerful drive. Weight took its toll as North Flight could not take up the final challenge. Lar- ceny Kid, receiving 10 pounds from North Flight, drew off to win by a safe margin.

This Saturday Arlington Park offers the $40,000 added Olympia Handicap at seven furlongs on the main course. The fastest horses in the country will be in for this race. The field will include Promise, Royal Exchange and Kissin' George.

Promise recently won the Equippoise Mile Handicap here at Arlington, then shipped back East and won the Carter Handicap at Belmont Park. Royal Ex- change currently holds the track record of 1:09 3/5 for six furlongs at Belmont Park. Kissin' George has been one of the finest sprinters in California the past two sea- sons.

HORSES TO WATCH
Kitty Malone—Filly loomed boldly at the head of the stretch, then encountered trouble. Morning works indicate she has the speed to score.

Nubia—Lost close ones the last two times. Should be right there the next time.

Findmeafella—Two-year-old filly has class. Will win a $15,000 claiming race soon.

Alasad—Ran creditably to finish third in his first race at Arlington. Could win a high priced claiming race on the turf or main track.

Dark Star King—This speedster likes short races on the turf. He is well-bred and can ramble.

Cambridge Blue—$3,500 claimer can travel a distance of ground. Looked good finishing second in his last race at 1 1/8 miles.

Colu Cura—Could hit at a price in a route race over the turf course. Once was very good on the grass but is now racing for a $5,000 claiming tag. Needs an- other slight drop in class.

Take Silk—Four-year-old gelding by Tud- or Minstrel is quick out of the gate. $5,000 to $8,000 claiming races are the right class.

Poeey's Special—Has plenty of speed and stamina for middle distance races over the turf. Ran Red Price II to a photo recently.

Fleet Allied—Three-year-old handicap performer is going to score soon in a stakes race. It appears that he can handle the turf course. Could click at a price.

Memorable Moments in Racing
The year was 1935. The scene was Ar- lington Park race track. The horse was the great Discovery, then four years old and at the peak of his career.

The powerful son of Display was as- signed 135 pounds for the 7/16 mile Arling- ton Handicap. In order to get up to 135 pounds, jockey Bejshak packed 25 pounds of lead slugs in the saddle.

When he answered the call that Sat- urday afternoon of July 27, Discovery was making the following weight concessions to his six rivals: Riskulus, 10 pounds; Stand Pat, 20 pounds; Late Date, 25 pounds; Watch Him and Count Arthur, 31 pounds and Skip It, 33 pounds.

They were off. First Riskulus, then stand Pat took the lead with Discovery ever present in second playing the waiting game. When they entered the final turn Bejshak lo- lose his hold on Discovery and the champion surged forward. When Stand Pat took the lead with Discovery they straightened for home. Discovery was clear of Stand Pat and driving for the wire like an express train. Through the stretch he gradually increased his lead on the field and won by five lengths amid the thunderous applause of the crowd. Time for the race was 2:01 1/5, the second fast- est mile and a quarter ever run in Amer- ica.

Concert In Park

Music will again resound through Huffman Park this year as the Bensenville Municipal Band begins its summer program at 8:15 tonight.

The 50-member band, which has been in existence since 1941, will perform compositions ranging from marching music to opera overtures.

Fred Lewis, director of the band and music teacher at Fenton, said the concert will feature many of the numbers the high school band performed in Europe. Soloist in the concert will be Wayne Riesen, who will play "Introduction and Samba" by Maurice Whitney.

Concerts will be held every Wednesday through the summer. In case of rain, the concerts will be held on the following Friday.

BAND COMMISSIONER William Heggerth has written railroad and airport authorities asking them to divert traffic from the Bensenville area during the hour-and-a-half concerts each week.

Members of the band are chosen by auditions, according to Lewis. He said about 20 members also perform with the high school concert band.

Other musicians are recruited from college students home for the summer and older citizens from "all around the Chicago area," Lewis said.

The director added that Bensenville is one of the few towns its size that still has a municipal band and attributed the talent he recruits from towns outside Bensenville to the dying tradition of summer band concerts.

"RESIDENTS CAN bring blankets and lawn chairs and relax while they listen to good music," Lewis said.

Lewis has been director of the municipal band for 13 seasons and said this year will see more of a variety in musical selections than ever before. Musical comedy scores are always a favorite, Lewis said, so the band is working on selections from "Olivier," "Man of La Mancha" and "Fiddler on the Roof" for upcoming concerts.

Another feature of this year's summer concerts will be appearances by the Fenton Jazz Band which won recognition for a performance at the Montreux Jazz Festival in Switzerland. Jazz great Ella Fitzgerald was another performer on that bill.

Lewis added that he is expecting another successful season with the municipal band this year "if it stops raining long enough for us to perform."

Hoffman-Rosner On Board Agenda

Bloomington officials will get together one more time tonight before they make what may be that all-important play at Wednesday's board meeting.

The trustees, along with the village engineer and attorney, will discuss their stand of the Hoffman-Rosner annexation petition.

"Quad Village is still on our minds, although we haven't discussed the concept in detail," Robert Meyers, village president, said.

The committee has to go through all the points of the pre-annexation agreement and consider all the possibilities before a vote.

"We may make last-minute recommendations, and if Hoffman-Rosner conforms, we'll probably be ready for a vote Wednesday," Meyers said.

O'Donnell Elected Assistant Officer

The election of Joseph O'Donnell as assistant vice president of the Bank of Elk Grove has been announced by Neil Cooney, president.

O'Donnell graduated from Taft High School and attended Wright Junior College and College of Commerce. From 1962 to 1967 he worked in the installment lending and marketing departments of Citizens Bank & Trust Co., Park Ridge, where he was also a student in the American Institute of Banking.

He joined the Bank of Elk Grove's loan department in 1968.

O'Donnell, his wife Mary and their four children live in Des Plaines.

Dist. 214 Hires Six Deans

The High School Dist. 214 Board Monday appointed deans of students for its six high schools — Arlington, Prospect, Forest View, Wheeling, Elk Grove and Hersey.

Named to work with student discipline problems at Arlington was Guy Vena of Palatine, an English teacher at that school for the past seven years and adviser to the lettermen's club.

Appointed at Prospect was Donald C.

Arseneau of Arlington Heights, Prospect's head basketball coach the past year and a physical education and driver training teacher at that school for the past nine years.

Forest View's dean of students is Gary Tjarks of Arlington Heights, for the past five years a social science teacher at Wheeling High School.

Wheeling's dean of students will be Richard Schnell of Arlington Heights, who filled in as acting assistant principal for administrative services while Frank Bohac was on sabbatical leave last spring. Schnell has taught social science at Wheeling for five years.

Elk Grove High School's dean of students is Raymond Coleman of Itasca, a social science teacher at the school for three years.

Keith North of Arlington Heights will serve as dean of students at Hersey High School, transferring from Forest View where he has been a science and physical education teacher for seven years.

The dean of students' position is not a new one for Dist. 214 but the post has not been in use since the early 1960s. It was abolished in favor of the post of assistant principal for administrative services following a Booz-Allen-Hamilton management study of the district.

Supt. Edward H. Gilbert asked that the post be reactivated this year to take some of the student discipline case load off the assistant principal.

A New Home

by Ed Landwehr

I'm happy to be able to tell you today that Landwehr's Home Appliances is open and ready to serve you at our new home — 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights. You'll note we've changed our name slightly, too. I think Landwehr's Home Appliances better informs our customers of the wide range of appliances we carry — not just TV's, radios and stereos but a full line of washers, dryers, dishwashers, vacuum, air conditioners — and all appliances for better living. Besides a display area that is more than triple that of our other store, we have a large parking lot where you'll always find plenty of free parking. We're easy to find — just 2 blocks west of Euclid — the large brown brick building on the corner. There will be a large sign to direct you to good shopping. We'll still have a most modern service shop enabling us to give you prompt and accurate service on your TV and other servicing needs. Phone Clearbrook 5-0700 for servicing... and do stop in to see our new home. We're proud of it!

Young Makes Formal Bid for Office

Samuel H. Young, who last week filed nominating petitions for the Republican 13th Congressional District primary election, formally announced his candidacy at a press conference this morning at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Young, 46, is Northfield Township Republican committeeman. He lives at 735 Raleigh Road in Glenview.

"It is my intention to campaign on 'what's right with the United States' as well as the problems confronting the United States and the people of the 13th District," Young said.

"THE PEOPLE of this district are concerned and distressed about war in Vietnam with its drain on our youth and our production and financial resources. We are concerned about the best method to end this war. We are concerned about the division of public opinion that this war has created," Young said.

He said he believes the Republican voters "will elect the candidate who best appears to appreciate the accomplishments, the concerns and the problems of this district."

"The candidate who knows the people of this district and is familiar with the local issues of Evanston, of Glenview, of Mount Prospect, of Wheeling and of Palatine and the other communities in the district will be successful," he said.

Young said he "welcomes and genuinely appreciates" the abundance of competition in the Republican race.

"SUCH ENTHUSIASM is healthy and will generate provocative discussions that are bound to improve and develop the winner to be a more effective representative in congress for the people of this district," he said.

Young, an attorney, is head of his own law firm in Chicago. He is a former teacher of economics and finance at both Northwestern University and the University of Illinois.

From 1953 to 1956, Young was securities commissioner of Illinois and he served as assistant secretary of state from 1956 to 1958.

Young chaired the Republican judicial slating committee in Cook County last year.

Young and his wife, Bonnie, have three children.

Vandalism Rises Slightly in June

Itasca police report a slight increase in summertime vandalism in June over the previous month, with other crimes remaining nearly the same.

Reported incidents rose from three cases in May to six last month. Most incidents were minor, except for destruction of several large windows by firecrackers.

Burglary cases remained about the same, with two cases in June and one the previous month. Accidents were up four to 16 in June.

Four thefts were reported last month. Three of them were under $50. Three bikes were stolen, police said.

Traffic citations dropped only four from May's total of 144. In June, 92 were issued for moving violations, four for driving while intoxicated and 44 for nonmoving offenses. Two persons were arrested in May on drunken driving charges.

Sales Pitch Really Pays Off

A little political participation can pay off sometimes in unusual ways.

A couple of women carrying Constitutional Convention candidates' petitions buttonholed a Wheeling businessman the other day and spurred him into making a vocational training sales pitch at Monday's High School Dist. 214 board meeting.

Allen Weber of Arlington Heights, owner of A. Weber and Son Portable Welding in Wheeling, told the Herald he didn't remember who the women were or what candidate they were for.

But when he told the school board he thought they should encourage students to "get into the trades," he was immediately signed up as a Dist. 214 vocational training adviser.

"Parents don't seem to recognize the dignity of work," Weber commented. "It seems like in the Arlington Heights area, parents kind of frown on kids getting into the trades — and the taxpayers are suffering from it because there is a labor shortage."

WEBER DREW agreement from both Supt. Edward H. Gilbert and board member Richard Stamm, Mount Prospect.

Stamm said Centex Industrial Park also suffers from a chronic labor shortage, while "parents and taxpayers insist on educating students for middle management jobs which computers will soon replace."

Stamm noted that steam fitters or iron workers can make $18,000 a year.

Gilbert said, "We need you to talk to our young people. They'll listen to you when they won't listen to someone with an academic training."

Dist. 214 opened a modern new graphic arts program this year at Hersey High School but few students have shown an interest.

To school board members' disappointment, only 15 students are signed up for the vocational-level graphic course

Hersey will offer next year.

"We are offering students vocational courses if they want to take them. We can't force them," Gilbert said.

Plan Community Program

Plans are now under way for initiating a community school program at the Henry W. Longfellow School in September.

Methods of implementing the community school program in school Dist. 21 were discussed at an organizational meeting Tuesday at Alcott School in Buffalo Grove.

David Lechner, director of the Illinois Center for Community Education Development, Robert Sorensen, principal at Holmes Junior High, and educators from Ball State University, which is cooperating with the center and school district in initiating a community school program, explained the concept of the community school.

"This program is for the people of the community. We want to set up activities in which residents of the community express an interest," Lechner said.

IN DETERMINING the desires of the residents in the area of community education, a survey will be conducted today through Friday among residents in the Longfellow School attendance area. Approximately one-third of the homeowners in the area will be asked to answer the survey questions. Results will be available within a few weeks.

Lechner said the program at Longfellow would be open to all residents of Dist. 21 and that he hoped it would serve as a model in setting up similar programs at other schools.

Those attending the meeting also saw the film, "To Touch a Child," which explained how the community school program was operating in Flint, Mich.

Who Won Annex Decision?

SHADED FROM THE SUN by an old straw hat, Clemens Forke of north Wood Dale Road, drives a team of horses while cultivating a soybean field near Devon Avenue between DuPage and Cook counties. Forke has been a farmer for all of his 69 years and remembers the days when H. C. Paddock use to visit the communities with his horse and buggy while gathering news and selling newspaper subscriptions.

by GEOFFREY MEHL

Negotiations between a developer and a municipality are traditionally a rather delicate affair, with the landowner and builder doing his best to avoid paying for anything, and the Village of Roselle trying not to look too bad.

On that note, a concluding round between Roselle's village board and Pulte Corp. was staged Monday night in the middle of the former's regular board meeting.

When it was finished, and a pre-annexation agreement involving 119 acres between Fosselle and unincorporated Medinah was accepted by both sides, it was difficult to tell who won.

IT WAS CLEARLY not the village, but Pulte was tapped for approximately $23,000 in annexation fees.

That money should be recovered by the developer after School Dist. 11 decides if it would like to buy 10 acres from Pulte at what was described as the present cost of the land plus what ever improvements are made in the form of streets, sanitary sewers, sidewalks, storm sewers and water lines.

The school district, it was decided, would pay a pro rate share, which Pulte naturally felt was only fair.

In the pre-annexation agreement, it was decided that the developer would "negotiate" with the district to sell up to 10 acres of property, the location of which would be decided by Pulte Corp.

DURING DISCUSSION, representatives of the company said they would sell the land "at the same cost as acquired" plus the price tag of "improvements."

"We've always dealt fairly with school boards and municipalities," the spokesman said, and the generality appeared to be good enough to settle the deal with the village board.

The land developer was also concerned about who would pay for "oversized" sanitary sewer lines, and while no specifications defining the term entered into in the past two public hearings, it was agreed that the village would pick up 50 per cent of the tab — from the annexation fees.

ROSELLE TRUSTEES had managed to include a line that the village would help pay for oversizing "up to the amount of annexation fees," but the developer thought otherwise and managed to exclude it from the agreement.

As debate and negotiation rambled on, Trustee Anthony Bonavolonta inquired if the matter shouldn't be tabled until a workable arrangement was concluded.

His question was ignored, but later Pres. Robert Frantz noted that negotiations have continued for some time, and it would be nice to conclude it all.

Discussion on the payments issue in the way of storm sewers centered around a cost figure which no one really knew. Pulte officials were doing their best to talk the price down as much as possible, and at last the board agreed on a flat percentage.

THE DEVELOPMENT is planned for R-2 single-family zoning, which would permit 2½ dwelling units per acre, or a total of approximately 250 homes in the $40,000 to $48,000 price range.

Employees Get 5 Per Cent Raise

by RICHARD BARTON

DuPage County employees were given a 5 per cent across-the-board pay increase Tuesday after voting and discussion split the DuPage County Board of Supervisors nearly 50-50.

Several attempts were made to hike the pay raise up to 10 per cent. After that failed, an attempt at passing a 7½ per cent increase was tried, but failed.

The raises will be retroactive to July 1, as promised by county board chairman Paul Ronske two weeks ago when the pay proposal was first brought up for a vote. The matter was referred back to the Wages and Benefits Committee for further study. The increase affects all salaried employees.

Arguments for a larger pay increase included a rumored threat of a mass walk-out of employees unless they were given more money.

"I WILL TELL you plainly unless you (the county board) give better than a 5 per cent across-the-board increase, you will have a mass walkout of dissatisfied employees on your hands," Donald J. Wall, Bloomingdale Township assistant supervisor.

"The forest preserve employees, the sheriff's department and the highway department have received much more in pay raises only recently, as high as 15 per cent."

According to Pat Savaiano, Bloomingdale Township supervisor, the highway department first asked for a 30 per cent pay increase. He said a compromise of a 15 per cent increase was reached.

John Earl, Downers Grove assistant supervisor and chairman of the wages and benefits committee, said the people in the county's public works department who had similar jobs to those in the highway department would get equal pay. He said the matter of equal job, equal pay between departments was under study.

EARL FIRST introduced the motion for a 5 per cent increase two weeks ago, but had it thrown back at him by the board for study.

Pat Riedy, supervisor from Lisle Township, said the new state income tax of 2½ per cent would eat up most of the meager Earl's motion to read a 10 per cent in 5 per cent raise. He moved to amend cease. The amendment motion lost, 14-13.

Then, proponents of higher pay brought the lack of insurance benefits presently given to county employees as a reason for higher pay.

EARL REPLIED THAT fringe benefits

were to be kept separate from pay considerations. He added that an insurance group was making a study of the employee benefits and that a program will be introduced soon. He also said a 10 per cent increase would put many employees above surrounding industry which couldn't be allowed.

Ask Cheaper Housing

There are 13,221 families in DuPage County with incomes under $5,000 a year. More than half of these have incomes of less than $3,000.

In DuPage County, where rentals begin between $150 and $200 a month, these families are paying well over the 25 per cent estimate for rent and utilities.

Bernard Kleina, west suburban representative of the Metropolitan Leadership Council, and Philip Chinn of the Human Relations Advisory Committee threw these and other statistics out to DuPage County's Board of Supervisors, urging them to take advantage of government programs providing assisted housing for the low-income residents.

"NOT A SINGLE unit of public housing has been constructed anywhere in the county. Not a single unit of below-market interest-rate housing for low or moderate-income families. Not a single unit of housing for the elderly. No rehabilitated housing, no leased housing, no rent supplement. Money is available for all these programs," Chinn told the supervisors.

In addition to the shortage of low-income housing, there are 3,427 occupied dwelling units in the county which should be torn down or extensively repaired, according to Chinn. He obtained his figures from the 1960 census, the latest statistics of this kind available.

Kleina showed pictures of many of the dilapidated and deteriorating houses throughout the county.

Stimulating the development of moderate-income housing is another problem the supervisors should consider, Kleina said.

INDUSTRY HAS been encouraged to develop, but many employees cannot afford the available housing. Beginning salaries for teachers also make it difficult for them to find acceptable housing he said.

John Stenski, chairman of the Advisory Committee said it has gathered information about available programs to develop moderate-income housing. Stenski and appropriate members of the committee offered to meet with the supervisors to discuss these programs.

Westlake Vote?

What happens to Hoffman-Rosner's Westlake development depends entirely on the Bloomingdale Village Board of Trustees since the County Board of Supervisors Tuesday honored the firm's request to withdraw its annexation petition.

Bloomingdale Village Pres. Robert Meyers and Village Engineer Ralph Gross were at the meeting when C. L. James, supervisor from Downers Grove Township and chairman of the zoning committee moved that the county comply with Hoffman-Rosner's wishes to withdraw its petition to build as an unincorporated area within DuPage County.

Pat Savaiano, Bloomingdale township

pervisor, seconded the motion. Bloomingdale officials earlier expressed a desire to sit in on any county deliberations concerning Hoffman-Rosner.

HOFFMAN-ROSNER now has no recourse but to be annexed by Bloomingdale in order to start building.

The firm announced its intention to abandon any county-supervised development June 5 when it submitted a letter withdrawing its petition for planned unit zoning in Bloomingdale Township.

The County Zoning Department said at that time that the petition would still be in effect until the board met and took official action on it.

That's what has happened.

Hoffman-Rosner has been negotiating exclusively and seriously with the Village of Bloomingdale since June 9. Concessions and compromises have been made by both parties causing several revisions in the pre-annexation agreement.

The village board of trustees, the village engineer and attorney met as a committee Monday to discuss the final stand on the petition.

The petition is expected to come up for a vote at tonight's village board meeting. Trustees have been quietly noncommittal about their feelings towards the annexation.

Meyers told the Register last week that if the committee had any last minute demands and if the firm met them, the vote would be on Wednesday.

FLYING BLUE ANGELS will perform their close-order drills this weekend at the annual air show held at the DuPage County Airport, on Route 64

near West Chicago. Parachuting acts, antique planes and other displays will also be presented. See story on page 2.

DuPage County employees were given a 5 per cent across-the-board pay increase Tuesday after voting and discussion split the DuPage County Board of Supervisors nearly 50-50.

Several attempts were made to hike the pay raise up to 10 per cent. After that failed, an attempt at passing a 7½ per cent increase was tried, but failed.

The raises will be retroactive to July 1, as promised by county board chairman Paul Ronske two weeks ago when the pay proposal was first brought up for a vote. The matter was referred back to the Wages and Benefits Committee for further study. The increase affects all salaried employees.

Arguments for a larger pay increase included a rumored threat of a mass walkout of employees unless they were given more money.

"I WILL TELL you plainly unless you (the county board) give better than a 5 per cent across-the-board increase, you will have a mass walkout of dissatisfied employees on your hands," Donald J. Wall, Bloomingdale Township assistant supervisor.

"The forest preserve employees, the sheriff's department and the highway department have received much more in pay raises only recently, as high as 15 per cent."

According to Pat Savaiano, Bloomingdale Township supervisor, the highway

department first asked for a 30 per cent pay increase. He said a compromise of a 15 per cent increase was reached.

John Earl, Downers Grove assistant supervisor and chairman of the wages and benefits committee, said the people in the county's public works department who had similar jobs to those in the highway department would get equal pay. He said the matter of equal job, equal pay between departments was under study.

EARL FIRST introduced the motion for a 5 per cent increase two weeks ago, but had it thrown back at him by the board for study.

Pat Riedy, supervisor from Lisle Township, said the new state income tax of 2½ per cent would eat up most of the meager Earl's motion to read a 10 per cent in 5 per cent raise. He moved to amend crease. The amendment motion lost, 14-13.

Then, proponents of higher pay brought the lack of insurance benefits presently given to county employees as a reason for higher pay.

EARL REPLIED THAT fringe benefits

were to be kept separate from pay considerations. He added that an insurance group was making a study of the employee benefits and that a program will be introduced soon. He also said a 10 per cent increase would put many employees above surrounding industry which couldn't be allowed.

Ask Cheaper Housing

There are 13,221 families in DuPage County with incomes under $5,000 a year. More than half of these have incomes of less than $3,000.

In DuPage County, where rentals begin between $150 and $200 a month, these families are paying well over the 25 per cent estimate for rent and utilities.

Bernard Kleina, west suburban representative of the Metropolitan Leadership Council, and Philip Chinn of the Human Relations Advisory Committee threw these and other statistics out to DuPage County's Board of Supervisors, urging them to take advantage of government programs providing assisted housing for the low-income residents.

"NOT A SINGLE unit of public housing has been constructed anywhere in the county. Not a single unit of below-market interest-rate housing for low or moderate-income families. Not a single unit of housing for the elderly. No rehabilitated housing, no leased housing, no rent supplement. Money is available for all these programs," Chinn told the supervisors.

In addition to the shortage of low-income housing, there are 3,427 occupied dwelling units in the county which should be torn down or extensively repaired, according to Chinn. He obtained his figures from the 1960 census, the latest statistics of this kind available.

Kleina showed pictures of many of the dilapidated and deteriorating houses throughout the county.

Stimulating the development of moderate-income housing is another problem the supervisors should consider, Kleina said.

INDUSTRY HAS been encouraged to develop, but many employees cannot afford the available housing. Beginning salaries for teachers also make it difficult for them to find acceptable housing he said.

John Stenski, chairman of the Advisory Committee said it has gathered information about available programs to develop moderate-income housing. Stenski and appropriate members of the committee offered to meet with the supervisors to discuss these programs.

Westlake Vote?

What happens to Hoffman-Rosner's Westlake development depends entirely on the Bloomingdale Village Board of Trustees since the County Board of Supervisors Tuesday honored the firm's request to withdraw its annexation petition.

Bloomingdale Village Pres. Robert Meyers and Village Engineer Ralph Gross were at the meeting when C. L. James, supervisor from Downer's Grove Township and chairman of the zoning committee moved that the county comply with Hoffman-Rosner's wishes to withdraw its petition to build as an unincorporated area within DuPage County.

Pat Savaiano, Bloomingdale township supervisor, seconded the motion. Bloomingdale officials earlier expressed a desire to sit in on any county deliberations concerning Hoffman-Rosner.

HOFFMAN-ROSNER now has no recourse but to be annexed by Bloomingdale in order to start building.

The firm announced its intention to abandon any county-supervised development June 5 when it submitted a letter withdrawing its petition for planned unit zoning in Bloomingdale Township.

The County Zoning Department said at that time that the petition would still be in effect until the board met and took official action on it.

That's what has happened.

Hoffman-Rosner has been negotiating exclusively and seriously with the Village of Bloomingdale since June 9. Concessions and compromises have been made by both parties causing several revisions in the pre-annexation agreement.

The village board of trustees, the village engineer and attorney met as a committee Monday to discuss the final stand on the petition.

The petition is expected to come up for a vote at tonight's village board meeting. Trustees have been quietly noncommittal about their feelings towards the annexation.

Meyers told the Register last week that if the committee had any last minute demands and if the firm met them, the vote would be on Wednesday.

FLYING BLUE ANGELS will perform their close-order drills this weekend at the annual air show held at the DuPage County Airport, on Route 64

near West Chicago. Parachuting acts, antique planes and other displays will also be presented. See story on page 2.

Who Won Annex Decision?

SHADED FROM THE SUN by an old straw hat, Clemens Forke of north Wood Dale Road, drives a team of horses while cultivating a soybean field near Devon Avenue between DuPage and Cook counties. Forke has been a farmer for all of his 69 years and remembers the days when H. C. Paddock use to visit the communities with his horse and buggy while gathering news and selling newspaper subscriptions.

by GEOFFREY MEHL

Negotiations between a developer and a municipality are traditionally a rather delicate affair, with the landowner and builder doing his best to avoid paying for anything, and the Village of Roselle trying not to look too bad.

On that note, a concluding round between Roselle's village board and Pulte Corp. was staged Monday night in the middle of the former's regular board meeting.

When it was finished, and a pre-annexation agreement involving 119 acres between Roselle and unincorporated Medinah was accepted by both sides, it was difficult to tell who won.

IT WAS CLEARLY not the village, but Pulte was tapped for approximately $23,000 in annexation fees.

That money should be recovered by the developer after School Dist. 11 decides if it would like to buy 10 acres from Pulte at what was described as the present cost of the land plus what ever improvements are made in the form of streets, sanitary sewers, sidewalks, storm sewers and water lines.

The school district, it was decided, would pay a pro rate share, which Pulte naturally felt was only fair.

In the pre-annexation agreement, it was decided that the developer would "negotiate" with the district to sell up to 10 acres of property, the location of which would be decided by Pulte Corp.

DURING DISCUSSION, representatives of the company said they would sell the land "at the same cost as acquired" plus the price tag of "improvements."

"We've always dealt fairly with school boards and municipalities," the spokesman said, and the generality appeared to be good enough to settle the deal with the village board.

The land developer was also concerned about who would pay for "oversized" sanitary sewer lines, and while no specifications defining the term entered into in the past two public hearings, it was agreed that the village would pick up 50 per cent of the tab — from the annexation fees.

ROSELLE TRUSTEES had managed to include a line that the village would help pay for oversizing "up to the amount of annexation fees," but the developer thought otherwise and managed to exclude it from the agreement.

As debate and negotiation rambled on, Trustee Anthony Bonavolonta inquired if the matter shouldn't be tabled until a workable arrangement was concluded.

His question was ignored, but later Pres. Robert Frantz noted that negotiations have continued for some time, and it would be nice to conclude it all.

Discussion on the payments issue in the way of storm sewers centered around a cost figure which no one really knew. Pulte officials were doing their best to talk the price down as much as possible, and at last the board agreed on a flat percentage.

THE DEVELOPMENT is planned for R-2 single-family zoning, which would permit 2½ dwelling units per acre, or a total of approximately 250 homes in the $40,000 to $48,000 price range.

Village Beat

Judy Morris

Bensenville village and school officials are really very cooperative. If you want a story on the band tour to Europe or the town's beautification program, they will gladly bend your ear.

But turn around and ask them how they feel on the issue of administrative salary increases or the flood control problem and suddenly they are at a loss for words.

One village trustee in particular is often giving friendly advice to the press. He wants photographers to record benevolent citizens doing good deeds and village officials participating in worthwhile activities but responds to a picture of a Bensenville factory belching smoke with a shrug and the comment "We are working on it."

VILLAGE PRES. John Varble is more than willing to sit down and talk things over, so you arrive with a list of questions ready for a good session. Fifteen minutes later, you are shuffled out of his office more confused than before.

"Public" meetings are hardly public. Issues and bills are referred to by number or code and are of little value to the reporter trying to interpret them to readers.

Another favorite trick of public officials is to give a lengthy statement on an issue and then qualify it with "Of course this is off the record."

One Bensenville official is an outstanding exception to the evasive rule.

Will Davidson, who serves both Bensenville school boards, angered several Dist. 100 board members recently when he informed the press that the Fenton Education Association was threatening a sanction if administrative salary demands weren't met.

BEFORE DAVIDSON arrived at the meeting, members had already passed by the discussion and voted to postpone the issue until the next board meeting when it would be talked about in an executive session. Several were quite perturbed when Davidson spilled the beans, for it was a secret they had hidden very effectively from the press until then.

Those in public office are the first to complain that the press "misrepresents" them and yet do their best to evade truthful and complete answers. They whine that the press "doesn't understand" and yet disappear after meetings before a reporter can ask for explanations.

If newspapers were to write up board meetings the way officials think they should, the story would sound like a lovely fairy tale with the bad guys edited out.

NO ONE IS asking officials to air their mistakes in public. No one is asking them to jeopardize their own political careers by issuing exciting and libelous statements.

But one can expect a certain amount of commitment, a certain willingness to stick out their necks and show why they were elected to public office.

Knights Ripcords Ready

Parachuting, while it never loses its fundamental drama, is more than jumping from an airplane, pulling a ripcord and hoping for the best.

From its uncertain beginnings, when it was reserved for stunt men, rugged paratroopers and desperate pilots, parachuting has developed into both an exciting sport and an exacting science.

Among the finest parachutists in the world, with an average of 850 jumps per man, are the Golden Knights of the U. S.

Army Parachute Team, who will perform during the summer's annual Air Show, co-sponsored by WIND Radio and the Greater Chicagoland Antique Airplane Association, Saturday and Sunday at DuPage County Airport. This event also will include the Navy's Blue Angels, the nation's first official jet flight demonstration team.

WIND Radio will have a booth at the airport and personalities Chuck Benson and Kurt Russell, Lee Rodgers, Roy West, Dale Ulmer, Bill Berg, Jack Altman and Ted Anthony will be on hand throughout the two days to emcee the events.

THE 10 MAIN attractions both days will include a hot air balloon ascension; four of the world's oldest flying airplanes — a 1912 Curtis Pusher, a replica of a 1908 French Demoiselle, a 1929 Antique Travelaire D-4-D and a 1940 P-64, and a precision flight demonstration in a P-51 by Bob Hoover, president of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots.

There also will be a public display of antique, home-built and experimental aircraft, including an MS-1 Stinson, which was pulled out of an ice cap in Greenland recently after being there 40 years. The plane made an emergency landing in 1928 on a flight from Rockford to Stockholm.

The Golden Knights are formidable competitors who hold 87 out of 128 men's world parachuting accuracy records and have produced two world and five national parachuting champions. They are also called on frequently to help develop new parachuting equipment and techniques for the nation's airborne forces, space program and other government agencies.

Each member of the Golden Knights, established in 1959, is an expert who can link up with other jumpers in the air, glide for miles across the sky while in free fall, fly in formation with other jumpers and perform other aerial maneuvers.

JUMP ALTITUDES are up to 6,600 feet in competition and twice that high in demonstrations. At two and a half miles above the ground, demonstration jumpers must wear smoke grenades attached to their boots so their paths will be marked for the spectators below.

The jumpers free fall for up to 70 seconds at speeds of 120 to 180 miles per hour. By moving their arms, shoulders and legs they remain in complete control of their fall.

Gates will open at 9 a.m. each day to view displays and for passenger rides in a Ford Tri-Motor. Show time is slated for 1:30 p.m. both days with a special awards presentation for home-builts, experimental and antique aircraft on Sunday at 12:30 p.m.

Tickets will be available at all Sears stores or at the gate. All proceeds benefit the Antique Airplane Association, a non-profit organization.

Vandalism Rises Slightly in June

Itasca police report a slight increase in summertime vandalism in June over the previous month, with other crimes remaining nearly the same.

Reported incidents rose from three cases in May to six last month. Most incidents were minor, except for destruction of several large windows by firecrackers.

Burglary cases remained about the same, with two cases in June and one the previous month. Accidents were up four to 16 in June.

Four thefts were reported last month. Three of them were under $50. Three bikes were stolen, police said.

Traffic citations dropped only four from May's total of 144. In June, 92 were issued for moving violations, four for driving while intoxicated and 44 for nonmoving offenses. Two persons were arrested in May on drunken driving charges.

Concert In Park Tonight

Music will again resound through Huffman Park this year as the Bensenville Municipal Band begins its summer program at 8:15 tonight.

The 50-member band, which has been in existence since 1941, will perform compositions ranging from marching music to opera overtures.

Fred Lewis, director of the band and music teacher at Fenton, said the concert will feature many of the numbers the high school band performed in Europe. Soloist in the concert will be Wayne Riesen, who will play "Introduction and Samba" by Maurice Whitney.

Concerts will be held every Wednesday through the summer. In case of rain, the concerts will be held on the following Friday.

BAND COMMISSIONER William Hegebarth has written railroad and airport authorities asking them to divert traffic from the Bensenville area during the hour-and-a-half concerts each week.

Members of the band are chosen by auditions, according to Lewis. He said about 20 members also perform with the high school concert band.

Other musicians are recruited from college students home for the summer and older citizens from "all around the Chicago area," Lewis said.

The director added that Bensenville is one of the few towns its size that still has a municipal band and attributed the talent he recruits from towns outside Bensenville to the dying tradition of summer band concerts.

"RESIDENTS CAN bring blankets and lawn chairs and relax while they listen to good music," Lewis said.

Lewis has been director of the municipal band for 13 seasons and said this year will see more of a variety in musical selections than ever before. Musical comedy scores are always a favorite, Lewis said, so the band is working on selections from "Oliver," "Man of La Mancha" and "Fiddler on the Roof" for upcoming concerts.

Another feature of this year's summer concerts will be appearances by the Fenton Jazz Band which won recognition for a performance at the Montreux Jazz Festival in Switzerland. Jazz great Ella Fitzgerald was another performer on that bill.

Police Are Doubling as Carpenters

Maintaining the image That's what a Bloomingdale policeman is really doing if you see him at the station pounding a nail, laying a carpet or putting up a ceiling

Notice of Public Hearing

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a Public Hearing on the Budget and Appropriation Ordinance for the TASCA MOSQUITO ABATEMENT DISTRICT, of the County of DuPage and State of Illinois, for the fiscal year beginning the first day of May, 1969, and ending the 30th day of April, 1970, will be held at 7:00 o'clock p.m. on the 15th day of July, 1969, at the Village Hall in the Village of Itasca, Illinois, and that final action on said ordinance may be taken by the Board of Trustees of said ITASCA MOSQUITO ABATEMENT DISTRICT at a meeting thereof to be held at 7:30 o'clock p.m. on the 15th day of July, 1969, at said Village Hall in the Village of Itasca, Illinois.

BY ORDER of the Board of Trustees of said District
DATED this 2nd day of July, 1969
Itasca Mosquito Abatement District
By HENRY KALMUS
Secretary
Published in DuPage County Register and Itasca Register July 9, 1969

"The Bloomingdale police are doing a professional job with professional equipment. They walk into the office and that's where the image ends.

"How can the citizens expect the police to keep doing a professional job when the office they work out of is old and antiquated?" asks Police Chief Harold Rivkin.

Opening Set At Trier 7-11

Several months ago the department requested money from the village board for remodeling. The village allotted $800 for the entire job.

For what they wanted the policemen decided the money would just about cover the cost of materials, so they supplied the labor.

The police station occupies part of what used to be an elementary school. The village bought the building in 1938. The village board, fire department and police shared it.

When the new fire station was built, the police took more room and the village clerk's office was established.

The layout of the police station was haphazard and unsuited to the police work of bringing in and interrogating prisoners. The central desk and the front door have been moved. So have the phones and the work desk.

A person can be brought in and questioned. If the phone rings or the policeman is distracted, he doesn't have to turn his back on the prisoner and let him saunter out of the station.

Rearrangement is only part of the story. Beside moving doors and covering up windows, the 14-member staff (including one woman) has paneled walls and put up new ones. They are beginning to construct a dropped ceiling and will soon be laying tile and a carpet.

The project started at the end of May and the policemen hope to complete it in a few weeks. They have been working on and off, in between police work.

"General participation in the project has been good," Rivkin said. There has been no set schedule. When a patrolman is around with nothing to do, he picks a hammer and does some work.

The patrolmen even have an interior decorating consultant in the person of Mrs. Denise Marusic, the only woman on the force. Mrs. Marusic picked out the carpeting and will suggest the color and pattern for the draperies.

The overall plan was the result of a general meeting of the force. The patrolmen decided on the "most workable set-up for the station," Rivkin said.

Motorcycle Collides With Auto Head-on

A Glendale Heights man is recovering in Central DuPage Hospital after his motorcycle collided head-on with a car driven by Russell R. Abersall, 33, 156 Arlington St., Hoffman Estates, a week ago.

Gregory Wiemold, 23, 129 Algie, suffered multiple bone fractures and cuts when his BSA motorcycle crossed the center line on Bloomingdale Road bridge, just south of Army Trail Road, and collided with Abersall going in the opposite direction.

Last Tuesday's accident left Abersall unhurt. No charges were made by DuPage County police who answered the call. The motorcycle was termed a total loss.

SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY is part of the Disneyland magic, as these young visitors discover with old Br'er Fox hanging around the corner in New Orleans Square. Five Paddock carriers, winners of the current contest among Paddock carrier-salesmen, will see the famous Uncle Remus character and other Disney film stars when they travel to Disneyland later this summer as guests of Paddock Publications. Carriers have until July 30 to sell Paddock subscriptions, earning prizes for the 20 leading salesmen.

Plan Rail Station

Plans for a Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad station to be located at the Irving Park Road underpass to the line in Roselle have already been drawn, it was learned Monday.

In discussion on the topic of movement of the station from its present location in the center of the village, Pres. Robert Frantz told other board members, "It looks like it is under control."

The railroad, said Village Atty. Craig Larson, has approved the language of a lease agreement, and requested village approval of the document prior to presentation at the July 17 railroad board of directors meeting.

ALL FURTHER legal steps, including approval from the Illinois Commerce Commission, will be handled by the railroad if agreement on the lease is finalized.

Plans for the station have been drawn, based on a complicated system of financing involving municipal assistance from parking fees.

The station would be about a half mile east of its present location, something which the neighboring village of Schaumburg does not like.

That community's mayor, Robert Atcher, was seeking to have the station moved further west, to be located on the eastern end of planned Centex industrial development.

ROSELLE BOARD members maintain that if the industrial development in southern Schaumburg and western Roselle merits it, the railroad would probably build a second station to service the area, similar to the arrangement between Arlington Park Racetrack and the Chicago and North Western Rr.

Bogus Bill Fools Woman

Would you know a counterfeit bill if you saw one? Mrs. Goldie Green, an employee of the Safe-Way Currency Exchange in Bensenville didn't.

A woman customer whom police declined to identify, came into the currency exchange Wednesday to have the address on her driver's license changed and paid with a $5 bill.

"I was so involved in handling another transaction at the time that I didn't even look at the money," Mrs. Green said later. The counterfeit bill was caught when another customer noticed its unusual texture and the blurred printing on the bill.

"It was the first counterfeit bill I ever handled. Who thinks to look closely at money?" Mrs. Green added.

THE BILL WAS traced back to the woman with the driver's license, who said she knew nothing about it. The woman recently returned from California and thinks she received the $5 bill there.

Lt. Arthur Garcia of the Bensenville Police Department said he is checking with California authorities to see if they have received any more of the bad bills.

Trips to the Principal Ended

by VIRGINIA KUCMIERZ
"If you don't behave I'm going to send you straight to the principal's office."

Millions of children have been brought into line with this simple but effective remark. But for two and a half years, no child at Medinah South Elementary school has heard this warning.

School Dist. 11 with a total of 747 students and one other school, Medinah North, is small.

The superintendent's office is in Medinah South, so when the last principal resigned, no replacement was hired as a money-saving move.

Traditionally, principals stood for order and discipline. Both teachers and students followed rules enforced by the principal.

IN MANY WAYS the authoritarian image of the principal remains but it has been refined and complicated. Today's principal administers schools that are bigger, teaching vaster amounts of subject matter.

He counsels and arbitrates exceptional youngsters, slow youngsters and average youngsters who have been brought up in a completely different environment than their parents.

He has a thorough knowledge of the school's physical facilities and personnel. Finally, he is the sounding board for parental complaints.

He is a super administrator, psychologist and public relations man. He is the coordinator of a school's entire operation and policy and the important link between the supervisor and teacher.

At Medinah South the superintendent was never officially designated as acting principal, but it was understood that he would perform the principal's duties when necessary.

"ALL DISTRICTS of this size try it at sometime, but usually not more than a year because they find it just doesn't work," Richard C. Davis, superintendent since May said.

School districts may not be able to combine the two jobs anymore. The state legislature, recognizing the importance of the principal in the educational system, is considering a bill, part of which stipulates that any school with four or more teachers must have a principal. Medinah South has a staff of 16 teachers and 350 students.

Last October Supt. Thomas Powers, recommended to the school board that a principal be hired. The board ordered a review of the situation.

During the study, the Medinah Teachers' Association asked the board to hire a principal. They said they needed guidance and supervision.

The Illinois Association of School Boards, (IASB), at the request of the board studied reasons for a principal and submitted its findings in March.

The report cited evidence that "discipline, teacher pupil relationships, teacher morale, classroom supervision and general school supervision has depreciated since the principalship has been discontinued."

THE REPORT distinguished between the functions of the principal and the superintendent. The latter administers the overall educational program of the community, the business affairs and inter-schools relations.

The principal is the educational leader in his school. He is the counselor for both student and teacher. He assists the superintendent in developing school-wide programs and is concerned with the day-to-day details of the school's operation.

"I'm running a business, they're running the schools," Davis said, sharpening the difference.

The superintendent, after an evaluation and with the approval of the board, hires personnel and buys equipment. The principal utilizes his staff and facilities for the best educational results.

The difference in focus between the two jobs is not the only reason that they require two people. The superintendent has many activities to attend which take him away from the office.

ALL THE CANDIDATES considered for the position of superintendent after Powers' resignation wanted a principal for the school.

The IASB report recommended full time principal be employed, and that the superintendent selected for 1969-70 recruit and recommend the person of his choice.

Davis has recommended and the board has approved Mrs. Alice Speck, who has been hired as Medinah South's new principal.

A resident of Lombard, her husband is the Asst. Supt. of Schools for DuPage County. She left her job as principal at Stevenson School in Melrose Park, Dist. 89, because of the distance and because of her husband's work.

Both she and her husband know Davis. When he told her he was looking for a principal she considered the job and accepted the offer.

Mrs. Speck's brown eyes glisten when she talks of her new position.

"Children are my big thing," she says. "I like to know what makes them learn and understand and to see the development of their characters."

THE SIZE OF the school will give Mrs. Speck a better opportunity to work closely with the students and teachers than she had at Stevenson.

"The district has a small community atmosphere which permits involvement on a one-to-one basis. The larger the school, the less time you have to deal with individuals."

Stevenson has an enrollment of 640 with a staff of 25 teachers.

Mrs. Speck believes that in today's mechanized world "children ought to be assured that somebody is interested and involved in helping them."

"Youngsters need a constant, supportive, ongoing relationship. They know when you get totally involved; they aren't fooled."

Teachers, too "want somebody to pull the strings together. They have expressed that they wanted and needed supervision and evaluation."

Mrs. Speck likes to work closely with new teachers "who seem to be more dedicated and committed in the last 10 years."

Much of her initial work will be organizational. She'll be working with the teachers and pupils and parents.

DIST. 11's new superintendent, Richard C. Davis, moved into the Medinah South School office May 1. Davis comes from the Warrenville Dist. 31.

SHE RUNS SCHOOL with a personal touch. Mrs. Alice Speck, Medinah South principal, adapts the curriculum to the individual needs of the pupil. Mrs. Speck was the principal for seven years at Stevenson School in Melrose Park.

The Way We See It

Race Goes to Richest

The chaotic Republican primary in the 13th Congressional District provides fresh evidence of the urgent need to drastically change the manner in which political campaigns are financed.

This special primary election may become the most expensive in 13th District history. Twelve candidates are vying for the GOP congressional nomination, which in this area is tantamount to election.

Informed estimates of individual campaign costs range from a low $25,000 to a high $150,000, with combined candidate expenses expected to exceed $850,000 by the general election in November.

The exorbitant financial burden was cited by several potential GOP candidates as a major factor in their refusal to enter the race.

Today a candidate for almost any public office must either have a personal fortune or obligate himself to supporters willing to make hefty contributions. It's hard to say which is worse — making public office a monopoly of the wealthy, or electing officials beholden to special interests.

High campaign costs are a menace to democracy and should be of real concern to voters wondering to whom the candidate may be obligated as a result of campaign contributions. Politicians too frequently find their major source of funds must come from people with selfish motives who expect to profit by their donations. The assumption today is that "money talks," and he who pays the piper calls the tune.

Politics at every level of government must be freed of the financial shackles that force leaders to lean heavily upon men and groups who expect some personal return from their investment. Every four years, immediately following the Presidential contest, the politicians and the people are reminded of the need for reform in campaign financing. And every four years, plus six months, it is forgotten by both.

Last year was no exception. Shortly after President Nixon was elected, many Americans were shocked to discover that campaign spending for national offices cost a record of $49.2 million. Cries of alarm sounded from every hamlet and from some political leaders, but they soon died out.

Unless an aroused electorate demands appropriate legislation at both national and state levels, we will be confronted with the same problem in the congressional races of 1970 and the Presidential election of 1972.

We have allowed this situation to continue for too long. There must be a better system. Our best political brains should be working at finding a workable cure to this dilemma. Basic to any such reforms at the state level will be enactment of some controls on campaign contributions and expenditures. Also needed are shorter campaigns; we continue to be caught in a vice between 19th Century oratory and late 20th Century costs. In an age of instant communications, this doesn't make sense.

The Republican gubernatorial candidate stumped the state last fall to warn citizens that Illinois was perilously close to bankruptcy. Lashing the spending policies of the incumbent Democrat, the GOP candidate demanded an across-the-board "belt tightening" in state government and sought voter endorsement of his call for economy, efficiency, and fiscal restraint in Springfield.

The people responded, and Richard B. Ogilvie was elected governor. Last week the General Assembly enacted the new governor's fiscal proposals, representing the biggest single tax and spending program in Illinois history.

SOME HAVE HAILED the governor for "a praiseworthy act of responsible government." But before he becomes heady with praise, somebody should warn the governor that Illinois taxpayers are in an angry mood — especially those who cast ballots last November for economy, efficiency, and fiscal restraint.

Opposition was so strong in both parties that it took a tenuous coalition to inch the program through a reluctant legislature. The Ogilvie package included tax hikes on cigarettes, gasoline, liquor, beer, hotel rooms and horse racing. Most controversial and unpopular, however, was the new flat-rate state income tax. To be levied Aug. 1 at a rate of 2.5 per cent for individuals and 4 per cent for corporations, it will yield an estimated $826 million in 12 months.

The added revenue will be used to meet soaring financial demands of state government as well as those of hard-pressed municipalities. A large portion of funds will be distributed, without strings, to local government; Chicago alone will get $33 million.

THERE ARE SOUND reasons for the state income tax and legitimate answers to questions about the spending program. Unfortunately, Gov. Ogilvie has failed to provide either reasons or answers to the taxpayers' satisfaction.

Rather, he concluded his first legislative session by alienating many in his own party, angering middle-income taxpayers, and raising serious doubts about his political skill and acumen.

All Taxes, and No Reform

The Republican gubernatorial candidate stumped the state last fall to warn citizens that Illinois was perilously close to bankruptcy.

tax. To be levied Aug. 1 at a rate of 2.5 per cent for individuals and 4 per cent for corporations, it will yield an estimated $826 million in 12 months.

The added revenue will be used to meet soaring financial demands of state government as well as those of hard-pressed municipalities. A large portion of funds will be distributed, without strings, to local government; Chicago alone will get $33 million.

THERE ARE SOUND reasons for the state income tax and legitimate answers to questions about the spending program. Unfortunately, Gov. Ogilvie has failed to provide either reasons or answers to the taxpayers' satisfaction.

Rather, he concluded his first legislative session by alienating many in his own party, angering middle-income taxpayers, and raising serious doubts about his political skill and acumen.

Businessmen are especially angry about retention of the personal property tax since they are the primary target of collections. The legislature did pass a resolution calling for elimination of the personal property tax, but such action will require voter approval which can't come before November 1970.

The manner in which he handled strategy for his tax proposals was frequently high-handed, politically inept, and failed to take cognizance of the depth of taxpayer bitterness over inequities in the present tax system.

Citizens have been made more aware of tax inequities at both state and local levels because of disparities in the federal income tax, which unfairly lightens the burden of high-income recipients who pay little or no income taxes.

OGILVIE DID NOT enhance his position by insisting on a flat-rate income tax designed to hit hardest those in middle-income brackets. Most of the 38 states with income levies utilize a graduated scale.

Nobody likes higher taxes, especially when Illinois taxpayers will have to work three hours every 8-hour working day this year just to meet their federal, state, and local tax bills.

Their resentment is not eased when tax hikes are enacted without any major tax reform at a time when the public is demanding reform and relief more than ever before.

The taxpayer is in a mood of revolt. Gov. Ogilvie has some political surgery to perform in the months ahead, and he may face a tough battle in cooling voter anger when his Republican supporters face reelection next year.

Hail to All Who Did the 4th Honor

It was a spectacular Independence Day for the Northwest suburbs.

More people in more communities volunteered more of their time and money this year to make certain the 193rd anniversary of this nation's birth was celebrated enthusiastically.

Twelve communities sponsored festivities which attracted more than 100,000 suburbanites.

Observances featured 11 fireworks displays, five parades and three carnivals.

There were family games and contests, teenage dances, water fights, baby contests, community barbecues and cookouts, art fairs, band competitions, water shows, concerts, and beauty queens.

There was even a bit of nostalgia with such "old fashioned" activities as horseshoe pitching, egg tosses, marksmanship demonstrations, and even a greased pig contest.

The holiday also had its serious side.

Bells were rung in most villages to commemorate symbolically the ringing of the Liberty Bell that proclaimed signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Orators at special civic programs told of the struggles of people all over the world to achieve for themselves the freedoms proclaimed for us in 1776 — freedoms that too often we take too much for granted in 1969.

These civic celebrations served to give us a new appreciation for the Fourth of July by reminding us that freedom is our most precious blessing.

That these family-oriented, community-centered celebrations were so successful in a tribute to the interest, effort, and dedication of local businessmen, chambers of commerce, public officials, Jaycees, Lions, park districts, athletic associations, and veteran groups which spearheaded them. These organizations have earned the gratitude of every suburbanite as well as continued support for their efforts in the future.

What Can You Learn From A Blind Dove?

by GEOFFREY MEHL

When you first get together with Charlie, you've got to feel a certain amount of sympathy for his plight. He's blind — or nearly so — but through good care has learned how to take care of himself rather well.

Charlie is a dove, a blind dove who never really learned how to fly, and only lately has discovered he can make the sort of "coo" that doves are supposed to make.

He lives in a rather small cage — he'd not have much need for a lot of space anyway, and I'm told he can't see any farther than the end of his beak. But Charlie the blind dove is a good bird, and friendly; he's learned that things he can't see — people — aren't going to hurt him.

I met Charlie some time ago, when he was scraggly in the only way a dove can be scraggly. His feathers were dirty and disheveled, and later he began to moult. Have you ever seen anything as pathetic as a bald, blind dove?

BUT CHARLIE WAS taught to eat the seeds and some greens that doves eat, and he learned where it was in the cage, and every day he was taken out and encouraged to flap his wings a bit just for the sake of exercise.

He's improved to the point where he can hold himself up in mid-air, but you've got to be there when he starts to come down.

Charlie has a certain number of diaphanous fans. They're small, white eggs, absolutely useless, because Charlie is penned up in that little cage because he is blind and can't fly.

So you kind of sadly take the eggs from his cage, the miracle of life thwarted because of hereditary circumstance — Charlie is an albino — and you have to feel sort of guilty about dumping the eggs in the garbage.

SOMETIMES YOU WONDER about all the Charlies of the world, but you put those thoughts aside quickly because nobody, but nobody, gets that hung up on a blind dove.

Things were getting to that point not too long ago when Charlie surprised the world by laying an egg. "He" has laid two more since then. They're small, white eggs, absolutely useless, because Charlie is penned up in that little cage because he is blind and can't fly.

So you kind of sadly take the eggs from his cage, the miracle of life thwarted because of hereditary circumstance — Charlie is an albino — and you have to feel sort of guilty about dumping the eggs in the garbage.

Charlie the blind dove is living allegorical comment to our times, or maybe what the times should be, or maybe what the times will never be.

Yep, Charlie, you're an allegorical bird in many ways. Next time I see you I'll bring some rye bread and a piece of lettuce.

Series on Teens 'Well Done'

I read with great interest your articles about teenagers today, "The Kids You Never Know." You are to be congratulated for publishing these informative articles and a good deal of praise is merited to the young women reporters who executed their assignment with such excellence.

It would have been so easy for your papers to mimic the practice of so many newspapers and sensationalize these articles. You performed a service to the community and to parents by maintaining proper perspective and restricting your effort to accurate and responsible reporting — an all too rare thing in these days of the fast buck.

I hope your articles were carefully read and understood by both parents and school people, and that they will be influenced by what they read. What these articles had to say about the decay of parental responsibility, the eroding of the dignity and sanctity of the home, the ineffectiveness and inappropriateness of much of our educational effort, the inability of parents and teachers to communicate with teenagers and thus lose touch with their life and losing power to guide them, the failure of adults to provide proper standards of conduct and ethics for youngsters — all this should have great impact and special meaning for the whole community.

I for one was sobered by the information and insight provided by these articles, and I sincerely hope others were, too. Thank you for helping me to open my eyes — and sharpen my senses of responsibility — as a parent of two teenagers.

Suicide Tries Are Calls For Help

by BARRY SIGALE

Persons across the United States are committing suicide at a record rate.

The figures have gone up sharply in the last decade, and the number of people who take their own lives is spiraling in numbers.

Part of the blame can be placed on the new type of society we live in today, as opposed to that in the late 1950's and early 1960's.

The competitive, high speed fierce way of life may not only have scared the loser in the battle for superiority over his neighbor, but the winner is affected by the keen and bitter fighting he must apply for victory.

LIFE, AND its intricacies, affects each individual in a different manner. Some persons take each hardship with a grain of salt and bounce back with renewed vigor.

Others can't make the grade no matter how hard they try and lose their self-respect and dignity.

The reason most people fail in their attempt to commit suicide is psychological.

They are looking for a way to tell someone they are in dire need of help and that they will do everything short of killing themselves to get that help.

A lot of persons attempt suicide by cutting their wrists. Most times the razor is applied to the skin only enough to draw blood, so the person can say he tried.

Some people take an "overdose" of pills. But the amount they take is just enough to make them very ill and require them to be rushed to the hospital, where others can view their plight and maybe come to the rescue.

THESE PEOPLE are crying out for help. It is a loud way to yell and they hope it will get them the needed results. For some, perhaps, it is the only way they know how to tell someone, "For God's sake, help me."

And it is this impassioned plea that we must all listen to, and act upon. When a person warns of an ever-present thought to do harm to himself, it is time that person gets help, and the very best available.

It is not up to the police to see a person gets psychiatric help. They can only strongly suggest that they do so.

It is up to us to hear their cries and make a move. It is not enough to cover up the fact and hope it will go away. Most times the attempt is made again.

And who is to say that the next attempt won't be a successful one?

Objections to Route 19 Plan To Be Aired

Area residents who object to the proposed relocation of Route 19 will have their chance to speak out at a hearing at 10 a.m. on Monday, July 28 in the Bensenville Village Hall. The route to be considered, known as the Elgin-O'Hare expressway, extends from Illinois Route 83 to the Tri-State Tollway. Director William F. Cellini of the Department of Public Works and Buildings said maps and drawings showing the proposed change will be on display for inspection by the public.

Personnel of the Chicago district office of the Illinois division of highways will discuss individual problems concerning the project prior to and after the hearing. The displays also may be viewed and copied prior to or following the hearing at the office of the Illinois division of highways, 300 N. State St., Chicago, until Aug. 15. CELLINI SAID tentative schedules for right-of-way acquisition and construction will be discussed at the hearing. The division of highways' relocation advisory assistance program, available to anyone displaced as a direct result of the construction of this project, will be explained. The public is invited to participate in the hearing, Cellini said, when written and oral statements may be presented. Written statements also may be mailed after the hearing to the Illinois division of highways' Chicago office for consideration not later than Aug. 15.

Obituaries

Limit Raised

The parcel post weight limit has been raised to 40 pounds for shipments between first-class post offices, Postmaster Virginia Dodge of Arlington Heights announced recently.

The change, effective July 1, means that the maximum weight limit will be increased from 30 pounds on shipments between the larger post offices in the third through eighth post zones (more than 150 miles away).

On packages sent locally and to offices in parcel post zones one and two, the ceiling has been 40 pounds. The maximum size of packages sent between all first-class offices remains 72 inches in combined length and girth.

THE SIZE LIMIT on parcels sent to or from smaller offices, rural or star routes, military post offices, and all Alaskan and Hawaiian post offices stays at 70 pounds, with a combined length and girth of 100 inches.

On July 1, 1970, the length and girth limits will rise to 78 inches on shipments between first-class post offices. On July 1, 1971, it will climb to 84 inches.

YALE ROE: Let's take the money out of the military—not out of the taxpayer.

LET'S TALK ABOUT FISCAL RESPONSIBILITY:

I'm running for Congress because I think it's about time we Republicans remember our traditions and start talking about fiscal responsibility. In the past four years our suburban real estate taxes are up about 25%, our cost of living is up over 15%, interest on loans is more than 8½%, we are paying a surtax on top of our national income tax, and we may soon be paying a state income tax.

How much more can the average family pay?

Isn't it about time to cut out the billions of dollars of waste in the military, rather than turning once again to the taxpayer?

LET'S TALK ABOUT SELF-RELIANCE:

Remember when we used to believe in ourselves? Remember when it was basic to a democracy for the citizen to question the government? I say it's about time we start relying on our own judgement and asking some hard questions:

—Do we really need 497 overseas military bases, many of which were first built a quarter-of-a-century ago?

—Was it necessary to spend $10 billion dollars on 68 major weapons systems that proved to be failures? (That's more money than the government plans to spend on education this year.)

—Must we put up with methods of military procurement that result in expenses that far exceed estimates? The C-5A cargo plane costs $2 billion more than it was supposed to; the Minuteman II missile is expected to cost $4 billion more than original estimates; a Pentagon official testifies that the price of a rescue submarine has increased 2700 per cent!

Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Robert H. Charles testifies that: "The procurement of our major weapons systems has in the past been characterized by enormous cost overruns—several hundred percent—and by technical performance that did not come up to promise."

WE CAN DO SOMETHING ABOUT ALL THIS:

I reject the word, alienation. I reject the word, helplessness. I reject the idea that there is nothing we can do.

I say it is time to return to our traditions:

—that the civilians should control the military.

—that we must practice self-reliance, not just slavishly accept military waste.

—that we must be fiscally responsible, must be able to pay for our armaments.

—that a country must be financially secure as well as militarily secure.

Our country must be militarily strong, but it must be economically strong as well. It is time to take needed revenues out of the billions wasted by the military, not out of the taxpayer.

Yale Roe for Congress Committee

P.O. Box 31, Hubbard Woods Post Office, Winnetka, Illinois

I want a Congressman who will fight the military waste; who will work to keep our country economically secure, as well as militarily secure. Please let me know how I can help Yale Roe go to Congress.

NAME: _____

ADDRESS: _____

WHAT YOU CAN DO:

You can help send Yale Roe to Congress, so the 13th Congressional District will be represented by a man who believes in our values and who isn't afraid to speak up. The times are too serious for men of silence. It was men of silence who supported the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution. Send a man of courage to Congress.

Oct. 4, 1957: Sputnik Launched a New Era

By EDWARD K. DELONG
SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—More than three years passed between the opening of space age in 1957 and the first human ventures into orbit.
Man had barely rippled the vast, forbidding ocean of the cosmos when President John F. Kennedy boldly proposed in 1961 that the United States land men on the moon "before this decade is out."
Only two space pilots had looked down on their home planet from above its atmosphere. One was the Russian, Yuri Gagarin, the other America's Alan B. Shepard, and both their flights had occurred within the two months before Kennedy spoke. Combined, their flight times totaled only 2 hours 3 minutes.

Hurling unmanned satellites into orbit was still quite an accomplishment. Three times the United States had tried to send a satellite into orbit, but each time it had failed. Man's conquest of space was still in its infancy.
The space age dawned upon a startled world Oct. 4, 1957.
On that morning, a great white rocket climbed away from the launch pad of South Central Russia and placed a 23-inch diameter, 184-pound ball in an oval path around the earth.
The Russians called it Sputnik 1. Its name meant "fellow traveler of the earth."

Later, millions heard that awesome shrill "voice from space" on American radio and television broadcasts. Amateur radio operators tuned it in. News commentators struggled to explain that the earth now had a new moon, one made by human hands.
Another Red Satellite
Scarcely had the United States—and, indeed, the world—adjusted to the shock of Sputnik 1 when the second shoe fell. Another Russian satellite soared into orbit 30 days later, on Nov. 3, 1957.
Sputnik 2, weighing an amazing 1,121 pounds, carried a little black-and-white dog named Laika and a self contained artificial atmosphere that kept her alive for seven days. It was the first firm indication that Russia's real space goal was to orbit men.

The Sputnik launches of October and November, 1957, caused consternation and soulsearching in the United States. Some have called it the greatest shock to the nation since Pearl Harbor. Words like "space race" and "space lag" entered a vocabulary already striving with "arms race" and "missile gap."
But it was a month later, on Dec. 6, 1957, that American embarrassment in the field of missiles and space reached a peak.
On that dismal day, before scores of newsmen at Cape Canaveral (now Cape Kennedy), and millions watching on television, America's first attempt to orbit a grapefruit-size Vanguard satellite failed. The first stage of the rocket exploded on ignition, and the rest of the rocket crumpled on the wet Florida beach sand.

America's first satellite—a little 3.25-pound ball—sent out its plaintive "beep-beep" from a palm-leaf flat instead of from the realm of space. The failure took on disastrous proportions.
"Overnight" recalls space pioneer Dr. Wernher von Braun, "it became popular to question the bulwarks of our society, our public education system, our industrial strength, international policy, defense strategy and forces, the capability of our science and technology."
"Even the moral fiber of our people came under searching examination."
Against this background of pessimism, Von Braun and his German rocket team which had been transported to the United States after World War II were called into the breach. They were working for the Army on missile development at Huntsville, Ala.

1961, 27-year-old Maj. Yuri A. Gagarin orbited the earth one time inside the eight-foot diameter ball of a Vostok spaceship. His flight lasted 1 hour, 48 minutes.
ter Disappointment
Perhaps the bitterest disappointment from the Gagarin flight was felt by seven American astronauts who were preparing for one of their number—Alan B. Shepard—to ride a bell-shaped Mercury capsule on a bullet-like trajectory briefly into space and then down into the Atlantic.
Listening to the news of Gagarin's flight at Cape Canaveral, however, astronaut Donald K. Slayton found reason for optimism.

Why Priests Quit, and Why Some Can't

NEW YORK (UPI)—While hundreds of Americans have left the Roman Catholic priesthood in the past two years, others who wish to leave do not because of the few they will not be able to support themselves, a former priest said.
Trading the priesthood for secular life is "not economically negotiable," said Arthur E. LeBlanc, who resigned his 10-year priesthood in 1968 to marry.
James E. Drane, another ex-priest, cited the loss of "economic security" as one of his prime problems after leaving the priesthood.

The majority said they left over the issue of celibacy. They wanted optional celibacy for priests rather than the church's compulsory celibacy.
George H. Frein, a priest for 10 years, said he left "for one reason only: I wanted to marry."
Celibacy, he said, was often "a confining and isolating experience (it) became a hindrance in life," he said, "after my meeting and falling in love with the girl I later married." He married a former nun in 1968.
After falling in love, he said, "I found I was relating openly and honestly to others, the ex-priests also cited as reasons for resigning from the ministry a lack of "intellectual freedom," loneliness, disgust with "monastic tradition" and a waste of "abilities and education."

Several ex-priests blamed the church hierarchy—mainly bishops—for standing in the way of optional celibacy.
Bishops are opposed to a married clergy, former priest Eugene C. Bianchi said, because they fear "losing control over their priests." A married priest "may not be as free for his ministry."
Besides the problem of priestly colibacy, the ex-priests also cited as reasons for resigning from the ministry a lack of "intellectual freedom," loneliness, disgust with "monastic tradition" and a waste of "abilities and education."

The priests all concluded that reform in the Catholic church is essential, "if the church is to survive."
"If it (the church) preaches freedom and respect for natural rights to men at large, the church cannot deny that freedom and those rights in its own household," said Bianchi. "This is hypocrisy."

Nixon Finds a Paradise: Grand Cay

by MERRIMAN SMITH
WASHINGTON (UPI)—The story is admittedly hard to grasp in printed words, but envision any old movie featuring Lauren Bacall and Humphrey Bogart, or Talulah Bankhead set in the tropics and far removed from civilization.
Then one may begin to get the idea of how it is on the Grand Cay of the Bahamas which is becoming one of President Nixon's favorite resorts.
Last week he spent most of two days at the Grand Cay residence of Robert Abplanalp, a New York industrialist who has developed a deep interest in several projects involving this group of tiny, off-the-beaten-path islands about 150 miles from the southeast Florida coast.

The Abplanalp residence is rather grand structure, for this area, overlooking a complex of tiny islands and lagoons. He is interested in the area for several reasons. One is the harvesting of rare tropical fish for sale to breeders and fanciers all over the world. Another interest is admittedly experimental but it involves so called "fish farming"—raising food fish in vast quantities by providing natural foods and breeding areas in which these fish will breed and be harvested in the manner of a well-run wheat or corn farm.
About seven miles from Grand Cay is another relatively large island owned by Abplanalp, Walker Cay, on which stands what has to be one of the more colorful hotels in this part of the world. Known as the Walker Cay Club, it is a fascinating old structure.

The 20-room structure has four air-conditioned bedrooms for transients. When Nixon is in residence on Grand Cay, his staff and a small press pool is based on Walker Cay, virtually without communications except for the White House internal shortwave radio system.
Meals are served at precise hours in the hotel lobby—and only at those hours. One corner of the lobby is devoted to a tiny bar run for a few hours each day by a moody Swiss fellow. The hotel manager is a 19-year-old American boy, his chief assistant is 18.

Arlington Student Has Perfect Average

Linda Bruning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Bruning, 103 S. Windsor Drive, Arlington Heights, has just returned from Midwestern College, Denison, Iowa, after compiling a perfect 4.0 grade point average during the spring semester.
In addition to her studies, Miss Bruning has organized a day camp for the mentally retarded. Twenty-four students are enrolled in the eight-week course which stresses arts and crafts, physical education and conducts field trips.

The Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Wednesday, July 9, the 190th day of 1969 with 175 to follow.
The moon is between its last quarter and new phase.
The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Saturn.
The evening stars are Mars and Jupiter.
On this day in history:
In 1850 President Zachary Taylor died of a typhus infection after serving one year and four months. He was succeeded the next day by Vice President Millard Fillmore.
In 1900 Queen Victoria signed an act by which the individual state of Australia agreed to join into a federal commonwealth.
In 1943 American, Canadian and British forces invaded Sicily.
In 1960 Russian Premier Nikita Khrushchev threatened the United States with Soviet rockets if Washington attempted to oust the Castro Communist regime in Cuba.
A thought for the day: Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche said: "Distrust all in whom the impulse to punish is powerful."

Arndt's Mound Debut for R-B a No-Hitter!

White Pines G.C.

by PAUL LOGAN
The Chick Evans Golf Club
The name has a nice ring to it and, should White Pines Golf Club ever decide to change its name, it would be a fitting one for the Bensenville 36-hole layout.

For 13 out of the last 14 years the Chick Evans Amateur Tournament has been staged at the Bensenville park district owned and Branigan Organization managed club. The reason for holding this fine tournament at White Pines can probably be traced to its fine attributes of ideal location and top quality.

Jim Rodio, head club professional, explains the geographical standpoint.

"This course is so darn popular because it's so near to the city. Golfers don't want to drive as far as Addison from the city and the course is good playing and holds up well."

The course boasts two fine 18-hole tests—the North Course, a 6,252-yarder, and the South Course, a 6,340-yarder. The only problem facing the average golfer is which course to play.

A golfer posed this question while paying his green fees and Rodio remarked, "Which is easier all depends on how you are hitting the ball at the time." Or, in other words, both are challenging.

Rodio rated the final three holes on the North side as being the most difficult on the entire 18.

"The 16th is a straightaway hole but it's a long par 3," explained the pro of the 402-yarder. "On the right-hand side of the fairway about 250 yards out is a bunker and there are also traps on either side of the green."

"The 17th is the same thing (a 420 yard par 4) being straightaway and having similar traps.

"The 18th is just a long ball buster. Nobody has ever seen anybody get on in two not even when it's as hard as Irving Park Road!"

These three finishing holes proved their toughness in a recent Chick Evans Amateur tournament, according to Rodio. The first three days the contestants played the South layout but on the final round the North's last three holes were used for the finish. The scores ballooned because of it.

Jim Rodio

The course record is held on the South side by Wayne Etherton of St. Charles. He toured the course with an eight-under-par 62 during an Evans tourney and eventually won.

Rodio's best score also came on the South Course—a par 70 round—but it came three years before when he had no idea of running the course.

"I never dreamed of becoming a pro," the Chicago native admitted.

The White Pines head man attended Wells High School and, after graduating, he worked in the metal plating field. He followed this up with 27 years in a foundry and then a few years as a salesman for a sand company before taking a job as the assistant pro at the Naperville Country Club in 1968.

Last fall he took over the head duties at Indian Lakes Golf Club and in October he changed places with Tom Speck, who had been the head man at White Pines.

One has to like this personable new pro who sells himself and his over 40 year old course without any trouble. And a top salesman as well as public relations man is needed for a course that does such a tremendous business.

On a normal weekday he'll see from 300 to 350 customers and a typical weekend day will draw between 500 and 600 duffers. Another challenging aspect about White Pines is its large number of league linksters. Approximately 1,400 players march around three out of the four nines. However, Rodio points out that the South's back nine is always available to the non-leaguer.

During the school year, Rodio estimated that about 20 high school and college teams hold matches at White Pines. Among the more notable ones are Fenton High School, Roosevelt University, Chicago Circle Campus and Wright Junior College.

All these student-golfers, league members and daily fee players can enjoy the fine lockerroom facilities as well as the remodeled pro shop and grill.

For golfing events and non-golfing events the large dining room, located on the upper level, is available. It holds about 400 and is also just newly remodeled.

All in all the course is ideal for the daily fee golfer because of its nearness to the suburbs as well as the city. For those in the suburbs the quickest way to get there is to take Route 83 to Irving Park Road, turn right on Church St. and you can't miss it.

White Pines rates are as follows: Weekdays—Before 3 p.m., $4.75, after 3 p.m., $2.75; and Saturdays, Sundays and Holidays—Before 1 p.m., $6; after 1 p.m., $5; and after 3 p.m., $3.

Star Backer
WASHINGTON (UPI)—"Slingshot Sammy" Baugh of the Redskins is best known in National Football League record books as a forward passer yet Baugh holds an NFL punting record that has not been broken for 28 years. Baugh's 51.0 yard booting average, made in 1940, still stands as the

Rushing Rookies
CLEVELAND (UPI)—Only nine backs have led the National Football League in rushing during their rookie years since 1932. The feat was last accomplished in 1957 by Cleveland's Jim Brown who ran for 942 yards in 202 attempts, scoring nine touchdowns.

Well, the guy nobody believes in did it again.

Les Arndt, who has to resort to supplication and the vocal support of his teammates to earn a pitching assignment, may have made believers of Roselle-Bensenville coaches Norm Anderson and Ray Kutella Saturday afternoon at Lake Park. Or if he didn't, you can't blame him for wondering why.

In his first trip to the mound for R-B this season, the rugged right-hander fired a no-hitter to lead the local legionnaires to their fourth straight victory (after five opening losses), a 7-1 taming of West Chicago.

The lone run for the visitors scored in the seventh on an error, a stolen base, and a sacrifice fly.

Les walked a man in the second and then set down 10 in a row before issuing another pass in the sixth. He struck out 8 and was never in trouble.

Admits Anderson: "I guess you could say the only reason we started him was because (Joe) Saccomanno was still tired and some of the guys on the team suggested we give him a shot."

It isn't a new experience for Mr. Arndt.

A man in the background on Lake Park's squad all year, Les didn't get a start until the final game of the season when a group of his teammates went to coach Norb Wesolowski and asked him to start Les in the finale.

Said Wesolowski after Arndt had hurled the Lancers to a 7-2 victory: "He went out there determined to prove I was wrong in not letting him pitch, and he certainly succeeded."

Less had to prove it all over again Saturday and to say that he succeeded could be the understatement of the year.

R-B made the road a little easier for him with a steady seven-hit attack which, coupled with West Chicago miscues, vaulted the hosts into the lead and steadily increased it.

West Chicago's starter Carlton was rocked for four runs in the third which shattered a scoreless deadlock and moved R-B into command.

John Gells started it with a walk Mike Fonseca drilled a single and Saccomanno walloped a drive to deep left-center for a three-run homer. Mike Kramarczyk singled. Gary Thorsen singled, and Kramarczyk scored the fourth on a fielder's choice and an error.

R-B pecked away at reliever Johnson for single runs in the fourth, fifth, and sixth.

Gells made it 5-0 in the fourth when he singled, stole second, and came across on a throwing error. Run number six was scored by Thorsen who singled, stole, went to third on a wild pitch, and countered on another error.

In the sixth, Jim Schriver reached on an error, advanced on Arndt's single, and scored on a ground ball by Gells.

Three games are on tap for R-B this weekend starting with Friday evening (6:15) encounter at Lombard East. Saturday afternoon (4: p.m.) they'll host Wheaton and Sunday they'll journey to Warrenville.

With the hectic schedule, they may need some pitching help. And if they look around, they may find a guy named Les Arndt waiting for another turn. Problem is, what's he going to do for an encore?

Romme Tough in First Card Test

Marty Romme saved an otherwise gloomy day for Joe White and his DuPage Cardinals Saturday, hurling a five-hit victory in his first mound appearance for the Illinois State Baseball League entry.

"He did a terrific job," enthused White.

After a three-run burst by Northbrook in the bottom of the second, Marty blanked the Merchants through the final seven innings, striking out six enroute to a 4-3 victory.

The Cardinals scrambled back with three in the fourth on singles by Romme, Irwin Gernand, Dean Gorman, a walk to Daryl Logan, and a two-run double by Dave Daley, and then pushed across the decisive marker in the fifth on the alert base-running of Gernand.

After he had singled and stolen second, he advanced to third on a wild pitch. With men on first and third and one out, a pop-up on infield was dropped. When the play was made for the force at second, Gernand streaked for the plate and beat the throw.

Romme, who experienced some control trouble, issuing seven walks, thus bested Michalich, evening things up for the Cardinals who had lost to him earlier this season.

Earlier Saturday the Cardinals had been drubbed in a league encounter with Naperville 15-4.

A walk to Roger Heaton and a triple by Gorman (three-for-three) put DuPage on top 1-0 in the first, but the Cards fell behind 3-1 as Tim Rand continued to have trouble.

Gorman's single, Gernand's double, Meyers' single, and a two-run single by Wally Stritzel keyed a three-run uprising representatives of BBAA baseball leagues (left to right): Joey Rightmore (Minor League), Tony Eibin (Major League), and Chris Berner (Intermediate League).

City Fathers, BPAA Fire Annual Pre-Battle Salvos

The battle lines are being drawn for one of the classic diamond battles of this or any year—the annual softball game pitting Bensenville's fearsome city fathers vs the awesome aggregation of the Bensenville Boys Athletic Association.

And while fireworks are technically illegal in Illinois, the pyrotechnics from this confrontation might make the Northern Lights jealous.

Feature attraction of Bensenville's annual Baseball Day, the contest is slated to get under way at 8 p.m. Saturday but as is often the case the verbal warfare is starting early and figures to continue through the week. Masters of verbosity and vilification if not wizards of diamond alchemy, the pre-war battles have reached unprecedented heights. In other words, both sides talk a heckuva game.

A recent BBAA release states unequivocally. "At 8 p.m., July 12th, the BBAA will beat the city fathers in the annual softball game—provided the city fathers show up."

"Don Schwanz, president of the BBAA, fearful of a cancelled game, called an emergency meeting of the Baseball Day Committee and suggested that BBAA teams use only the team mothers to play the game."

"Joe Krass, co-chairman of the day, felt there was no need to use good players and consequently scheduled his vacation for this time and left town."

"Leo Carzoli, Bensenville's astute softball analyst, was overheard saying 'Can you imagine the irony of the managers of city fathers, Dave Sloan and Bill Bychowski, trying to match wits with our branny and bald Emil Kupisch?'"

"Ye Gods," grunted Mayor Varble as he prepared to make arrangements to be unavailable for the weekend. Chief of Police Wally Tett may play if he is rested every other inning, Lt. of the police force Arthur Garcia will not participate but may practice some putting on the side lines.

"It appears at this time that the city fathers may not have the necessary 10 players because the fire department boys wisely will excuse themselves to shine their little red trucks at 8 p.m. Saturday."

"Superintendent of Schools Martin Zuckerman will be the game's official ump, and has promised to wear his glasses."

"We would like to caution all players on both sides not to run over the little fella, Vince Pacifici Vince, treasurer of the BBAA, fees that slaughtering and butchering the city fathers is a hell of a way to make money."

"Marilyn Romme says: 'It's better than selling candy."

"Can you visualize for a minute. Mrs. Helen Scott stops selling hot dogs. Over at the tennis court Palmers band is whooping it up. Dick Weber, the game announcer, yells batter up—aw, c'mon somebody, bat... and then resignedly adds, well, I guess the game is over and now folks we will raffle off the color TV and other prizes."

The annual diamond extravaganza even transcends party lines and brings harmony—for a moment anyway—to local politics.

Trustees David Sloan (Action Party) and Bychowski (Civil Party) will play together with the city fathers. Sloan was quoted as saying: "There has been an attempt here at a bi-partisan atmosphere. The coaches are fighting a losing cause anyway since they're just fat old men."

Another trustee quipped "Can't you see the rhubarbs if Zuckerman calls school board member Will Davison out on strikes?"

A bulletin arrived reminding fans planning on attending the once-in-a-lifetime (well, once in a year anyway) showdown to get their seats early. No earthly reason could be offered for this request, so it is assumed it is the product of a sadistic sense of humor or the senseless propaganda of a publicist.

Furniture from Cables-pools

by MARY HUTCHINGS

"It's funny how if you're interested in finding cables-pools you seem to find them everywhere," says John McGee, a Prospect High School sociology teacher who has wheeled home quite a few to his home in Hoffman Estates, where his wife Pat helps him to transform the spools into furnishings of all sorts for their apartment.

The newly wed couple of one year have purchased only three pieces of furniture — most of their things are do-it-yourself ingenuities, including numerous cables-pool tables and hassocks.

They suggest that even high school or college students might find a useful hobby in the art of refinishing old objects.

STUDENTS' ROOMS might need a little atmosphere; barren college dorms can usually use a "homey" touch and cables-pools make great furnishings even for family rec rooms, living rooms or patios.

"There's no limit to what you can make," adds McGee. Since he became interested in the craft in college, he has made a kitchen table, several endtables, and a hassock, and has made plans for a cables-pool cradle, bookcase and picnic table.

McGee found his first cables-pool on a garbage pile at a construction site and rolled it one mile home. Then he says he "got the bug" and asked the manager not to burn any more of the cables-pools. "Most are now stamped 'no return' anyway," he explains.

The first step in the transformation from junk to furniture comes with a good cleaning of the spool, which is usually found in the mud and dirt and requires a wire-brush going over to remove as much grime as possible. If a table is to be the finished product, the next step is a simple staining which is applied against the grain to bring it out. The McGees have used mostly honey maple and walnut stains on their furnishings.

THE STAIN IS allowed to dry for 12 hours before a coat of varnish or plastic is applied. In another 12 hours, the plastic may be sanded off, and more applied. This process is repeated as often as necessary, depending on the luster desired.

Cables-pools come in all sizes, so that different objects are easily made. McGee suggests that a kitchen table, for example, be 30 inches high and 42 inches in diameter. He has cut the base of his table straight across on two edges, to allow for chairs to get closer to the table. "But it is indestructible," exclaims McGee.

One of the only problems, which McGee says, "really isn't a problem," is that there are three holes in the top of each cables-pool, and there are also several protruding bolts. The McGees have used imagination in finding ways to disguise them. A lamp made from an old table leg covers a hole in one endtable, while salt and pepper shakers could be set in the holes in the kitchen table.

Nicks and holes in the cables-pools are really part of their character. When the couple purchased some unfinished chairs (for $5 each) "they looked too good," so McGee found himself hitting the chairs with a hammer, a staple gun and some keys in order to achieve that special worn effect.

Mrs. McGee explains that she "had never seen too much good in old stuff until I got to college. There I also learned to sew and knit and refinish things, and after I found that I could do it, it wasn't that hard. One thing led to another and now . . ."

SHE GLANCES around her apartment, where "old" is everywhere and an unfinished cables-pool awaits refinishing in the middle of the room.

Mrs. McGee, who taught physical education at Elk Grove High School until January, says she "nearly went nuts" when she was no longer teaching. Helping to refurbish the cables-pools "gave her something to do," and she filled the rest of her time making pillows, placemats, hassock covers and milkcan stools and looking for auctions.

Cost of this hobby is very inexpensive, explains McGee, who estimates that his kitchen table cost only $2. Each piece is unique, since no two cables-pools are ever alike.

He suggests plans for more furnishings by saying "use your imagination — I think almost anything is possible." A bookcase, for instance, can be made from smaller cables-pools which are cut to a right angle on one side. These will fit into corners and could even be stacked to give more shelf space.

A picnic table with attached seating would be a more difficult project and would require an eight-foot cables-pool. If the bolts are loosened in the top the spool will come apart, allowing the boards in the middle to fall out. McGee explains that cross pieces could be wedged between these boards to support four seats on the outside, and then the whole thing could be sunk in the ground.

GETTING AN eight-footer home may pose kind of a problem, although McGee says it can be done. Most of his findings have been fit easily into the trunk of his Camaro, but they have just purchased a 1947 truck which they plan to use when antiquing or scavenging for cables-pools.

The couple cautions against "too many round things in a room — they'll make it look like the furniture is just cables-pools," while just the right number of spools will add a very special atmosphere.

Creating your own furniture is inexpensive, useful and an enjoyable pastime — a profitable way to fill those hours when "there's nothing to do."

JOHN McGEE of Hoffman Estates shows the work which goes into each piece of cables-pool furniture created by him and his wife. The couple suggests that students might find an interesting hobby in making some of their own furnishings.

Serendipity

by RUSS SINKLER

There once was a saying, "Better late than never!"

Here then is one time in particular that I find I must agree with someone else's observations.

I must point out, however, that that quippy little proverb goes to two extents.

It all started about six months ago when I accidentally heard a song, "Try a Little Tenderness." It was good, but I only heard it once. Then radio commercials began to play the song's mother-ship album, with an excerpt from "Tenderness" exclaiming, "Got to, Got to, Got to," in a rather commanding voice.

I was interested. A few months later, a new hit was brewing in Chicago that had to do with the No. 1. It soon reached that spot and I was interested.

The album has a rather simple name which goes to prove that "little packages hold the best surprises." As a matter of fact the album "Three Dog Night" is simply the performers' "call letters."

THE ALBUM IS worth it in itself just for "Tenderness" and "One," but the "Big G" doesn't end there. Great beating songs like "Chest Fever" and "Someone To Love" grab your attention, while mellow songs like "Tenderness," "One," "Don't Make Promises" hold it.

Neither emotions nor words can express the complete satisfaction to the old ear lobes that "Three Dog Night" provides.

It's on the Dunhill-ABC label and it's on top, too. Pick it up!

During this next week, I'm gonna try and do my best to know heavy blues, I will be introduced to it by a raft of blues greats from our area as well as England on the London (Sure) album, "Southern Comfort." I'll pass the word on to you on it, then, next time.

Meanwhile, take care and have fun.

By the way, before Schedule Time steps in, I again ask for your feelings and emotions on anything. Just write me in care of Paddock Publications, Arlington Heights. O.K. O.K.

SCHEDULE TIME

P.S. The reason I say "better late than never" is . . . "Three Dog Night" is finally makin' it and I'm finally reviewing it!

MRS. PAT McGEE, a former teacher at Elk Grove High School, sets her kitchen table, which was once a dirty cables-pool. Although the base has been cut straight on two ends to allow chairs to be drawn up close, Mrs. McGee says it is "indestructible."

Highlights on Youth

John Guth To Appear at Coffeehouse

The newest place in Arlington Heights to meet friends, talk, listen to top entertainment and just unwind is "The Appointed Place," a coffeehouse sponsored by the park district.

Located in the basement of Recreation Park on Miner, the coffeehouse is restricted to the "16 and over" age group. Entertainment during the opening week included the "Traveling Triad," the "Chicago Oz Blues Band" and the soft lyrics of Kathy Betts, a Kendall College co-ed.

According to Jack Sullivan, supervisor of the coffeehouse, "The Appointed Place" hopes to schedule entertainment including small jazz and folk ensembles, short plays or dramatic productions and dialogues. The place is restricted to older students on the recommendations of proprietors of past coffeehouses who noticed that younger students usually didn't appreciate the kind of entertainment offered.

REFRESHMENTS include coffee for five cents, order for 10 cents, sandwiches for 40 cents and various soft drinks from a machine. Small cardtables and a few cables-pools allow patrons to gather in groups as large or small as they choose in the spacious facility.

Nearly 75 high school and college student and adults attended the grand opening in the newly decorated basement. Lights are red and blue against walls draped in black burlap. Murals done on sheets frame the stage area, which is set against a gigantic modern art painting. One wall has been set aside for various graffiti, and others are adorned with posters of all sorts.

Sullivan says, "Kids need a place to go and talk and be themselves. We are here to give them a service, and we need their cooperation. We'd like to use as much area talent as possible." Persons interested in auditioning for the coffeehouse should contact Sullivan at 255-8850.

Commenting on the difficulties which some area coffeehouses have had, Sullivan says, "We are not anticipating problems; we're trying to foresee all that we can offer to the teens of the area." The coffeehouse supervisor was happy with the turnout during the first week. He says, "Right now we're open Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays, but if kids want more nights or different nights, we might be able to arrange that too. We are here to serve their needs."

ADMISSION to the coffeehouse is 75 cents and it opens from 8 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. each night. This week's schedule includes appearances by a blues band and Ray Herr (Ides of March) tonight, and folk singer John Guth on Friday. On Sunday Kathy Betts will direct a production of "The Bald Soprano," an absurdist play by Eugene Ionesco.

Youth Invest Now To Be Rich Later

Want to be rich when you're 30 years older than you are now?

Then start investing now, says Jack Miller of Hayden — Stone, Inc., Randhurst.

"If a young person gets started investing now, in say, Growth Mutual Funds, and if he adds to his investment periodically, it's amazing what he can build up in 25 to 30 years."

Using the example of a person who invests $100 a month, (which most students could not afford) he points to a total investment of $24,000 after 20 years. At the end of this period, he could probably liquidate his stocks for more than $114,000. The student who invested $10 every month could sell his stocks for $11,400.

"At this compounding rate, the amount would double every five years," says Miller. In 30 years, students investing $100 and $10 every month would have $600,000 and $60,000 respectively. "If $10 were placed in a savings account every month for the same period, and interest were compounded quarterly at a rate of 4 1/2 per cent, the account would come to a total of $3,900."

"THE TROUBLE with too many persons," declares Miller, "is that they wait until they are 50 or 55 years old before worrying about the time when they can no longer work."

"It is important for parents to start a program of some kind for their kids when they are young. It is very important for kids to start young in putting away some of their funds. Time is as important as the amount of money in investments," he says.

Rising college costs, which have soared 67 per cent in the past 12 years, make a program of saving important. Money for college which students will be needing within a few years is best placed in a savings account, Miller advises.

"If kids do have money that they receive as gifts that they would like to put in stocks, I would suggest that they consider industries that are early in their development — oceanography, water and air pollution control, electronics," he says. "The reason is that when you're young, you can afford to take more risks than when you are older and have more responsibilities."

HOWEVER, due to fluctuations in the stock market and the consequent in-availability of monies on short notice, Miller does not suggest stock investments unless students are prepared to hold their stock for more than several years. Many brokerage firms will not even open accounts for less than $1,000, he adds.

Miller concludes, "I think it's wonderful for kids to be interested in and to know how our economy works and to realize how important it is that corporations make profits. For so long, 'profit' was a dirty word, but by becoming part owners in a corporation, it is easier to understand why profits are important if a company wants to stay in business."

Poet's Corner

THE SPIDER

The spider in my room,
crawls up the wall.
He doesn't hurt me;
he's just there,
spinning his cobwebs.
Why do I fear him?
Is it because his cobwebs might infect my mind?
And so, from fear, the spider is squished out by a Kleenex in my hand.
Yet his cobwebs remain and I am still afraid.

Mexico's Miniskirted Mayoress Rattles Traditions

by TERRENCE W. MCGARRY

SAN JUAN TEOTIHUACAN, Mexico (UPI)—San Juan Teotihuacan is known for two things in Mexico these days: the extreme age and height of its mysterious pyramids, and the youth and pretty knees of its mayor.

The pyramids trace their beginnings back 2,000 years, and reach a height of about 15 stories over the cactus-spiked plain. The mayoress is 27 years old, and her hemlines reach a height of about 3-4 inches above those controversial knees.

The 1960s have come to the town—where archeologists say the oldest civilization west of the Atlantic was born—in the form of the "miniskirt mayoress," bubbly Maria Pineda.

Miss Pineda wears miniskirts and knee-high white boots. She painted city hall fluorescent pink, beat out her fiancé for the nomination and has been accused of smoking cigars.

"Oh that horrible cigar story," she groaned one day recently in her office (painted and carpeted in baby blue at her own expense).

"It started as a joke. It's a put-on and all those people who get excited about it don't get the joke. There's the traditional picture of the Mexican politician—you know, the sombrero, the pistol in the belt and the cigar."

"So when I was elected mayor, a cartoonist did this sketch of me dressed up that way, including the cigar. Then in a television interview, they gave me a cigar to hold as a joke. And now I get phone calls from the licenciados in Mexico City, complaining about my supposedly going around causing a scandal by smoking cigars in public."

The "licenciados in Mexico City"—Licenciado is the common title for a lawyer—are the back room politicians who run the staid old Party of Revolutionary Institutions (PRI), which has controlled the Mexican government, and virtually all politics in the country, for over 40 years.

Mayoress as newspapers dubbed her (to her annoyance). They don't like her miniskirts or youthful image, they are not even very happy with her being a woman, and they particularly resent the publicity she gets and the freewheeling remarks she makes. Mexican politicians, especially young ones like Miss Pineda, are supposed to be seen and not heard.

"I get tired of them criticizing my hemlines. I'm young. I feel young and I intend to dress young," the mayoress told UPI. "They're not going to get me into some high-necked, down-to-there sack or whatever it is they think lady politicians should wear."

"No, I'll probably never marry—not unless some foreigner will have me," she said. "Mexican men are so selfish. They just think of me, me, me. And they can't accept a woman with abilities."

"My fiancé was going to be the mayor. He was a clinch for the nomination, and then in a few hours time, the party leaders changed their minds and picked me instead. That was the end of the engagement."

"Marriage and a political career, or any career, don't mix for a woman in this country. I don't have any boyfriends. The boys are all afraid of me."

As mayor, she had to fight for respect in a land where women are traditionally relegated to cooking and bearing children.

"The pistol-carrying bosses in the countryside figured they would walk all over the chickie," as one Mexico City newspaper put it.

"They did think they could ignore me when I took office 18 months ago, but they respect me now," she said. For starters, she tripled the municipal income by forcing the "pistol-carrying bosses" to pay their taxes. "Before me, they used to tax bribe the mayor and they never got a tax bill," she said. "I went over those books myself and made them pay up."

She also installed the town's first drinking water system, tripled police wages, bought the town's first patrol car, and is building a school and an aquarium to draw more of the tourists who flock to the neighboring pyramids. And she paved the dusty, rundown central plaza, helped dig flowerbeds herself to spruce it up, and painted the city hall and the plaza bandstand an eye-searing fluorescent pink.

"I think it's very pretty. Some of these old government buildings are so gloomy and depressing."

She also brightened up city hall with a corps of pretty young secretaries. Taking their cue from the boss, there isn't a covered knee in sight.

"It's really a big sacrifice for me being the mayor. I have to give up travel and a lot of other things I would enjoy. I don't get anything for myself out of it."

Miss Pineda, draws no salary as mayor of the municipality of 17,000, about 20 miles northeast of Mexico City. But she gets $4 per day in her capacity as an official of the town registry. Left independently well-to-do by an inheritance from her father, who owned a bus line, she went into politics after graduating with honors (a 9.6 average out of a possible 10) from the law school of the National University.

What bigger things does she have in mind?

"I'd like to make it to the supreme court. I like the profession of law, and I think I could make it, if they let me."

The idea of the Senorita Justice, in her minirobe, painting the supreme court chambers a pretty fluorescent pink, should really give those licenciados in Mexico City something to think about.

Jumbo Burger: Seafaring Fare

It's time to weigh anchor, furl sails or start the engine, and get away from it all for a day afloat. Keep in mind that boating makes for hearty appetites... and tote the fixings for a Jumbo Burger and Vegetable Medley.

The Jumbo Burger is a two-pound beef patty that looks like a hamburger, offers the convenience of a meat loaf. It's almost full-skillet size, cooks in about 15 minutes and serves six to eight hungry sailors. If you own a coated pan, use that in the galley for convenience... and serve the meal on plastic-coated plates to eliminate the clean-up chores. You will want to cut corners wherever you can to spend a minimum of time in the galley.

To make the Jumbo Burger most flavorful, mix with instant minced onions, salt and Tabasco, the liquid red pepper seasoning. Tabasco is another major convenience in the galley... the small bottle takes up little storage space, and the spicy sauce goes into so many of the foods you prepare afloat... canned soups, meats, sea food, vegetables, eggs, sandwich fillings and vegetable juice.

Nippy Tabasco adds zest to the Vegetable Medley, too. The vegetable combination may be made in the same skillet or separately. It makes use of canned corn niblets, canned peas and tomato... and it's a simple and wonderful combination with the beef. A few drops of Tabasco go to work to enliven the delicate vegetable flavors.

Some crusty French bread would taste great with the main course. For dessert, fresh fruit would be welcome... or cater to the robust appetites with generous wedges of cake. And there you have the charted course for a splendid meal afloat.

JUMBO BURGER

2 pounds ground beef
1 teaspoon Tabasco
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
2 teaspoons salt
Combine ground beef, Tabasco, instant minced onion and salt. Shape into one large patty. Cook in treated skillet over low heat about 15 minutes on each side. Serve with Tabasco Vegetable Medley. YIELD: 6 to 8 servings. (Note: If treated pan is not used, cook meat loaf in 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine.)

TABASCO VEGETABLE MEDLEY

1 can (12 ounces) corn niblets, drained
1 can (1 pound) peas, drained
1 large tomato, diced
1/2 teaspoon Tabasco
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup butter or margarine
Combine corn and peas, tomato, Tabasco, salt and butter in skillet with meat loaf or small saucepan. Stir and heat to serving temperature. YIELD: 6 to 8 servings.

Hello Hostess

A Big Game Hunt for a Leo Lad

by MARY KAY MARSH

Is there a lion-hearted lad at your house? A gradester born under the sign of Leo, July 24 - Aug. 23? Then celebrate his birthday with a party fit for the king: a big game hunt with a jungle flavor.

Your great hunters may want to dress the part. In khakis, bush jackets, jungle boots and pith helmets. (The latter make choice favors or prizes.)

Plan your safari to a nearby zoo, or make tracks to a Tarzan movie. If your party's at home, check your library for animal films. Or make it a "big game party" with a busy afternoon of active and quiet games.

Shooting skills are essential to the hunter. Compete for accuracy and distance with "spears" and "guns" (the kind that shoot darts with suction-cup tips). Relays and active games are also popular. Just give them such appropriate titles as the Dakitari Dash and the Jungle Jump. And, of course, boys this age love a treasure hunt. Call it a Big Game Hunt and supply appropriate "tracking" clues and goals.

BE SENSE-IBLE about quiet games. Play Eye Spy to check powers of observation. Place about 20 small articles on a tray and let the players study it one minute. Then whisk it away and see who can make the most complete list.

Hunters need, too, a keen sense of smell. Place bits of food, or any solid or liquid with a definite odor, in small numbered bottles. Wrap bottles in foil, leaving small opening, or blindfold the players to prevent visible clues. After each bottle is passed around, ask the players to write down what is in it. Vinegar and onions are almost never missed, but it's surprising how elusive so common an item as "eau de peanut butter" can be. Fill one bottle with plain water or nothing, just to see if their sniffing is really up to snuff.

Your menu can feature your favorite tripe-decker sandwiches to please their he-man appetites. Or let them grill hot dogs over a "jungle campfire." Cupcakes decorated with Lion animal crackers, or a few lion tracks (cut from paper) to and on your picnic table add a bit of big cat authenticity to your party.

A LION HUNT makes a fine finale for your party, and it's an especially effective dramatic stunt around a campfire after dusk. Your leader (dad, perhaps) sits in front of the seated boys and explains that he's the head hunter. "Hunting lions," he says, "is very dangerous. So on this lion hunt you'll do everything I do and say everything I say."

He then begins a long, complicated story. He may say, "Let's start walking," and make walking sounds with his feet. The boys repeat the sentence and the action. He may say, "Here are our horses; we'll ride awhile." The boys repeat the sentence, and the motions and sound effects. The story goes on and on, with the boys repeating each sentence and action. It begins to rain. Mosquitoes bite. They swim a river. They stalk through tall grass. The whole stunt is done in place, as the leader takes the boys through 20 or more dramatic actions.

At the end, he has them climb a tree to look for the lion. When they spot it, he says, "Hand me the gun." It turns out nobody has the gun, so he says, "Let's get out of here." He then leads them back through the whole safari in reverse. They slide down the tree, stalk, swim, slap off mosquitoes, etc., until they're safely home. For the final paragraph, he says, "I'll be sure to take the gun if we ever go lion hunting again. You can get killed hunting lions without a gun."

R.S.V.P. A leader with a sense of drama can work out a spectacular safari for the lion hunt stunt, bringing in all kinds of action and suspense. There isn't space here to print more details, but if you'd like a complete sample script, please send a stamped, addressed envelope plus a quarter to cover copying costs to "Hello, Hostess," c/o Paddock Publications, Box 277, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60004.

Cook of the Week Serves

Meals Just Like Mom's

by LOIS SEILER

"Like mother, like daughter" appropriately applies to the interests and abilities of Mrs. Norman B. Patberg Jr. of Arlington Heights and her mother.

Both are home economics majors and excellent cooks, but Corky (Carolyn) Patberg demurs that she can't compare with her mother, who holds a master's degree in institutional management and is director of food services for all resident halls at Eastern Illinois University.

While a student at Eastern, Corky enrolled in a class which her mother taught and laughingly remarked that it was one of the toughest courses she took.

All of her favorite recipes are those which she has acquired from her mother, who experiments with recipes and also devises her own.

One of her salad specialties that Corky uses often during the summer months is a unique Filled Melon.

"THIS SALAD is easy to prepare and always a success," she said.

She simply peels a cantaloupe, cuts a hole in the top and cleans out the seeds. The cavity is then filled with strawberry gelatin and placed in the refrigerator to set.

To serve, Corky cuts the cantaloupe in wedges and places it on endive or other greens. The gelatin stays firmly in place on top of the cantaloupe. She garnishes the wedges with sliced bananas, seedless grapes on the stem, strawberries, melon balls, blueberries or any other fruit that is in season.

Festive in appearance, this makes a pretty dinner salad, or it can be used effectively as a luncheon fruit plate.

When cut in wedges, one cantaloupe may be cut to serve four. Corky suggests slicing it in rounds if six are to be served.

REFRESHING FOR the summer months, this salad is often served by Corky as an accompaniment for a ham loaf.

The Patbergs, like most suburban families, enjoy meat cooked on the grill. With barbecued meats, Corky likes to serve a hearty vegetable casserole. She has two favorites that are especially tasty with steak, chops and hamburgers.

One is a medley of vegetables that combines steamed onions, celery and carrots with canned green beans and canned tomatoes. Baked in lots of butter with tapioca as the thickening agent, this dish is very tasty and different.

"It is nice for cook-outs because it can be fixed in advance and just popped into the oven before dinner," Corky commented. She added that it is equally appealing at Christmas time because the vegetable dish is so colorful.

HER OTHER FAVORITE — a corn casserole — is what she terms "a glorified way of fixing scalloped corn."

Also quick and easy to prepare, it consists of canned cream-style corn, eggs, cooked noodles, butter, onion and grated cheese.

"Men like this dish because it is so filling, and the onion and cheese give it lots of zest," Corky said. She recommends serving a big tossed salad along with it.

ther of these casseroles and the meat.

Because she especially enjoys cooking and experimenting with recipes, Corky is grateful that her family is flexible and is willing to try new dishes. Her husband is assistant principal at Forest View High School, and they have two daughters, Pam, 14, and Perri Ann, 7.

CORKY is vice president of Chapter ER of PEO, is active in PTA, belongs to the Faculty Wives group at Forest View and is a member of the First Presbyterian Church. She also enjoys sewing for herself and the girls.

The Patbergs lived in Rolling Meadows for seven years, then moved to Arlington Heights three years ago. They live at 602 S. Mitchell Ave.

FILLED MELON

1 cantaloupe
1 package strawberry Jell-O
1 1/2 cups hot water

Fruit of your choice for garnish

Peel cantaloupe and cut a hole about the size of a quarter in the top. Using an iced tea spoon, dig out seeds and rinse out cavity with water. Let drain.

Dissolve Jell-O in hot water. Pour into cantaloupe to the top. Set in a cup to hold the cantaloupe upright, and place in refrigerator to set. After it is set, cut in four wedges.

Place wedges on endive or other greens on salad plates. Garnish with slices of banana, seedless grapes on the stem, strawberries, melon balls, blueberries or any fruit in season. Serves 4.

(If 6 are to be served, cut the cantaloupe in rounds.)

MEDLEY OF VEGETABLES

1 1/2 cups sliced onions
2 cups celery, cut in strips
3 inches by 1/2-inch
1 1/2 cups carrots, cut in strips
3 inches by 1/2-inch
2 cups cut canned green beans
2 cups canned tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons Minute Tapioca
Few grains pepper
1/2 cup margarine
Few strips green pepper (optional)

Steam onions, celery and carrots about 10 minutes. These should be nearing the tender stage when removed from steam.

Place with other vegetables and remaining ingredients in a well-buttered casserole. Cover tightly; bake at 375 degrees until all vegetables are tender, about 45 minutes to one hour. Do not overcook or vegetables will become mushy. Serves 6 to 10.

CORN CASSEROLE

3 cups dry fine noodles
3 eggs
2 regular size cans cream style corn
1/4 cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons grated onion
1/4 cup shredded cheddar cheese
Buttered bread crumbs
Cook noodles in boiling salted water. Drain well.

Beat eggs. Mix with the noodles, corn, butter, onion and cheese. Turn into a casserole. Top with buttered bread crumbs.

Bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Serves 8 to 10.

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

Mature Women Seek Stargazers

about marital difficulties, problems with children, or advice about careers and health.

Numerologist Perry Robinson says that most of his clients are women over 40. "Most of them are interested in love. Many of them are divorced. They want to know if they will get married again."

On the other hand, the mature women who seek the services of Phyllis Woodbury are less interested in romance than a weekly paycheck. "Mature women are asking one question of me: 'What can I do now that I have raised my family?'"

MRS. WOODBURY practices astrology, numerology, graphology, phrenology and palmistry. She encourages women in their career quest. "After analyzing their names and handwriting I say if they want to go into any specific field it's never too late, because the brain is never asleep. Maybe society is, but never the brain."

Many mature women admit that they consulted stargazers because they were prompted by "curiosity." Zolar, a prosperous New York astrologer, concurs. He estimates that "about 80 per cent of the people interested in astrology these days do it mainly for the fun of it."

Astrologer Elizabeth Martell is convinced, however, that the ego plays a role in horoscope readings: "All people want to hear about themselves, what their wishes are, where they're going and what's in store for them," she said.

THE SEEMING paradox of occult arts — including witchcraft, which is popular with many disaffected, young adults — flourishing in a scientific age has been explained by many authorities. Looking back at history (instead of up at the stars), they point out that occultism has always bloomed in times of confusion and uncertainty.

Whatever the reasons, no one doubts the phenomenal popularity of astrology at present. There are the daily guides and zodiac news published in newspapers and women's magazines; astrology cookbooks and cosmetic guides, and zodiac signs are beginning to embellish everything from writing paper to children's clothing. Across the country, department stores are mounting astrological promotions while astrologers are being hired for charity balls and benefits.

The mounting demand for horoscopes has swollen the ranks of stargazers. At present there are about 10,000 full-time and 175,000 part-time astrologers in the United States. To take up the slack, one company has put a computer to work turning out 10,000 individual readings every two minutes.

FOR THE MORE affluent client, astrologers render personal services for an annual retainer. This service includes the right to wake up the astrologer in the middle of the night for help or predictions. One actor called his astrologer, Carroll Righter, in the middle of the night, from Hong Kong, to find out when his twisted ankle would heal. Righter is the best-known and most successful astrologer in this country.

Health is also a question on the minds of women who consult the practitioners of these ancient arts. One woman of 50 consulted a palmist to ask about her lifetime. "I wasn't feeling too good. She didn't say anything about my health but told me to see a gynecologist."

Women who do not believe in Shakespeare's words that "the fault... lies not in our stars but in ourselves..." and consult an astrologer must be prepared to furnish not only the time but date of birth. As astrologer Elizabeth Martell points out: "Astrologers are really the only ones who know a woman's age."

Harper Offering Fashion Design Class This Fall

Classes in fashion design will start next September on the new campus of Harper Junior College. The two-year program is open to both men and women.

For the fall 1969 term, classes will be held during the daytime only, but plans are currently under way to have both evening and summer school classes within the next year.

Fashion designing for couture, boutiques, the theater, movies and TV is a creative, challenging profession that is currently in great demand, according to Mrs. Elizabeth Gialdini, coordinator of Harper's fashion design program.

Facilities at the college will include fashion-laboratory classrooms which simulate the professional atmosphere found in the fashion industry. Industrial sewing machines, dress forms and related equipment will be used extensively in the laboratory learning experience, said Mrs. Gialdini.

Harper's curriculum will provide experience in fashion design and draping, industrial flat pattern making, professional tailoring, techniques of fashion illustrating and the application of basic fashion design principles.

An apprenticeship work program is being planned in conjunction with the fourth semester of studies. In this program, students will receive on-the-job training in various Chicago fashion firms to supplement and complement their college instruction.

An associate in applied science (A.A.S.) degree will be awarded to students upon successful completion of the two-year program.

Mrs. Gialdini's experience in the fashion field includes buyer and fashion coordinator for I. Magnin & Co., San Francisco; sportswear designer for Junior House in Milwaukee; instructor in fashion illustration at the Layton School of Art, Milwaukee; and assistant buyer for Henry Harris, Cincinnati. She has also done free lance design and illustration in the Midwest as well as on the West Coast.

She received her master of fine arts degree this spring from The School of the Art Institute, Chicago, and earlier received her bachelor of science degree in design at the University of Cincinnati.

Further information may be had by calling the Harper Admissions Office, 437-7000, or writing to the Fashion Design Program, Harper College, Alsopville and Roselle roads, Palatine 60067.

Mostly for Men

by CHARLES E. FLYNN

If you want something different in a steak — taste-wise, that is — I think you'll like this version of the rib eye which has an unusual combination of flavors.

It's best done in a large skillet but can be prepared as easily indoors or outdoors. Assuming you'll be preparing for four people, first purchase four rib eye steaks of one-half inch in thickness.

Allow steaks to come to room temperature. Sprinkle one side with seasoned pepper and 1/8 teaspoon of dry mustard. Pound into the meat with a mallet. Turn steaks and repeat.

MELT 4 tablespoons of butter margarine in the skillet and get the fat piping hot but don't allow it to burn. Brown steaks 2 minutes on each side and reserve on a heated platter.

In the skillet where steaks have browned, pour in 3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice, 2 teaspoons of fresh snipped chives, and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Bring mixture to a boil and pour over the meat.

Salt steaks to taste, or allow guests to do so. I don't like to salt steak before cooking because it causes juices to flow from the meat. Garnish with sautéed fresh mushrooms cap and you have, indeed, a tasty serving of steak.

AS AN accompaniment, especially if fresh corn is available, prepare this zesty version. Cut kernels from ears of corn to make 2 cups. You can, of course, use canned whole kernel or frozen corn.

In a skillet heat 2 tablespoons of fresh bacon fat. Add the corn, a dash of garlic salt, and the drained and chopped contents of a small can (3-ounce) of Mexican green chilies.

Simmer the corn and chilies for 15 to 20 minutes until corn is tender. If necessary, add water. Salt to taste but don't add pepper since the chilies will give you all the "bite" needed.

Serve piping hot to four people.

Medinah Women Ready Breakfast

The Medinah Woman's Club is getting the griddles greased for its annual garden breakfast Saturday, July 19, from 8 a.m. to noon.

The community eat-in, open to all families in the area, will be held in the garden of the DaWayne Miller home, 6N311 Circle Drive, Medinah.

Mrs. James Falcione, Mrs. James Miceli, and Mrs. Joseph Mann, members of the planning committee, are fattening the menu of bacon and eggs with homemade coffee cakes, watermelons, cantaloupes, grapes, and cherries.

Ticket information for the breakfast is available from Mrs. Jay Laudicina at 694-5435.

Auction Benefits Junior's Charities

An unusual service project made possible by Illinois Bell Telephone Co. will add to the philanthropic coffers of Mount Prospect Junior Woman's Club.

At an auction of used vehicles and equipment held June 22 at the Western Electric Co. plant in West Chicago, members of the Mount Prospect Club acted as hostesses, selling soft drinks, coffee, hot dogs, potato chips, doughnuts and other refreshments. Profits from the charitable venture will be used for the philanthropy projects of the Juniors.

The club's car caravan to West Chicago was led by Mrs. Jack Piper, newly elected president, and her husband. Helpers included Mrs. Robert Lerch, Mrs. Richard Berkshire, Mrs. Keith Vernon, Mrs. Gilbert Spender, Mrs. Burney Wilken, Mrs. John Thebaud, Mrs. Walter Sietekski, Mrs. Richard Pingel, Mrs. Donald Demski and Mrs. John Diserio.

Newcomer Luncheon

The Associate Newcomers Club of Arlington Heights will hold its monthly luncheon at Old Orchard Country Club today (Wednesday) at 1 p.m.

Mrs. William McAuliffe, 437-0220, and Mrs. Paul Griffin, 358-1306, are in charge of reservations.

Rosy Romances in Bloom

Susan Hilliger

Sharon Janowiak

Gail Lemmon

Mrs. Gwendolyn M. Hilliger, 4N466 John St., Bensenville, is announcing the engagement of her daughter, Susan Carol, to Jack M. Fagan, son of the Robert M. Fagans of La Grange.

The wedding is planned for August. Miss Hilliger is a graduate of Fenton High School and Niles Township School of Practical Nursing. Mr. Fagan is a graduate of Lyons Township High School.

Miss Sharon J. Janowiak's engagement to John M. Bails Jr. of Charleston, Ill., is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Janowiak, 128 Chewink Court, Palatine. No wedding date has yet been set.

Mr. Bails is the son of Mrs. Lola Bails of Charleston and the late Harold Bails. He is a '66 graduate of Eastern Illinois University and has taught mathematics and science in Danville, Woodstock and Batavia schools. This summer he is completing work on his master's degree in New Mexico Highlands University.

Miss Janowiak is a Palatine High School graduate and last year was graduated from Northern Illinois University. She is a member of Alpha Xi Delta Sorority. Sharon will teach art in Batavia Junior High School in fall.

The engagement of Gail Patricia Lemmon to Richard P. Lloyd Jr., son of the Richard Lloyds of Wilmington, Del., is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Lemmon, 264 Anthony Road, Buffalo Grove.

No wedding date has been set. Miss Lemmon is a junior at Ohio State University, and her fiancé was just graduated from the University of North Carolina. He is affiliated with Delta Upsilon Fraternity.

Patricia Harrison

The engagement of Patricia Louise Harrison to Lt. Robert Dennis Ward, son of the John D. Wards of Rolling Meadows, is announced by Mr. and Mrs. Phil Harrison of Arlington, Va.

Miss Harrison was recently graduated from George Mason College in Virginia, and Lt. Ward is a graduate of Arlington High School and the University of Miami at Coral Gables, Fla. He is now with the U. S. Army photographic agency at the Pentagon.

Their wedding is planned for Oct. 1.

WHAT 40 DOZEN EGGS and 10 pounds of bacon for breakfast? Did you say 60 coffeecakes, half a dozen watermelon, 20 cantaloupes and 20 pounds of grapes and cherries? Mrs.

James Falcione, ways and means chairman, looks slightly stunned by the grocery list as Mrs. James Miceli ticks off the calorie count for the Medinah Woman's Club annual breakfast.

Linda Ducey Weds Marine in Hawaii

A romance that began in Hawaii while Linda Rae Ducey of Mount Prospect was on vacation culminated in her marriage May 13 to Marine Corporal Robert Lawrence Flynn. They were united in Trinity Chapel at Kaneohe Bay, Honolulu. The groom, son of the D. L. Flyns of Atlanta, Ga., is stationed at Kaneohe Bay with the First Marine Brigade.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ducey of 200 N. Wille St., was accompanied to the islands for the wedding festivities by her mother; her grandmother, Mrs. Lewellyn Houghton; and her two attendants, Dorene Tessmer of Arlington Heights was maid of honor, and Bridie Stanton of Mount Prospect was bridesmaid.

The bride's aunt, Miss Lucille Stewart of Olympia, Wash., joined them in Honolulu. A TROPIC theme prevailed for the afternoon ceremony. The bride wore a floor-length gown of white silk organza with a yoke and center panels of chantilly lace. A lace headpiece held her blusher veil, and she carried a triple white carnation lei with white orchids.

Her two attendants wore muumuu in a muted yellow print and carried double yellow plumeria leis. They wore matching plumeria headpieces.

Corporal Flynn was attended by his Marine buddies, Samuel Linton as best man and Tony L. David and Harry H. Marr III as ushers.

AFTER THE ceremony there was a dinner at the Tahitian Lanai of the Waikikian in Waikiki Beach. For the wedding and reception the bride's mother was attired in a floral print gown in shades of pink and yellow with a yellow plumeria lei.

The couple honeymooned at Makaha Shores for a week. They will be feted at a reception at the Ducey home in Mount Prospect upon their return to the states later this month. The newlyweds will live in Atlanta following the groom's tour of duty.

The new Mrs. Flynn is a graduate of Prospect High School, attended Wisconsin State University at Oshkosh and has been working for United Air Lines in Chicago.

Cpl. and Mrs. Robert Flynn

Gardeners' Day Off

Members of Palanok Park Garden Club will take a day off from garden chores tomorrow (Thursday) to visit the Baha'i Temple in Wilmette and have lunch at a restaurant nearby.

Program chairman Mrs. Charles Byrd has announced winners of blue ribbons for their arrangements in the recent inter-club flower show. Mrs. Harry May, Mrs. James Fulford, and Mrs. Alfred Wedow and Mrs. Jack Sylvester, all of Palatine, received the first place awards.

Sesko Sons Share Birthdate

When the Ralph Seskos of Rolling Meadows were expecting their 10th child the middle of June, there was a chance the baby might arrive on their first son's birthday. Dennis Sesko, who became 12 on June 20, said he hoped that didn't happen because he wanted a birthday all to himself.

But Sean Kelly Sesko did arrive on June 20, and Dennis was just as excited and happy as the rest of the family at the turn of events.

Sean was born in Northwest Community Hospital and weighed 7 pounds 12 ounces. He is now at home at 4200 Owl Drive with his parents and brothers and sisters. Besides Dennis, the family includes Brian, 11, Cory Ann, 10, Kevin, 9, Laura, 7, Charlotte, 6, Ralph Jr., 5, Keith, 4, and Larisa, 1.

The children's grandparents are the William Hoffens of Oak Park and the Walter Seskos of Chicago.

NORTHWEST COMMUNITY

Michael Stanley Myers, 9 pound 7 ounce son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Myers, 712 E. Jules, Arlington Heights, was born June 26, a second son for the couple. Two-year-old Gary is Michael's brother, and grandparents of the boys are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Oja of Algonquin and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Myers of Arlington Heights.

LUTHERAN GENERAL

William Ahmet Dalton, first child for the William Daltons, 304 N. Brockway, Palatine, was born June 12 weighing 6 pounds 13 ounces. Grandparents of the baby are the junior E. P. Rielley of Palatine and the Robert N. Daltons of Santa Monica, Calif. Mrs. E. P. Rielley Sr., also of Palatine, is the baby's great-grandmother.

MEMORIAL-DUPAGE

Laura Lynn Halter has joined the family of the Halter family at 5N430 Lloyd Ave., Itasca. She was born to the Halters on June 20 and weighed 6 pounds 11 ounces. Laura Lynn has a brother, Ronald Jr., who is 3. Her grandparents are the Herman Boettchers of Roselle and the Paul Rolows of Harwood Heights.

ST. ALEXIUS

James Richard Siemers weighed 7 pounds 10 ounces at birth June 21. He is the first child of Mr. and Mrs. James Siemers, 1130 Leicester, Elk Grove Village. Grandparents are the Frank Galvans of Park Ridge and Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Siemers of Bensenville.

OTHER HOSPITALS

Courtney Josette Krusinski is a new granddaughter for Elk Grove residents, the Frank Piscitello. Born June 25 in Oak Park Hospital, the baby is the fourth child for the Clarence Krusinskis of Chicago. Scott, 6, Brigitta, 5, and Mark, 2½, are the brother's sister and brothers. Her paternal grandparents are the Clarence Krusinskis of Chicago.

Mark David Richert was born June 27 to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Richert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He weighed 8 pounds 2 ounces and is the grandson of the Martin Niemmanns of Roselle and the Albert Richerts of Fort Lauderdale and Roselle.

Melissa Carol Vickery is a second daughter for the Don E. Vickerys of 519 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling. Born July 1, she weighed 8 pounds 7 ounces. Melissa and Marcia Sue, 3, are granddaughters of the L. E. Huntleys of Arlington Heights and the A. J. Vickerys of Blytheville, Ark.

Roxane Robeck weighed 9 pounds 4 ounces at birth June 24. She evened the score at two daughters and two sons in the Daniel Robeck home at 10 N. Kennicott, Arlington Heights. Her brothers are Danny, 9, and Eddy, 7, and she has a 3-year-old sister, Mary Ann. Grandmothers of the four are Mrs. Ann Abderhalden of the Kennicott address and Mrs. Lillian Robeck of Depue, Ill.

Jonathan David Bedingfield's birth was recorded June 12 for the Donald Bedingfields, 1001 E. Mayfair Road, Arlington Heights. The 7 pound 13½ ounce baby has a brother, Thomas, who is 21 months old. Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Bedingfield of Arlington Heights are the boys' grandparents.

Christine Anne Degnon arrived Father's Day, June 15, for Mr. and Mrs. George K. Degnon, 306 Terrace Place, Buffalo Grove. She weighed 7 pounds 13½ ounces. Christine has a brother, George Michael, 3½, and a sister, Margaret Mary, 2½. Her grandparents are the George H. Degnons and the Magnus Endemanns, all of Jersey

City, N. J.

Steven Paul Powroznyk arrived June 30 for Mr. and Mrs. Taras P. Powroznyk, 232 S. Benton, Palatine. The 8 pound 3 ounce newcomer is a brother for Denise Lynn, 3. Grandparents are Paul Powroznyk of Norridge and Mrs. Dolores Schutz of Des Plaines.

John Leonard DeLeo Jr. is the name of the first son for Mr. and Mrs. John DeLeo, 400 Audubon Road, Streamwood. The baby, born July 1, has two sisters, Cherie, 9, and Toni, 8. Grandparents of the 7 pound 2 ounce boy are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tontlewicz, Fox Lake, and Mrs. Juliette Gibbs, Chicago.

Who Won Annex Decision?

SHADED FROM THE SUN by an old straw hat, Clemens Forke of north Wood Dale Road, drives a team of horses while cultivating a soybean field near Devon Avenue between DuPage and Cook counties. Forke has been a farmer for all of his 69 years and remembers the days when H. C. Paddock use to visit the communities with his horse and buggy while gathering news and selling newspaper subscriptions.

by GEOFFREY MEHL

Negotiations between a developer and a municipality are traditionally a rather delicate affair, with the landowner and builder doing his best to avoid paying for anything, and the Village of Roselle trying not to look too bad.

On that note, a concluding round between Roselle's village board and Pulte Corp. was staged Monday night in the middle of the former's regular board meeting.

When it was finished, and a pre-annexation agreement involving 119 acres between Roselle and unincorporated Medinah was accepted by both sides, it was difficult to tell who won.

IT WAS CLEARLY not the village, but Pulte was tapped for approximately $23,000 in annexation fees.

That money should be recovered by the developer after School Dist. 11 decides if it would like to buy 10 acres from Pulte at what was described as the present cost of the land plus what ever improvements are made in the form of streets, sanitary sewers, sidewalks, storm sewers and water lines.

The school district, it was decided, would pay a pro rate share, which Pulte naturally felt was only fair.

In the pre-annexation agreement, it was decided that the developer would "negotiate" with the district to sell up to 10 acres of property, the location of which would be decided by Pulte Corp.

DURING DISCUSSION, representatives of the company said they would sell the land "at the same cost as acquired" plus the price tag of "improvements."

"We've always dealt fairly with school boards and municipalities," the spokesman said, and the generality appeared to be good enough to settle the deal with the village board.

The land developer was also concerned about who would pay for "oversized" sanitary sewer lines, and while no specifications defining the term entered into in the past two public hearings, it was agreed that the village would pick up 50 per cent of the tab — from the annexation fees.

ROSELLE TRUSTEES had managed to include a line that the village would help pay for oversizing "up to the amount of annexation fees," but the developer thought otherwise and managed to exclude it from the agreement.

As debate and negotiation rambled on, Trustee Anthony Bonavolonta inquired if the matter shouldn't be tabled until a workable arrangement was concluded.

His question was ignored, but later Pres. Robert Frantz noted that negotiations have continued for some time, and it would be nice to conclude it all.

Discussion on the payments issue in the way of storm sewers centered around a cost figure which no one really knew. Pulte officials were doing their best to talk the price down as much as possible, and at last the board agreed on a flat percentage.

THE DEVELOPMENT is planned for R-2 single-family zoning, which would permit 2½ dwelling units per acre, or a total of approximately 250 homes in the $40,000 to $48,000 price range.

Employees Get 5 Per Cent Raise

by RICHARD BARTON

DuPage County employees were given a 5 per cent across-the-board pay increase Tuesday after voting and discussion split the DuPage County Board of Supervisors nearly 50-50.

Several attempts were made to hike the pay raise up to 10 per cent. After that failed, an attempt at passing a 7½ per cent increase was tried, but failed.

The raises will be retroactive to July 1, as promised by county board chairman Paul Ronske two weeks ago when the pay proposal was first brought up for a vote. The matter was referred back to the Wages and Benefits Committee for further study. The increase affects all salaried employees.

Arguments for a larger pay increase included a rumored threat of a mass walk-out of employees unless they were given more money.

"I WILL TELL you plainly unless you (the county board) give better than a 5 per cent across-the-board increase, you will have a mass walkout of dissatisfied employees on your hands," Donald J. Wall, Bloomingdale Township assistant supervisor.

"The forest preserve employees, the sheriff's department and the highway department have received much more in pay raises only recently, as high as 15 per cent."

According to Pat Savaiano, Bloomingdale Township supervisor, the highway

department first asked for a 30 per cent pay increase. He said a compromise of a 15 per cent increase was reached.

John Earl, Downers Grove assistant supervisor and chairman of the wages and benefits committee, said the people in the county's public works department who had similar jobs to those in the highway department would get equal pay. He said the matter of equal job, equal pay between departments was under study.

EARL FIRST introduced the motion for a 5 per cent increase two weeks ago, but had it thrown back at him by the board for study.

Pat Riedy, supervisor from Lisle Township, said the new state income tax of 2½ per cent would eat up most of the meager Earl's motion to read a 10 per cent in 5 per cent raise. He moved to amend the amendment motion lost, 14-13.

Then, proponents of higher pay brought the lack of insurance benefits presently given to county employees as a reason for higher pay.

EARL REPLIED THAT fringe benefits

were to be kept separate from pay considerations. He added that an insurance group was making a study of the employee benefits and that a program will be introduced soon. He also said a 10 per cent increase would put many employees above surrounding industry which couldn't be allowed.

Ask Cheaper Housing

There are 13,221 families in DuPage County with incomes under $5,000 a year. More than half of these have incomes of less than $3,000.

In DuPage County, where rentals begin between $150 and $200 a month, these families are paying well over the 25 per cent estimate for rent and utilities.

Bernard Kleina, west suburban representative of the Metropolitan Leadership Council, and Philip Chinn of the Human Relations Advisory Committee threw these and other statistics out to DuPage County's Board of Supervisors, urging them to take advantage of government programs providing assisted housing for the low-income residents.

"NOT A SINGLE unit of public housing has been constructed anywhere in the county. Not a single unit of below-market interest-rate housing for low or moderate-income families. Not a single unit of housing for the elderly. No rehabilitated housing, no leased housing, no rent supplement. Money is available for all these programs," Chinn told the supervisors.

In addition to the shortage of low-income housing, there are 3,427 occupied dwelling units in the county which should be torn down or extensively repaired, according to Chinn. He obtained his figures from the 1960 census, the latest statistics of this kind available.

Kleina showed pictures of many of the dilapidated and deteriorating houses throughout the county.

Stimulating the development of moderate-income housing is another problem the supervisors should consider, Kleina said.

INDUSTRY HAS been encouraged to develop, but many employees cannot afford the available housing. Beginning salaries for teachers also make it difficult for them to find acceptable housing he said.

John Stenski, chairman of the Advisory Committee said it has gathered information about available programs to develop moderate-income housing. Stenski and appropriate members of the committee offered to meet with the supervisors to discuss these programs.

Westlake Vote?

What happens to Hoffman-Rosner's Westlake development depends entirely on the Bloomingdale Village Board of Trustees since the County Board of Supervisors Tuesday honored the firm's request to withdraw its annexation petition.

Bloomingdale Village Pres. Robert Meyers and Village Engineer Ralph Gross were at the meeting when C. L. James, supervisor from Downer's Grove Township and chairman of the zoning committee moved that the county comply with Hoffman-Rosner's wishes to withdraw its petition to build as an unincorporated area within DuPage County.

Pat Savaiano, Bloomingdale township supervisor, seconded the motion. Bloomingdale officials earlier expressed a desire to sit in on any county deliberations concerning Hoffman-Rosner.

HOFFMAN-ROSNER now has no recourse but to be annexed by Bloomingdale in order to start building.

The firm announced its intention to abandon any county-supervised development June 5 when it submitted a letter withdrawing its petition for planned unit zoning in Bloomingdale Township.

The County Zoning Department said at that time that the petition would still be in effect until the board met and took official action on it.

That's what has happened. Hoffman-Rosner has been negotiating exclusively and seriously with the Village of Bloomingdale since June 9. Concessions and compromises have been made by both parties causing several revisions in the pre-annexation agreement.

The village board of trustees, the village engineer and attorney met as a committee Monday to discuss the final stand on the petition.

The petition is expected to come up for a vote at tonight's village board meeting. Trustees have been quietly noncommittal about their feelings towards the annexation.

Meyers told the Register last week that if the committee had any last minute demands and if the firm met them, the vote would be on Wednesday.

FLYING BLUE ANGELS will perform their close-order drills this weekend at the annual air show held at the DuPage County Airport, on Route 64

near West Chicago. Parachuting acts, antique planes and other displays will also be presented. See story on page 2.
